Secret Buying Of Tear Gas By Companies Told to Senate

Police 'Greased' to Aid Deals, Civil Liberty Committee Hears.

Commissions Paid Postmaster Cited

$17,000 of Chemicals Planted in Shafts, Testimony Shows

By Sidney Olson.

The men who sell tear gas and sickening gas to big business when labor troubles threaten, told the inside story of their profitable, secret operations to the Senate Civil Liberties Committee yesterday.

Under oath they told of police officials being "greased" (their sales lingo for "bribed");

Of plans by great coal companies of Pennsylvania to plant under cover of darkness $17,000 worth of sickening gas in abandoned shafts to drive away coal bootleggers who are cutting into their profits;

Of sales of gas bombs and bomb-throwing equipment to great corporations such as Buick, Chevrolet and Hormel through the use of "dummies," who received the goods and were billed, thus avoiding "talk;"

Of a postmaster, L. D. Carter, of Akron, Ohio, who received commissions from a tear-gas manufacturer for drumming up business for them;

Of newly developed gas-throwing machine guns that can fire 18 gas shells in less than a minute, enough to block off a street one block away; of invisible tear gas; of new-type sickening gas that is "unbearable," "causes violent nausea," and "makes the victim feel as if several men are sitting on his chest and head;"

Of willingness to sell tear gas to "any legitimate business man whose door is open," but a refusal to sell to a labor union;

Tear Gas Demonstration.

Of a demonstration in Pittsburgh of the latest tear-gas equipment, on the occasion of news of the Committee for Industrial Organization's plans to unionize the steel industry, with representatives of Pennsylvania Railroad, Jones & Laughlin Steel Co., Erie Railroad, Westinghouse Electric and Carnegie Steel Co. present.

Of a gas salesman, Herrick Foote, formerly with the Lake Erie Chemical Co., gas manufacturers, who wrote from Connecticut in letters to his then chief, A. S. Ailes, vice president, that "I wish a hell of a strike would get under way," and "I am doing a lot of missionary work in anticipation of a strike," and "I hope the strike develops and matures and will be a damn bad one—we need the money."

Of another Lake Erie company salesman who wrote Ailes from St. Louis that "We're surrounded with local strikes that are all too peaceful to suit me."

Of Ailes' belief that in manufacturing and selling tear and sickening gas to corporations, "I'm not only improving industry but I'm improving society."

"Organized Thievery" Assailed.

Of assertions by Walter Gordon Merritt, counsel for the Anthracite Institute, that "organized thievery" by coal bootleggers costs the hard-coal industry $40,000,000 yearly by destroying the market; and that Gov. George H. Earle, the courts of Pennsylvania, and the sheriffs in the bootleg sections are helpless to stop the bootlegging because "law enforcement and the courts have broken down there."

Of a lieutenant in the Naval Reserves, A. J. Rich, of the Naval Intelligence Service, who acts as a partner in an investigation service conducted by the Lake Erie company's crack gas salesman in San Francisco, Ignatius H. McCarthy.

Of an "army colonel," Joseph J. Johnston, of Akron, Ohio, of the Ohio National Guard Reserves, who co-operates with the Lake Erie company on a commission basis for gas-bomb sales, and trains personnel for factory defense.

Of McCarthy's badge as a "special police officer" with the San Francisco police force, which enabled him to "ride around with the captain" during the waterfront strike of 1934, and to co-operate in training the police to handle the bombs by firing off one himself which exploded in a mob, cutting a striker's face severely.

All of this and a great deal more was brought forth in the relentless grilling questioning of Merritt, Ailes, McCarthy, E. E. MacGuffin,

Pennsy Will Start Fastest N. Y, Run From Washington

The fastest train service ever scheduled between Washington and New York will begin Monday on the Congressional Limited, the Pennsylvania Railroad announced yesterday.

Five minutes will be clipped from the present running time, and the 226 miles will be covered in 215 minutes. Previous running time has been 220 minutes.

There will be the usual six intermediate stops, and the run from Washington to Philadelphia will be made in two hours and eight minutes, and between Philadelphia and Baltimore in one hour and 27 minutes.

Just before the Pennsylvania was electrified between here and New York the running time for the Congressional was four hours and 15 minutes.

Veterans Facing Final Taps With Fortitude Born of Strife

Remnants of Grand Army Await Call to Earthly Rest Cloaked in Aura of Philosophical Indifference of Their 90 Years and More.

By Eugene Warner.

Death and immortality—perpetually fascinating subjects to mankind—always are in the forefront of the minds of the Grand Army of the Republic, a canvass of the old soldiers in the lobby of the Mayflower Hotel revealed yesterday.

The men who have so few years to live await death with a shrug, a proverb, or a noncommittal smile. None fear death. Ninety years and more have given them a philosophical indifference.

Perhaps better expressed than the feelings of some of his comrades were the words of 90-year-old J. L. Hussey, of San Francisco, a white-bearded little man who went to war at 14. He said:

"I don't believe in any heaven or hell or soul or immortality. I can't make myself believe after years of thinking about it that God Almighty has a devil around to tempt us and then punishes us when we yield.

"The train shook me up pretty bad on the long ride here from California. My three nieces who came with me thought I was going to die on their hands. I did feel pretty bad. They got doctors and nurses, but I wasn't afraid. I'll go soon, that's certain, but when the time comes I'm ready.

"When we seek God with a whole heart, we will find Him. Most people pray for the good that God can do them. That's why I gave up the church. I am seeking God in my own way, and He will soon redeem me when He is ready."

A. O. Williams, 89, of Toledo, a hearty old warrior, said:

"I'm just a good, honest old buzzard. I think there's an overruling power, but I'm not a church member. I look for God in my own way. A year ago I drove 125 miles for a chicken dinner and on the way back a car ran into our machine and tipped us over. I thought when she hit us, 'Well, my time has come and I don't give a hang. The Lord has come to take me.'

U.S. Grand Jury Indicts Official In Crop Slavery

Arkansan Is Cited After County Venire Denies Farm Peonage.

By the Associated Press.

Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 24.—A Federal grand jury investigating reports of peonage in the east Arkansas cotton belt indicted City Marshal Paul D. Peacher, of Earle, Ark., on a charge of violating the anti-slavery laws today a few hours after a Crittenden County grand jury denied such conditions exist.

United States District Attorney Fred Isgrig said the indictment charges specifically "aiding and abetting in holding a man in slavery." Peacher is a former deputy sheriff of Crittenden County.

Richard P. Shanahan, attorney for the criminal division of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said "the indictment charged Peacher with falsely charging eight Negroes with vagrancy and bringing them before Mayor Mitchell in justice court at Earle, where they were illegally convicted and sentenced to work on Peacher's farm for his own use and benefit."

The Federal grand jurors, who had been in session all day examining witnesses, were discharged after filing the indictment.

Even as the Federal body conducted its inquiry, the Crittendon County grand jury at Marion, in the heart of the region under study, said it already had investigated charges of forced labor and had "not found any evidence of violations of the law in any instance."

It offered to co-operate in the Federal inquiry.

Nine colored field hands were among those called before the Fed-

G.A.R. Opposes Lee Memorial At Arlington

70th Encampment Ended; Pittsburgher Elected Commander.

A proposal to erect a memorial statue to Gen. Robert E. Lee in Arlington National Cemetery was unanimously and emphatically voted down yesterday at the final session of the seventieth encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Arlington was the home of the Confederate commander in chief, but was seized by the Federal Government after the outbreak of the War Between the States. Later the Government bought it from Custis Lee, his son.

The Grand Army veterans, in private conversation, had many words of praise for Gen. Lee, but in passing on the resolution for a memorial at Arlington they insisted that "the rebel leader should not be honored on the hallowed ground."

A resolution protesting against issuance of a United States postage stamp in the memory of Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson was adopted by the Auxiliary to Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War.

The G. A. R. encampment adjourned without taking action on an invitation from Gov. Earle of Pennsylvania, to attend a Blue and Gray reunion at Gettysburg in 1938, the seventy-fifth anniversary of the bloody battle there.

The encampment here was expected to be the last, but encouraged by the fact that no old soldier became ill, the G. A. R. yesterday, after a long debate, voted to convene at least once more.

British Order Troops Out In Shanghai

U. S. Marines Also Stand By as Japanese Extend Martial Area.

City Calm as Search Is Pressed for Killer of Nippon Sailor.

Shanghai, (Friday), Sept. 25.—British troops were called out today and United States Marines were ordered to stand by in their barracks as Japanese armed forces extended the areas under their control in the International Settlement of Shanghai and adjacent areas in the Chinese city.

The British troops prepared to patrol the Garden Bridge across Shoochow Creek, where that stream flows into the Whangpoo River, which form's Shanghai's famous waterfront. The bridge is one of the busiest in the city and connects the Japanese and British defense areas.

Meanwhile, Chinese authorities declared martial law in all areas of the Chinese city.

Volunteers Stand By.

The settlement's volunteer corps, including the American troop, also received orders to stand by for immediate duty if needed, "owing to the unusual tension now existing."

Shanghai generally was quiet, however, and both Japanese and Chinese authorities, with the co-operation of detectives of the International Settlement and the French concession, continued to search for a Chinese gunman who killed Asamitsu Taminato, Japanese bluejacket, in the Japanese district of the concession Wednesday night, and wounded two other Japanese sailors.

Scores of suspects were held, but police and the military agreed there was no indication they had found the murderer, who, according to an eyewitness, stepped behind Taminato and his comrades while they were walking in a street and fired on them with a pistol.

"Action Before Words."

Shanghai (Friday), Sept. 25.—Japanese residents of Shanghai, fearful of more trouble from Chinese partisans, today urged their government to send additional armed forces to "protect Japanese lives and property."

The Japanese-Chinese situation in Shanghai today was somewhat less acute, but the Japanese by-word in Shanghai was defined by a Tokyo naval attache:

"Action before words!"

Chiang May Take Hand.

Tokyo, Sept. 24.—The Japanese government today considered insisting that Chiang Kai-shek, military dictator of China, himself settle the Sino-Japanese incidents which caused Japanese martial law over a large area of Shanghai's International Settlement.

Officially, the advisers of Emperor Hirohito placed the situation in the hands of Shigeru Kawago, Japanese Ambassador to China. If Kawagoe should fail to obtain satisfactory settlements, it was understood, the Japanese will demand that Chiang Kai-shek take direct control of his government's negotiations.

(In Nanking, Kawagoe was said to be continuing negotiation efforts. Emissaries of the Chinese government were understood to have flown to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek at Canton, seeking his return to Nanking.)

Further Invasion Foreseen.

London, Sept. 24.—British observers tonight believed Japan again was preparing to take advantage of the disturbed international situation in Europe to extend her domination of eastern Asia.

They pointed out that European complications nearly always had been followed by Japanese advances in Asia, and saw these disturbances in the Occident as furnishing Japan assurance there

Flood Freed By Loyalists Halts Rebels

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Madrid, Sept. 24.—A ten-foot wall of water, released from Alberche Dam by government forces, roared down on a column of rebels advancing on Madrid and swept many of them to their deaths, it was reported late tonight.

The flood, sweeping down from the lifted dam gates near San Martin de Valdeiglesias, 36 miles west of the capital, inundated a rebel camp to a depth of 10 feet.

The government resorted to the desperate measure in an attempt to repel one section of the rebels' drive on the capital.

Most of the insurgents' ammunition was reported ruined, and many of their pack mules were said to have been drowned.

The rebels who escaped were understood to have fled to higher ground to the south. They were reported retreating in disorder.

Government officers said they had flooded the area of San Martin de Valdeiglesias, where rebel armies planned to join, by releasing 10,000,000 cubic yards of water from Alberche Dam.

Virtually all able-bodied men between the ages of 18 and 45 were drafted to the defense, meanwhile, as the government poured column after column of reinforcements to block the advance of the rebels toward Toledo.

Militiamen Are Called.

The official radio ordered all militiamen in Madrid to report to barracks and their drivers to go to garages to await orders.

Fresh detachments were recruited from among the unemployed and refugees from other war zones. They were put through hasty drills to be rushed to the southwestern front. Trucks loaded with others filled the highways to the south.

Evidently well aware of the urgency of stopping the insurgent attack on Toledo, the government launched a counteroffensive from Santa Cruz del Retamar, whicht was reported to have swept the Moors back through Quismondo to Maqueda.

If the government succeeds in taking Maqueda it hoped to cut off the rebels at Torrijos and put them between two fires.

Attack From Rear.

Meanwhile, Gen. Julio Mangada's forces attempted to drive west on the Talavera-Madrid highway behind the rebels and attack them from the rear.

The government strategy was directed at two objectives:

1. It sought to drive a wedge between the main column of insurgents on the road between Maqueda and Madrid and a second column which turned off at that junction to strike south at Toledo, through Torrijos.

2. It sought to "box in" the combined Fascist-rebel armies on four sides—with resistance at Toledo in the south, with Gen. Mangada's attack from the west, with the drive on Maqueda from the east, and with the released torrents from the north.

Talavera de la Reina, rebel headquarters, is at the confluence of the Alberche and Tagus rivers. The government apparently hoped the flood would spread through the valleys and lowlands to Toledo and swamp the insurgents' line of advance.

Alcazar Holds Out.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Toledo, Spain, Sept. 24.—Rebel defenders of the Alcazar fortress tonight fought desperately to hold out until their advancing comrades could rescue them.

Whether they knew that four columns of their comrades tonight were only 13 miles away was not apparent, but doggedly they fought on, repulsing attack after attack by the government militia.

The attackers tossed dynamite grenades today in their frantic efforts to kill the last male defenders of the Alcazar so that they might go to the front outside the city to help beat off the rebel advance.

President Will See First Series Game At Yankee Stadium

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 24.—President Roosevelt will attend the first World Series game in Yankee Stadium a week from tomorrow, officials of the club announced today. The series opens Wednesday in the Polo Grounds, home of the Giants.

Yankee officials also announced that all box seats available in the American League park have been sold, but that many reserved seats are available.

As soon as the Giants clinched the pennant with a rousing 2-1 victory over the Braves, the New York National League officials immediately started filling orders for tickets which have been swamping the office all week.

Pacific Coast Trip Now Unlikely, Aids Declare After 27 See the Executive at Hyde Park; Buffalo Talk Urged to Offset Landon.

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 24.—Plans for a series of short Presidential campaign trips that will center the Democratic drive in New England, the Middle West and the Rocky Mountain areas were discussed today by President Roosevelt and 27 of his chief political lieutenants.

Several conferees said dates had not been selected, but that they had gathered the impression the President will make more than half a dozen major addresses.

Cities mentioned included Omaha, Denver, Chicago, Detroit, New York and perhaps Worcester or Springfield, Mass.

There was a further possibility that the President will make speaking dates for Cincinnati, Cleveland, Buffalo, Albany, Rochester and Boston.

Although Mr. Roosevelt has had under consideration a trip to the West Coast, chances for such a swing were described today as remote. Some of his political advisers said none of the jaunts would take more than five days for the round trip.

Chairman James A. Farley of the Democratic National Committee, spokesman for the array of some of the party's best political talent, told reporters:

"We had a general discussion of the entire political situation and the President was immensely pleased with the reports submitted by those who were present.

"We discussed his future activities and in a general way he presented his ideas as to the condition of the campaign in recent weeks."

He added that any definite announcement as to the President's plans for speaking trips will be made later by Mr. Roosevelt, but that he did not know whether one might be expected in advance of an address scheduled next Tuesday at Syracuse, N. Y., before the State Democratic convention.

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, majority floor leader of the Senate, said the conference "disclosed a general confidence, but a realization of the wisdom of fighting."

In addition to the President's own plans to head the vital October drive for his re-election, conferees hinted party finances were touched on.

There were intimations the first stumping trip would take the Chief Executive to Denver, with an Omaha stop on the way out or back.

Later, they expected him to visit Chicago and Detroit and perhaps Cleveland and Cincinnati on another tour. The same trip, they indicated, might bring him through Rochester and Albany.

Janitor Admits Killing Woman On 16th Street

Colored Man, 27, Confesses Slaying Mrs. Goodwin; Robbery Was Motive.

Police announced early this morning that a colored man, a former janitor, had confessed to the murder of Mrs. Florence D. Goodwin, Sixteenth street rooming house manager.

He is Norman Wesley Robinson, 27, of the 1400 block Ninth street northwest, who has a lengthy record as a thief.

Robinson was arrested four days ago after police learned he had worked as a janitor in Mrs. Goodwin's rooming house in the summer while the regular janitor was ill.

Police quoted Robinson as saying he went to the rooming house early in the morning a week ago today to rob Mrs. Goodwin, and prepared to kill her if necessary. He left her dead, the police quoted him as saying, but went away empty-handed.

They said the colored man told them he killed Mrs. Goodwin between 5:30 and 6 a. m.

He re-enacted the crime from beginning to end, the police said, showing them the route he took after leaving his Ninth street home, what he did in the Goodwin rooming house, and how he left after the killing.

Capt. Ira Keck, assistant chief of detectives, announced Robinson's confession a few minutes after midnight.

Robinson told them, Keck said, that he had a key to the Goodwin house since the time he worked there. With this, Keck quoted him as saying, he entered by a back door, walked into the cellar, picked up a furnace shaker and made his way to Mrs. Goodwin's room.

Robinson, Keck said, told them he struck Mrs. Goodwin over the head with the shaker, and when she moaned hit her again. After

Danger in Gold Influx Denied By Morgenthau

Financial Structure Is Not Imperiled, He Replies to Vandenberg.

By Robert C. Albright.

A charge that the United States financial and price structures are jeopardized by mounting foreign holdings of domestic securities, stimulated by American accumulations of gold at revaluation prices, yesterday drew a swift rebuttal from the United States Treasury.

Allegations that New Deal devaluation of the dollar has brought a vast influx of gold, imperiling the domestic situation, were contained in a list of questions sent Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan.

"The stimulation which may be said to have been given to the transfer of American securities into the hands of foreign holders is the stimulation that arises from the fact that business conditions have improved in the United States during the past three years," Morgenthau replied.

"If our business recovery had not taken place, and if confidence in our future progress did not exist, doubtless foreigners would have invested less of their capital in our securities."

Morgenthau said he saw "no cause for alarm" in the total of $4,151,000,000 in foreign holdings of domestic stocks and bonds at the close of last year, "though, naturally, in the determination of our credit policy constant and careful attention is given to them."

Listing eight specific questions on the New Deal's gold policy, Vandenberg had raised the possibility of sudden withdrawal of foreign investments from this country, such as occurred five years ago.

"The peril to our own domestic situation in such a contemplation," Vandenberg wrote, "could seem to be quite obvious because if we have anything like $4,000,000,000 on in-

Al Smith to Delay Broadcast Until After Roosevelt Address

By the United Press.

New York, Sept. 24.—Alfred E. Smith, New Deal opponent, tonight rearranged the time of a radio speech he will make here October 1 so he would not be on the air at the same time President Roosevelt speaks from Pittsburgh.

In a telegram to the President, Smith said he took that action "in deference to the high office of President which you hold."

It was almost the only friendly gesture that has passed between the two men, who once were close political and personal friends, since Smith broke with the New Deal.

The telegram, made public, read:

"Hon. Franklin D. Roosevelt,
"The White House,
"Washington, D. C.

"On September 11 negotiations were opened with the National Broadcasting Co. for an hour's radio time to be used by me between 9 and 10 p. m. when I am to speak at Carnegie Hall in New York City. Shortly thereafter the time was definitely reserved over the blue network of the National Broadcasting Co.

"Since then announcement has been made of your intention to make a political speech at Pittsburgh on October 1, between 9 and 9:30 o'clock, Eastern standard time. Subsequent to the announcement of my speech, the Democratic National Committee, I am informed, has engaged all radio time on the Columbia and National Broadcasting Systems except that reserved for me.

"In deference to the high office of President which you hold, I do not desire to interfere with you having a Nation-wide audience. Therefore I have canceled that portion of my contracted period which would conflict w[illegible] our half hour and shall not begin my radio address until 9:30 p. m., when you have finished.

"ALFRED E. SMITH."

Smith's office said he would speak for an hour—between 9:30 and 10:30 p. m.—and that all of his speech would be broadcast.

11,000 in Minneapolis Cheer His Assault on Trade Treaties.

'Selective' Accords Backed by Nominee

A Staff Correspondent.

Municipal Auditorium, Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 24.—Charging the Roosevelt Administration "has sold the American farmer down the river," Gov. Alf M. Landon tonight continued his drive for the rural vote with an attack upon the Roosevelt-Hull reciprocal trade agreements.

The Republican Presidential candidate, in his second major farm speech, declared markets have been taken away from farmers and the treaties have resulted in lower prices. He charged the trade agreement program had delayed recovery in the rural areas.

Landon spoke before 11,000 persons in the Municipal Auditorium and to several thousand others who stood outside and listened to his voice from loud speakers. In many respects, the meeting, in the State controlled by the Farmer-Labor Party and claimed by the Democrats in the Presidential election, was as enthusiastic as any that the Kansas Governor has addressed.

He was cheered repeatedly, particularly when he said, "We can be a good neighbor without throwing away the latchkey to our door."

Sponsored by Christianson.

As the Governor was introduced by Representative Theodore Christianson, Republican candidate for Governor, thousands of yellow cards bearing the printed word "Landon" floated down from the ceiling of the auditorium, which is a slightly smaller replica of the Cleveland Auditorium in which Landon was nominated last June.

Christianson brought laughs and cheers from the crowd when he said the man he was about to introduce, was "no radio crooner" and that "he is not a word juggler but he does very well when it comes to balancing a budget."

The auditorium was filled an hour before the candidate began speaking and the doors were closed. The crowd occupied its time by singing and being introduced to various Republican candidates for public office. Among the notables on the stage was Frank B. Kellogg, former Sercetary of State and father of the Treaty of Paris. He was given loud applause.

Landon came to Minneapolis to find a situation somewhat tense because of labor difficulties involving strikes of cereal mill workers and truck drivers. Some of the Minnesota National Guard was mobilized in readiness should strike trouble result. There was no parade, as in most cities, and the Governor was driven rapidly from the station to his hotel protected by a heavy police escort. He also made rapid trips to and from the auditorium. No incident developed and the only sign of a hostile demonstration came from a small group outside the hotel who booed and shouted "Roosevelt" as the Governor left for the auditorium. The police ignored them.

Toward the end of the talk, when he charged trade agreements are imposed upon the public and that "this is not representative government," the audience repeatedly burst into applause. Landon's delivery showed a distinct improvement. He was putting over his points with a punch and the audience warmed to him.

Gov. Landon was given an extremely cool reception on his entrance into Minnesota this afternoon. At Albert Lea, his first stop, a crowd of about 1,000 persons heard him in silence and watched him depart practically without a sound of applause. This reception contrasted sharply with the warm greetings extended by train crowds at stops in Iowa.

The Kansas Governor struck right and left at the Roosevelt Administration in his speech here. At Des Moines Tuesday night he outlined his farm program. His speech tonight was a sequel to the Des Moines address, but it was devoted more to criticism than to promises. Upon the two speeches the candidate rests his case with the farmers.

If You Talk About Food, Clothing, Put Yourself In Lowest Mental Group, Says G. W. Professor

By Hope Ridings Miller.

Are you a hand-to-hand thinker? If you ponder at all, is it generally about how to dress, what to eat and when to sleep? Are your creative thoughts as rare as quintuplets?

Dr. Mitchell Dreese, head of the psychology department at George Washington University, believes the average man and woman will have to answer "yes" to all these questions, "because it's human nature to settle down into a routine of practical decisions and to do as little actual thinking as possible," he said yesterday.

While he is confident there is no fundamental difference between a woman's mind and a man's, he believes women, as a rule, do less "creative thinking" than men. "The reason is obvious," he said. "The average woman is a housewife, spending a good deal of her time looking after the needs of her home and family. Unless she's an unusual woman, she can't devote her thoughts to abstract things while she has to decide when to darn baby's socks and what to cook for dinner."

If as a rule men have more creative ideas than women—though Dr. Dreese hesitated to say they do—he believes it is because "the average man is exposed to more challenging ideas and stimulating contacts in the business world than his wife generally finds in her daily round of domestic duties.

"But when you come right down to it, neither men nor women do any more thinking than they have to," he said. "That is evidenced by what they talk about." He pointed out that conversationalists can be divided into three classes:

1. Those who talk about things—what they are going to wear, what they eat and would like to eat. ("This is the lowest mental group.")

2. Those who talk about people. ("This is the biggest group and includes as many men as women.")

3. Those who talk about ideas. ("If there are more men than women in this, the highest mental group, it is not because men are more intelligent, but are generally luckier in having stimulating contacts.")

As a bit of advice to women who want to improve their thinking and crowd the men out of "Class 3," Dr. Dreese suggested "reading good books and associating with interesting people will help improve the quality of anyone's mental processes."

Fannie Hurst is another authority who recently expressed her opinion about persons—women particularly—who do too little honest-to-goodness thinking. Recently in New York she pointed out, "It is estimated that the average housewife walks 3,000 miles a year in her home; and what she thinks about while walking those 3,000 miles is of immense importance in framing life's pattern for herself and her family. I believe a woman should subordinate such problems as 'Shall the potatoes be boiled or baked?' and 'Shall Johnnie's new overcoat be black or brown?' to thinking beyond creature needs and applying her ideas to something besides practical decisions."

Achieving fame through her practice of applying her "spare moments" to constructive thought, Miss Hurst recently proved anew the value of making every thought do double duty. A spectator at the Saratoga tracks, she put the finishing touches on her latest manuscript between the horse races.

Experts Study Plans to Revise Revenue Laws

Work Is Preliminary to Next Session of the Congress.

Proposed important revisions of both the revenue acts of 1934 and 1935 are being studied by experts of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, preliminary to action at the next session of Congress, it was learned last night.

The studies are being directed by L. H. Parker, Congressional tax adviser, under instruction from the Senate Finance Committee and the House Ways and Means Committee. They were undertaken shortly after a recent White House tax discussion between the President, Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, and Representative Robert L. Doughton, of North Carolina, chairmen, respectively, of the two committees.

Parker already has submitted a series of questions on Treasury experience with the two laws to Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., the nature of which was undisclosed, it was learned.

Although the President revealed following the recent White House tax conference that tax revision will be undertaken, he did not specify which laws were under scrutiny. Substantial assurances were given at that time that no increase in taxes is contemplated.

To Submit Report.

Parker will submit a report on his findings to informal meetings of the Senate Finance Committee and the House Ways and Means Committee to be called before Congress returns, and no official information on the final direction of the revision will be made public in advance, it was said. Treasury officials declined to comment on the question submitted them.

It is understood that no complete overhauling of the income tax law is contemplated at this time, but that revisions will be sought based on Treasury experience with the laws to date, with an attempt to iron out inequities and discrepancies which have developed, and to adjust those items which have failed to produce.

Revision of nuisance tax levies also will be attempted. There has been increasing pressure on Congress for repeal of some of the more objectionable nuisance taxes, but Treasury needs to date have forestalled any substantial moves in this direction.

Although some check will be made on the 1936 tax law, and the impending tax on undistributable corporate profits, lack of actual experience with the law, which does not become fully operative until next year, offer the tax experts little to work with. There is certain to be pressure by industrial corporations, hard hit by its terms, for its repeal.

Returns Awaited.

The so-called "tax the wealthy" income tax law of 1935, now being studied by the experts, will not fully reflect its impact and productivity until returns are in for the present calendar year. The high surtax rates it imposed, and its graded corporation levies cannot translate their effects in terms of revenue until the next income tax receipts are collected. This law stepped up to 31 per cent the surtaxes on incomes of between $50,000 and $56,000, graduating them up to 75 per cent on incomes of over $5,000,000. Doubts were expressed at the time that substantial revenue would result.

The 1934 revenue law offers a better Treasury experience basis, and is being examined closely in the revision survey. This law, estimated at the time to yield $417,000,000, actually reduced Federal income taxes paid by the comparatively small wage earner, while increasing taxes due from those whose incomes were in the higher brackets, or who derived the major part of their incomes from dividends.

Committee experts also are keeping in mind the fact that the first Federal pay roll tax on employers to finance the pension phase of the social security act becomes effective next January.

King's Pipers Wail 'St. Louis Blues' For Americans

By the United Press.

Balmoral Castle, Scotland, Sept. 24.—King Edward VIII ordered the nine pipers at Balmoral Castle to play "The St. Louis Blues" today to entertain Mrs. Ernest Simpson and his other guests on his vacation in Scotland. They were forced to spend most of the day indoors because of rain and high winds.

The King is instructing the pipers in the mysterious syncopation. When Edward, as a student, attended Oxford he frequently played the pipes to the dismay of his classmates.

Mrs. Simpson, former Baltimore (Md.) resident, now married to a London broker, and Mr. and Mrs. Herman L. Rogers arrived from London yesterday to be the King's guests.

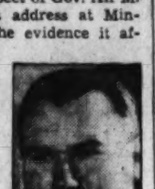
Landon Tariff Stand Different From That G. O. P. Has Held Since World War.

By Franklyn Waltman

MORE significant than any other aspect of Gov. Alf M. Landon's address at Minneapolis was the evidence it afforded of the orientation in thinking on this question which the leaders of the Republican Party have undergone during the bitterness of the depression. For that reason this speech deserves at least a footnote in the future history books.



WALTMAN.

The Republican tariff plank was such a jumble of words, sham and pretense in an effort to be all things to all men that it was necessary to wait until Gov. Landon had expressed himself on the subject to be sure of where the Republican Party now stands. This came at Minneapolis; but even before that, in his Des Moines farm speech, the Kansan indicated that he had no faith in the old Republican shibboleth that all the farmer needed to cure his woes were tariff walls and higher tariff walls.

Gov. Landon now makes it clear that he is not opposed to the principle of reciprocity in dealing with tariff rates—indeed, he terms such agreements, under certain conditions, "sound doctrine." He further asserted that he is "opposed to a policy of isolation." He casts aside the arguments of economic nationalism and recognizes that America cannot be prosperous unless the world is prosperous; that "healthy international trade is essential to world prosperity," and that the latter is "good insurance against war."

It is true that immediately after those declarations, Gov. Landon has a few kind words to say for tariff protection. He opposes scrapping economic defenses and giving away the latch-key to the national door—but the low tariff advocates oppose that as much as he does. They object to subsidizing with unduly exorbitant—and thus unfair—tariff rates inefficient industries and enterprises. Gov Landon indicated an understanding of that viewpoint when he asserted that "the great enemy of world trade today is not the fair protection of efficient American producers and laborers" but "the war-inspired doctrine of isolation and its resulting demands for self-sufficiency."

Gov. Landon's indorsement of the reciprocity idea in dealing with tariffs is not novel for the standard bearer of the Republican Party. The idea did not originate with the New Deal's brain trust — indeed, that particular group has been hostile to the idea. William McKinley 40 years ago preached and sought to practice the doctrine of reciprocity, and President Taft in 1911 negotiated a reciprocity treaty with Canada, which the latter, however, failed to ratify.

But Gov. Landon's stand is materially different to the ideology of his party on the tariff question since the end of the World War. One of President Harding's first actions was to propose tariff increases on agricultural products to help the farmer. Mr. Hoover in 1928 nailed down the farm vote by promising to solve the farmer's woes by tariff increases on agricultural products.

And during the four years of his Administration Mr. Hoover never once admitted the futility of such action. With stubborn tenacity he defended the Hawley-Smoot act, even as it served as a horrible example of tariff protection run riot. And whenever he discussed the subject, Mr. Hoover clung to his belief that tariff protection was essential to the farmer's welfare.

How different from that attitude is Gov. Landon's realistic declaration at Des Moines that "tariff protection for these products (crops in which normally there is an exportable surplus), generally speaking, is ineffective, except when there is a shortage."

It is generally forgotten now, but Congress early in 1932 adopted a bill clothing the President with authority to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements and suggesting that perhaps a world conference on the subject might be helpful. Mr. Hoover indignantly vetoed that measure, asserting that "there never has been a time in the history of the United States when tariff protection was more essential to the welfare of the American people than at present."

And he made this observation: "The first legislative act of Washington's Administration was a tariff bill. From that day to this, one of our firm national policies has been that tariffs are solely a domestic question in protection of our own people."

Gov. Landon apparently does not think that "tariffs are solely a domestic question," for he indicated at Minneapolis that they constitute an integral part of world prosperity and world peace.

Although Gov. Landon is not opposed to the principle of tariff reciprocity, he is strenuously opposed to the particular reciprocal trade agreements of the New Deal. His indictment is drawn against the methods and the efficiency with which the objective is pursued. He holds in effect that the Roosevelt Administration has abused the principle of reciprocity with destructive results.

Perhaps some phases of the negotiation of the existing trade agreements are open to criticism; but to one who has closely followed that work, Secretary of State Cordell Hull seems to have performed an excellent job under trying circumstances; and the evidence of that conclusion lies in the paucity of specific instances of damage cited by Gov. Landon. Part of Gov. Landon's criticism more properly lies at the door of the AAA policies than at Secretary Hull's threshold. A good part of the increased agricultural imports which he cited resulted from the drought, as is evident from an examination of the various commodities in which the increases occur—most of which commodities have not figured in any reciprocal trade agreement.

Gov. Landon seems to have made a telling point in his remarks on the large increase in Cheddar cheese imports from Canada after the rate on that dairy product had been reduced from 7 to 5 cents a pound and his assertion that the American price, during the first four months in which the Canadian agreement was in effect, dropped from 17 to 12½ cents a pound.

But if the information which the Agriculture Department has given me is correct, Gov. Landon told only half the story. According to that department's experts the price of Cheddar cheese always suffers a seasonal drop during the first four months of the year—and this year was no exception. But that price has climbed back up, despite the imports from Canada, until in July it was 16.6 cents, or 31 per cent greater than in July of 1935. It was 17.6 cents in August—higher than in January and the highest since 1929. It is the high price prevailing here for Cheddar cheese—as well as the cut in tariff—which is responsible for the increased Canadian shipments. Agricultural Department experts further asserted that domestic production of Cheddar cheese has increased this year in response to an increased consumption.

But the important thing is that Gov. Landon went further in indorsing the necessity for a revival of world trade than any Republican Presidential candidate has in the last 16 years and in taking a realistic view of the tariff problem. His effort to make an appealing talk to the dairymen of the Northwest, whose votes he wishes, should not be permitted to overshadow the real meat of what he said.

Goodrich Plant Workers Vote Return to Jobs

By the Associated Press.

Akron, Ohio, Sept. 24.—Members of the Goodrich Local, United Rubber Workers of America, voted unanimously tonight to return to work at the B. F. Goodrich Co. plant which suspended operations, making 10,000 employes idle after a series of "sit-downs."

L. L. Callahan, president of Goodrich local, announced the vote.

Members of the Goodrich local took their vote immediately after receiving a report from a union committee which had been in conference all day with company officials. Callahan said the vote eliminated the probability of an outright strike.

Early Accord Forecast.

Minneapolis, Sept. 24 (AP).—Early settlement of the flour and cereal workers strike is probable, Gov. Hjalmar Petersen said late today following a conference with Robert Mythen, United States Department of Labor mediator, and Shreve Archer, head of the Archer-Daniels-Midland Linseed Oil Co.

Tennessee Mill Closes.

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 24 (AP).—The Holston Manufacturing Co., a hosiery mill, closed its doors today against 500 employes.

"There was nothing else to do," Joseph P. Gaut, president of the company, said. "They were in the mill all morning and performed no work. They just sat around."

Gaut said six men were dismissed for shutting down the motors in the ribbing department. The "sit-down" strike followed.

PWA Projects Halted.

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 24 (AP).—A strike of approximately 100 union workers practically halted construction today of two large PWA projects on the University of South Carolina campus.

Strike Is Threatened.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 24 (AP).—A strike in 60 or more Illinois towns by employes of the Illinois Power & Light Co. was threatened tonight, the State department of labor announced, as Gov. Henry Horner sought to avert the strike call by the appointment of an arbitrator.

High Living Costs Are Cited by Knox

Denver, Sept. 24 (AP).—Col. Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential nominee, wound up his Western campaign tour tonight by asserting high living costs overshadow the Nation's recovery.

Previously in a Colorado Springs luncheon address, Knox made his first direct attack upon President Roosevelt, calling him "a man drunk with power."

Declaring a division of powers and local self-government were the basic purposes of the Constitution, Knox said:

"Within the last three years we have seen a man drunk with power, try to break down these two fundamental principles. You have seen him seek to allocate to himself all legislative authority."

In the three and one-half years of his Administration, the general cost of living has risen 20 per cent, the costs of foodstuffs have risen more than 40 per cent," he said.

Earlier, at Pueblo, a steel manufacturing city, Knox, in his first statement concerning tariffs, said the "Republican Party in 1936 is still loyal to the principle of protective tariffs."

Hamilton Assails Aid Administration

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 24 (AP).—John D. M. Hamilton, national Republican chairman, opened a whirlwind campaign trip through West Virginia today by asserting that only 62 cents of each WPA relief dollar went into the pockets of the workers.

He declared the Republican Party, if put in office, would handle the relief situation through a program "directly contrary to that followed by the New Deal."

Hamilton asserted Congress appropriated an additional billion and a half dollars last winter for pubilc aid and that it has been intimated another half-billion would be needed.

The Republican chairman said:

"Why has this money gone so fast? Because billions have not been spent on relief at all.

"Did you know that out of every dollar spent for WPA relief only 62 cents gets into the pocket of the men on relief?

"The rest goes to overhead, purchase of materials and into the lining of the pockets of political henchmen."

The Campaign Arena

Mrs. Virginia M. Spinks, of Los Altos, Calif., for 25 years active in work of the Democratic Party, has refused to support President Roosevelt for re-election and proposes "to do everything in my power" to defeat him, according to word received here yesterday.

Declining an invitation to serve on the co-ordinating committee of the Democratic Women's Forum, Mrs. Spinks wrote to Miss Naomi Hammond, president of the forum, at San Francisco:

"I believe it is the patriotic duty of every American citizen to assist in voting out of office in November the present head of the Democratic Party."

Mrs. Spinks was the founder and for six years president of the Women's State Democratic Club of California, Democratic Presidential electors in 1916; vice chairman of the women's division of the Alfred Smith Campaign Committee of California, and a delegate at large to the Democratic national convention in 1932.

Henry L. Mencken has indorsed Landon for the Presidency. The indorsement, heralded as the first in his "tumultuous, iconoclastic career," appears in the October number of the American Mercury.

Under the title, "The Case for Dr. Landon," he writes in the concluding paragraph of the article:

"I feel it will be a good idea to try the Hon. Mr. Landon of Kansas. He would cut a poor figure in opera, but he looks to me to be a pretty good hand with a shovel. He probably knows a great deal less than the Hon. Mr. Roosevelt, but much more of what he knows is true. And when he promises to do this or that, laying his hand on his heart and rolling his eyes toward the Throne of God, there is at least a reasonable probability that he will make an honest effort to keep his word."

Jack Curley, who has unlimited athletes at his disposal, will provide the wrestling talent and Dempsey the oratory in behalf of President Roosevelt and Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, the latter also candidate for re-election.

The idea is that Dempsey will speak—as he did a few weeks ago on behalf of the Democratic ticket in Maine—and the tumblers will provide a wrestling show as a side attraction.

• • • •

Boston, Sept. 24 (AP).—Former State Auditor Alonzo B. Cook filed formal protest at the secretary of state's office late today against the candidacy of Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., Republican nominee for United States Senator, asserting Lodge's legal name does not contain the "junior."

The protest was scheduled to come before the Massachusetts ballot law commission Saturday.

Cook, a Republican, was elected State auditor for 16 years, and is an independent candidate for Senator against Lodge and against the Democratic nominee, Gov. James M. Curley.

Lodge protested: "I still bear the name with which I was born, a fact which is proved by the records."

The candidate is a grandson of the late famed Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, and a son of the late George Cabot Lodge. Records of vital statistics at the Statehouse listed the name given Lodge at birth as "Henry Cabot Lodge, jr."

• • • •

New York, Sept. 24 (AP).—Earl Browder, Communist Presidential candidate, was frankly pessimistic today over his chances of entering the White House in January.

"I don't stand a chance of getting the election in 1936," he said, but predicted in an interview his destiny would be shaped in the 1940 Presidential elections:

"I think that the Farmer-Labor Party, supported by the Communists, will be a major contender in that election."

• • • •

New York, Sept. 24 (AP).—David Dubinsky, president of the International Garment Workers Union, whose position on the list of Democrat electors in New York State was assailed by Republican Chairman John D. M. Hamilton, pointed today to his trade-union record of opposition to communism and said he would not withdraw his name from the list of Presidential electors.

Dubinsky—who has been called a Communist by New York Republican leaders and who was accused by Hamilton of aiding the Communists in Spain—said "I've fought Communists all my life."

"I've endangered my life and the existence of my organization in fighting Communists. And we didn't fight them in front of the microphone, like Coughlin, Lemke and Hamilton. We fought them on the picket line and in the shops."

• • • •

William Hard said in his regular Republican radio talk last night that President Roosevelt's "recent utterance in favor of 'an integrated economy' adds to the suspicion that in case of his re-election he intends to revive the National Recovery Administration.

"An 'integrated economy,'" Hard said, "was precisely the objective of the National Recovery Administration. Another word for 'integrated economy' is 'planning.' It involves governmental participation, direct or indirect, but always influential, in the determining of production and in the determining of price. It is a gateway to what is called in Europe the authoritarian totalitarian state. The result is a freezing of industrial growth."

• • • •

The Republican National Committee said last night the Roosevelt Administration "had frozen the little fellow" out of public oil and gas resource development and "willfully elected to turn over these natural resources to the wealthy and to the great corporations."

Under the O'Mahoney-Greever leasing bill, passed last year, the committee said in a statement, the cost of prospecting for oil or gas on Government lands had been raised "from $32 to $1,280 plus $32 on the maximum area of 2,560 acres alloted under any permit." The original bill, the committee said, became law "with the active support and approval of President Roosevelt and Secretary Ickes."

The Administration, the committee said, "not only excluded small prospectors" by the imposition of a 50 cents an acre rental charge plus a $32 filing fee, "but also has enabled large corporations to write leases which can be renewed forever."

were urging him also to stop at Buffalo, particularly since his Republican rival for the Presidency, Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, made one of his principal addresses there.

A third trip tentatively outlined today would carry Mr. Roosevelt into New England's industrial areas for perhaps two days, the itinerary would take in Boston, Springfield and Worcester. One major speech, it was understood, would be scheduled for one or the other of the last two cities.

To Wind Up in New York.

The campaign would wind up with an address in Madison Square Garden in New York City the Saturday night before election.

Asked whether there was a general agreement on the President's plans, Farley replied in the affirmative.

The conference lasted an hour and a half, with those present leaving in a drizzling rain by train or motor for New York.

The parley brought together virtually all the men of the innermost Democratic councils. Vice President Garner, Attorney General Cummings, Secretaries Hull and Roper and Chairman James A. Farley, of the Democratic National Committee, were there.

Senators, Representatives and other national committee officials sat with them.

Drastic Losses Likely to Pare Value of Franc

Gold Embargo Expected, Discount Rate Raised to Stem Outflow.

Rumors were spread in world financial centers yesterday that devaluation of the French franc was likely within the next fortnight. Developments concerning the currency follow:

Paris—The French government reversed its easy money policy as the government-controlled Bank of France increased the bank rate from 3 to 5 per cent. The gold loss in the week of September 18 was more than $55,000,000.

London—Great Britain intimated to France that the British government was reconciled to devaluation of the franc. Financial authorities heard the franc would be devalued and gold exports embargoed either this week-end or next week-end.

New York—The franc was around the gold point in fairly heavy foreign exchange trading. Sterling dropped more than a cent in relation to the dollar, reflecting improvement in the franc in relation to sterling abroad. Gold engaged in Paris for shipment to the United States totaled $19,582,000, heaviest of the movement, bringing the total since August 7 to $154,200,000.

Discount Rate Raised.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Paris, Sept. 24.—The government-controlled Bank of France today raised its discount rate from 3 to 5 per cent in an effort to stem the flow of gold from the nation, as rumors spread that a gold embargo would be instituted Saturday.

The increase reversed the pledged plan of the Popular Front government that easy money rates would prevail, and was taken only after long consideration by the general council — consideration that held up publication of the weekly bank statement for an hour and 30 minutes.

The bank statement revealed the acuteness of the nation's monetary problem. Gold reserves had dwindled 841,000,000 francs (55,369,337), in the week ended September 18, to 52,691,000,000 francs ($3,469,043,712), and further losses up to 700,000,000 francs were recorded this week.

Reports spread that the government planned exchange control measures and an export gold embargo after the close of business Saturday.

More Called Significant.

Experts viewed the discount rise as significant, since it came only a few days before end-of-the-month payments, a period in which the Leftist government has stressed its desire that interest rates be as low as possible.

In January, 1935, gold reserves of France stood around 82,000,000,000 francs (about $5,399,000,000). By September, 1935, it had been cut to about 70,000,000,000 francs ($4,609,000,000). Agitation for devaluation was increased. Government officials assured the public the franc "would be saved" and that other means would be found to check the outflow.

But the exodus continued. By January, 1935, the reserve had dropped to around 66 billion francs ($4,345,000,000), but pace of the capital flight slowed. The banks' discount rate was scaled from its peak level of 6 per cent to 5 per cent.

Renewed devaluation talk, weakness of other gold bloc currencies and success of the leftist Popular-Front Party in the national elections generated a renewed outflow.

Embargo Held Certain.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

London, Sept. 24.—A French embargo on gold exports—tantamount to abandonment of the gold standard—within the next fortnight, was considered certain here today. Informed sources said Great Britain had intimated to France that the government was reconciled to franc devaluation.

The action of the British government followed Anglo-French negotiations in which Great Britain insisted on retaining her "liberty of action" to protect foreign trade and other interests by correspondingly lowering the value of sterling in the event the French government systematically depreciated the Franc. It was considered likely that gradually the franc and sterling would be hitched, but methods were not revealed.

It was understood here that France was determined to obtain from Washington an assurance that the United States would refrain from further reducing the gold content of the dollar or engaging in any other currency dpereciation race or retaliatory measure.

Bankers Urge Less Spending In Government

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Sept. 24.—The American Bankers Association today advocated less spending by Federal, State and local governmental agencies.

In resolutions adopted at the closing session of their sixty-second annual convention the bankers said the Nation's "fundamental credit" is sound and conceded the necessity of great emergency expenditures, but added that budget balancing is "the prime consideration of a sound fiscal policy."

Other resolutions asked for rigid limiting of new banks to guard against getting too many and spoke out for closer co-ordination of Federal, State and municipal taxes, to avoid conflicts, duplications and "unfair distribution of the tax burden."

Urged to Take Lead.

The convention heard Clarence Francis, of New York, president of General Foods Corporation, say bankers should move out in the lead of community affairs to finance the rebuilding of the country's homes, railroads and factories, help improve the economic position of the underprivileged.

Frank views of two surveys—one on what 7,400 bankers think of the public; the other on what 50,000 sample citizens think of the bankers—were made public today.

Francis conducted the surveys in preparing for his address in which he asserted banks are failing to assume their full place of economic and moral leadership.

The 7,400 bankers — "from the cornfields to the metropolis" — viewed thus:

Fifty-eight out of a hundred thought the public friendly to them, a fourth thought the public indifferent, and 11 per cent said "not friendly."

Reasons Are Given.

Some reasons—Losses in closed banks, adverse propaganda, "hunting a goat," and "dislike of people you owe."

One-fourth felt their customers do not understand "why it is necessary to make service charges on unprofitable accounts."

"Many bankers," the industrialist told the convention, "reported the insuring of deposits has made their depositors feel secure."

Banking and monetary legislation, 67 per cent of those questioned replied, has increased long-run security of depositors and stockholders.

More than half said installment buying helped bring on the 1929 financial collapse.

Views of the public, tabulated from 50,000 sample citizens, indicated:

Forty-seven per cent believed it more necessary to save for old age than in their father's day, 45 per cent believed it as necessary and only 5 per cent believed it less necessary.

87 Per Cent Use Banks.

Eighty-seven per cent use the banks. Fifty-seven out of 100 considered the banks not doing their share for recovery.

Asked to name the man in public life with whose views they agreed on money matters, the first four were:

"President Roosevelt, Father Coughlin, Senator Glass and Gov. Landon—in that order.

"Trailing the leaders were Herbert Hoover, Henry Ford, Congressman Lemke, Dr. Townsend, Senator Borah, Norman Thomas and Ogden Mills. • • •

"I think it lamentable that no banker or bankers stood out conspicuously."

Half the 50,000 look for a boom between now and 1940—and 9 out of 10 look for another depression to come, many placing it between 1940 and 1950.

whizzing to a hospital with all the darned sirens going and scaring me out of my wits. The doctor said he didn't know how I'd lived. I told him my time just hadn't come yet, but when it does I'll be there. It wouldn't have made any difference to me if it had come then."

Just a Common Carpenter.

A. H. Cain, 88, bowed and bent, with one leg of wood, said: "Like the Lord, I'm just a common carpenter," and told how he had run away from a Missouri farm at 15. He went on:

"I believe in a living God and that He's put me here for a certain purpose and when He's through with me He'll take me away. I used to be a deacon in a church. But I quit the church. I found so many people talking religion who were really working for the almighty dollar.

"I'm not afraid to go any time God is ready to take me. But I am like the Irishman who was going to be hung and the judge asked him what kind of a tree he would like to be hanged to. The Irishman answered 'A gooseberry tree!' and the judge said, 'Oh, that's too little.' The Irishman said, 'Wait till one grows up—I'm in no hurry.'

"That's the way I feel about death. I'm in no hurry."

George T. Leech, 90, of Baltimore, who lost an eye in the war, said: "I've ever seen the minute when I was afraid to die. I joined the church after I got out of the war and never regretted it, either. I don't think most of the old soldiers think much about death. They know they've got to go pretty soon. As far as I'm concerned, I'm not worried.

He Believes in Immortality.

"One of our past commanders made a farewell speech once. He told us: 'Comrades, I'm satisfied this is my last encampment. I'm a physician and know. Thank heaven I'm walking out straight up.' The boys all cheered him. It was a pretty touching scene because none of us knew when we'd go to join him.

"I believe in immortality. I don't think when I die that everything is going to end. I expect to keep on in some form or another, but whatever happens to this old wreck of a body, I'm not afraid."

G. W. Green, of Boston, 90, his eyes faded, tapped his cane and said: "The Boys in Blue are about ready to quit and they should be. We're getting along in years now. I don't expect to live much longer but I'm going to stay as long as I can. I think about '38'll wind most of us up. When God calls us home, I'm ready. We all have more friends on the other side than we have here."

stant foreign call, our financial structure and our price structure rest to a considerable extent on foreign judgment or caprice.

"This leads me to my questions which revolve around the general proposition that our purchase of foreign gold at an arbitrarily high domestic price (deliberately set by us) is responsible for this international investment situation; and that unless stopped will multiply our serious American jeopardy while also multiplying foreign profits at American expense. If these implications and conclusions are in error, I am anxious to have the authentic demonstration of it."

He charged that in 1934 and 1935 the United States "bought and paid for much more than the entire new gold production of the world and much more than was necessary to balance our international commerce."

Morgenthau released copies of Vandenberg's letter and his own reply in rebuttal. The Treasury Secretary challenged the Senator's conceptions of the international gold movement, and conclusions he drew from huge purchases of American securities for foreigners. Morgenthau offered the following defense of the New Deal's dollar devaluation policy:

"• • • I believe that the consensus of informed opinion would support me in the view that the revaluation of the dollar contributed materially to check the disastrous downward course of prices in the United States and helped initiate an upward movement; a change which not only helped adjust the large and growing discrepancies between the prices of various classes of commodities, but was an important factor in stimulating business activity and in restoring confidence in prospects for recovery; that it eliminated some of the gross injustice between debtors and creditors created by sharply falling prices, and reduced the burden of debts by helping to increase the national income; that it contributed to the maintenance of low interest rates so essential to recovery; that it served to readjust our dollar exchange so that our exporters were able to regain their competitive position in foreign markets."

Morgenthau conceded that during 1934 and 1935 our net gold imports of $2,956,000,000 exceeded estimated gold production outside the United States by about $1,775,000,000, but he contended that newly mined gold constitutes only a fraction of the sum of gold that moves among countries each year. He denied the Treasury actually "purchases" gold in the customary usage of the term.

Bomb Sales to Fight Strikers Told to Civil Liberty Committee.

president of the Central Industrial Service, a strike-breaking subsidiary organization of the Railway Audit and Inspection Service; W. A. Engelhart, sales manager of the Manville Manufacturing Corporation of Pontiac, Mich.

Operating with the precision of a pair of surgeons, Senators Robert M. LaFollette (Progressive), Wisconsin, and Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), Utah, teamed up in alternate questioning of the witnesses.

Figurative scalpel in hand, La Follette cut and probed through the secrecy-shrouded business that brought three companies—the Lake Erie of Cleveland, Federal Laboratories, Inc., of Pittsburgh, Pa., a subsidiary of Railway Audit, and the Manville Manufacturing Corporation—a total of $435,191.31 from January, 1935, to September, 1936, according to a selected list of larger sales, compiled by committee investigators.

While the use of dummy receivers and the sale of gas and gas-gas-throwing equipment to dummy committees, termed "Citizens Committee," among other appellations, made identification of corporations buying gas bombs difficult, a partial list of clients for the three firms ranged through General Motors Corporation, Remington-Rand, Inc., Standard Oil, nearly all of the big steel companies, a number of railroads, the Aluminum Co. of America, Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., all of the large rubber companies, several shipbuilding companies, the San Francisco Examiner, a Hearst-owned paper; the du Pont de Nemours companies, and the Ford Motor Co.

Senator Thomas devoted himself to the more philosophical side of the inquiry, questioning the witnesses on their "moral obligation" to society.

Ailes said, defending the manufacture and sale of gas:

"We don't want anyone to get hurt." The crowd laughed. Ailes flushed and went on. "I'm sorry there are strikes." Again the crowd hooted. Flushing again, but determined to make his side of the case clear, he continued:

"I'm sorry there are Communists in this country. This gas is to be placed in the bootlegged mines, where armed thieves, working openly by daylight, are robbing private property of the coal. Ten per cent of all the coal produced in this county is bootleg, cutting down the market. • • • Dynamite, with which the bootleg mines are worked, is also bootlegged. You can buy it at nearly every soft-drink stand and filling station in the region.

"We don't sell to thieves. We sell gas on the side of law and order.

"The very existence of the Pennsylvania coal companies is threatened • • • The plan to fill the holes with gas won't work now. The bootleg miners will give them a reception committee now—with shotguns." As Ailes left the stand, newsmen nearby were still laughing. He turned to them and snapped: "You're nothing but a bunch of —— —— Communists!"

Merritt gave a detailed picture of the bootleg-coal problem, stating that gas was "better than bullets" in attempts to drive off the bootleggers; and described repeated failure of legal efforts to secure adequate police protection for the properties, redress in the courts, or aid from Gov. Earle.

"Anarchy" Claimed.

"There is no government in the State of Pennsylvania if attempts to halt this situation are considered," he said. "Their attorney general described conditions as "anarchy." . . . 24 hours after fines are levied, the bootleggers are back at work. They even have an association, the Independent Producers, with armed guards . . . We haven't yet decided to use the gas, though we have bought it."

The testimony of McCarthy, a veteran investigator before he joined the Lake Erie Co. to become an ace gas salesman, frequently was interrupted by roars of laughter from the spectators, as his letters to Ailes were read. Some extracts of these introduced as evidence follow:

". . . I called on the Los Angeles police chief and sheriff, but Federal Laboratories have so 'greased' things there that unless I do likewise there is little chance to do business for the present. To make matters worse the Reds did not kick up any trouble so that they could find out how useless Federal candles (bombs) are . . .

". . . After watching him (a Federal Laboratories man) in action yesterday I'm convinced his gas tactics were taken from the Salvation Army manual.

"These cops are sold on our clubs for gas use but think Federal clubs are superior as a weapon. The cops here, when they hit a man over the head are not satisfied unless he goes down and a good split occurs. Our clubs are too light for this . . .

Calls Police "Boy Scouts."

". . . I personally think the two Boy Scout cops in the chief's office (Chief of Police William J. Quinn, San Francisco) are getting a cut if they swing him (the Federal Lab. man) an order but I can't prove it as yet. . . . I'm using every angle to ace this egg out of here."

He verbally characterized Chief Quinn as "a fake flag waver, always spouting about the danger of Communism." Of his sales methods he said:

"Back of it all is the fear of the boys at City Hall of my dictograph equipment being used against them and to tell you the truth many of the boys cannot stand an investigation and know it . . . I am being approached by their enemies to furnish such equipment . . . which would result in indictments for slot machine and lottery rackets forcertain of the boys close to the Mayor. . . . It should also result in the chief being removed and my friend, Capt. Dullea being made chief."

U. S. Furnished Wilson 'Lead, Garnett Holds

Promising to Co-operate, He Asks Brown Loan Him Investigator.

Solution of the "mistaken identity" murder of Allen B. Wilson—acclaimed as a masterful example of police work—was not due altogether to the work of headquarters detectives, it was revealed yesterday by United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett.

In a letter to Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, Garnett reminded that official that it was an assistant United States attorney who first uncovered and gave to the detectives the "lead" whereby they cleared up the mystery and sent three men to the penitentiary for life.

Neither the identity of the assistant United States attorney nor the nature of the "lead" was disclosed by Garnett.

At the same time, Garnett requested that at least one "trained investigator" be assigned to his office by Maj. Brown. He recalled that there was a time when the Police Department loaned its "ace men" to the United States Attorney's office.

The police chief said he would be willing to detail a detective to work in Garnett's office, providing one could be spared without working a hardship on the Detective Bureau. At present, Detective Sergt. Earl Hartman is assigned to the courthouse in connection with a blackmail case. He used to be permanently assigned to help Garnett, but was recalled because of personnel shortage in the Detective Bureau.

Garnett, in his letter to Brown, said that the records gave "clear proof" that the system of co-operation between police and prosecutors has worked well.

Garnett recalled that Henry Pratt and the late Clifford Grant were among the ace men assigned to the United States attorney's office in other years. Pratt became chief of police and Grant chief of detectives.

that, according to Keck, he garroted her with a bed sheet.

Rifling Mrs. Goodwin's pocketbook, Keck said, Robinson found only two keys, overlooking a 25-cent piece, the only money it contained.

Robinson told them, Keck said, that he became worried when he heard footsteps in a room above, and so hurried down to the cellar, where he returned the furnace shaker (putting it in the wrong furnace, however), washed his hands, and went out the same door through which he had entered.

Capt. Keck gave much credit for the soution of the crime to Dr. Oscar Hunter, pathologist of George Washington University; Dr. A. Magruder McDonald, District coroner, and Dr. Richard Rosenberg, his assistant.

Keck said the colored man had on a bloddy shirt when he was arrested, and that a pair of blood-stained trousers was found in his home.

The medical experts, he said, made an analysis of the blood, showing it was the same type as Mrs. Goodwin's.

Looking under Robinson's finger nails, Kech said, the medical men found particles of the bathrobe Mrs. Goodwin was wearing when she was killed.

Farm Markets Lost by Pacts, Landon Asserts

Roosevelt Foreign Trade Agreements Assailed in Minneapolis.

policies of the Administration is high here. This community, lying not far from the Canadian border and producing large quantities of dairy products and livestock affected by the agreement with Canada, is believed by the Republican high command to be particularly receptive to the arguments made by Landon.

Landon made two points clear at the outset of his talk. First, he said, he is not opposed to the theory of reciprocal trade agreements, but opposes only the kind of agreements that are damaging to the prosperity of the American people. Second, he said, "I want to make it clear that I am opposed to a policy of isolation."

"I want to see a prosperous world as well as a prosperous America," he said, "a healthy international trade is essential to world prosperity. And even more than this, world prosperity is good insurance against war."

Reasonable protection, however is not detrimental to world prosperity, he asserted. He said that, "at a time like this, when economic nationalism is rampant, we cannot afford to scrap our economic defenses."

Landon cited specific examples of what he termed the detrimental effects of the trade agreement policy, bringing the argument directly home to the farmers of Minnesota and Wisconsin. He addressed his plea particularly to these States, where his chances for victory are admittedly not bright. In Minnesota he is faced with the hostility of the powerful farmer-labor organization. In Wisconsin the La Follette Progressives are opposing him. He will take his campaign into the latter State with a series of rear platform appearances tomorrow and Saturday and a speech on social security at Milwaukee Saturday night.

Addressing his argument first to the dairy farmers of the Northwest, Landon pointed out in his speech that the duty on cheddar—commonly called American—cheese had been reduced in the Canadian agreement from 7 to 5 cents a pound. He said that as a result, importation of this type of cheese had increased from 500,000 pounds in the first six months of 1935 to nearly 4,000,000 pounds in the first six months of this year. The price, he said, fell from 17 cents to 12½ cents per pound.

Farm Imports Gain 84 Per Cent.

"Is this," he asked, "what the present Administration meant when it said the American farmer would get a better price for his products?"

Summing up, he declared that imports of farm products during the last two years have increased 84 per cent, while exports of farm products make up the smallest proportion of foreign trade in history.

The Republican Party, he concluded, "believes in making it possible for the farmer to plant full crops. It believes in increasing the demand for farm products, not reducing the supply. It believes the American farmer worthy of prosperity."

In Iowa, en route here, Landon was greeted warmly at every stop. Bands were playing, the people wore sunflower campaign buttons, and shouted and applauded. His last principal stop in that State was at Mason City, where a big crowd was waiting as the train pulled in between huge brick and tile factories. The same speech which received no response at Albertlea was loudly applauded.

The campaign train today sped through fields of stunted corn. Evidences of the drought were plainly visible, although the ground was now wet and in some places water was standing in the fields. Rain had come too late to help anything except the pastures which are turning green.

Landon at every stop preached his philosophy of plenty in opposition to the New Deal philosophy of scarcity.

Text of Tariff-Farm Address by Gov. Landon in Minneapolis

By the Associated Press.

Minneapolis, Sept. 24.—The text of Gov. Alf M. Landon here tonight follows:

I am most happy to be with you here in the great Northwest. Many of your achievements stand as an inspiration to the rest of the country. You have developed to an unusual degree a system of combining dairying and general farming in such a way that it provides a year-'round income and at the same time conserves the soil.

You have proved that farmer-owned and farmer-controlled organizations are an effective way for helping the income of the producer; the success of farm cooperation in Minnesota, Wisconsin and neighboring States is an epic chapter in American agriculture.

Tonight I am going to discuss the reciprocal trade program of the present Administration. I am going to discuss it from the point of view of the American farmer.

When this program was introduced by the present Administration our farmers were led to believe that it would be of particular benefit to them. They were told it was the only feasible way by which this country could regain its lost foreign markets. They were assured that it meant greater sales at better prices.

We have had only two years of this program. But within even that short time certain conclusions have been proved beyond all question. The reciprocal trade agreements made by this Administration have not benefited our farmers; they have hurt our farmers. They have not regained his markets for him; they have taken more of his markets away, both at home and abroad. They have not caused him to get better prices for his products; they have prevented him from getting as good prices as he otherwise would.

"Sold Down the River."

In a word, the reciprocal trade program of the present Administration has delayed recovery for our farmers. It has sold the American farmer down the river.

I want to present the record of this destructive policy to you in some detail. Before doing so, however, there are two points that I want to make clear.

The first of these is that I am not opposed to reciprocal trade agreements. The general principle underlying them is simple. Under certain conditions it is to the mutual advantage of two countries to lift various commodities out of their general tariff program for special treatment. Both countries make concessions; both countries benefit. This is sound doctrine. In some cases it may be the only satisfactory method of meeting a situation. The Republican Party recognizes this in its platform. It does not condemn the principle of reciprocity. It condemns only the kind of trade agreements now being made. It condemns them because they are injurious to American citizens and offensive to American principles.

The second point I want to make clear is that I am opposed to a policy of isolation. I want to see a prosperous world as well as a prosperous America. A healthy international trade is essential to world prosperity. And even more than this, world prosperity is good insurance against war.

I am convinced, too, that reasonable protection, which is so essential to our own well-being, is not detrimental to world prosperity.

At a time like the present, when economic nationalism is rampant, we cannot afford to scrap our economic defenses. We can be a good neighbor without giving away the latchkey to our door.

Assails Isolation.

The great enemy of world trade today is not the fair protection of efficient American producers and laborers. It is the war-inspired doctrine of isolation and its resulting demands for self-sufficiency. From this we get embargoes, exchange restrictions and trade quotas. These are the real hindrances to a healthy exchange of goods between nations. We must not join in this kind of madness. If we are to maintain our standard of living the channels of world trade must remain open.

Now let us consider some of the effects of the reciprocal trade program of the present Administration.

The dairy industry is a good example of how these agreements have injured the farmer. One of the important commodities developed by this industry is cheese. In one trade agreement after another the tariff has been lowered on cheese and our markets opened to foreign products.

Under the Canadian agreement, for instance, the tariff rate on Cheddar cheese—known to most of us as American cheese—was lowered from 7 to 5 cents a pound. No limit was placed on the amount that might come in at this reduced rate.

Now what was the result of this agreement? Whereas in the first six months of 1935 we imported only 500,000 pounds of Canadian cheese in the first six months of 1936 we imported nearly 4,000,000 pounds. This was an increase of over 700 per cent.

I do not have to tell the dairy farmer what happened. Down went the price on the American market. It fell from 17 cents to 12½ cents a pound in the first four months of the agreement. Is this what the present Administration meant when it said that the American farmer would get a better price for his products? It seems to me that the farmer would do better to trust the Republican party. We are pledged in our platform "to protect the American farmer against the imports of all livestock, dairy and agricultural products . . . which will depress American prices."

Cites "Jungle Product."

This is not the only example of damage done the dairy farmer. After long and painstaking effort the dairy industry got protection against the tropical oils and fats that compete with butter. But under the Brazilian agreement a new jungle product—babassu nuts and oils—is permitted to come into this country in direct competition with American dairy-products. The Administration has not only placed the product on the free list, but also agreed that it will be exempt from any taxation.

This last point—Exempting a product from taxation under a trade agreement—I want you to note with special care. It is an amazing provision. Because it signs away one of the most important powers of Congress—the power of taxation. In my opinion, there is no justification for the Chief Executive so limiting the legislative branch of our Government.

Now I want to touch on one point that belongs in any discussion of the problems of dairy and livestock producers, although it has no direct relation to reciprocal trade agreements. I refer to the sanitary requirements covering these industries! Our Federal and State Governments, as well as the dairymen, have spent enormous sums in the eradication of contagious diseases of cattle. In addition we impose rigid standards for the care of barns and stock. Only one other country has made equal progress in this field. As a result of our standards, consumers can always rest assured of the quality and purity of the products of American dairy farms.

Unfortunately, the same standards are not imposed on imported products. To correct this situation, the Republican Party is pledged "to impose effective quarantine against imported livestock, dairy and other farm products from countries which do not impose health and sanitary regulations fully equal to those required of our own producers."

Says Stockmen Fare Badly.

Livestock producers and feeders have fared just as badly as the dairymen under the reciprocal trade agreements. In the Canadian agreement the tariff was reduced by one-third on a sliding quota of cattle weighing 700 pounds or more. On calves there was an even greater cut!

Consider the contradictions in this policy. The Administration was trying to hold down the Nation's supply of meat by restricting the production of hogs. Last fall it was warning livestock men that there would be increased supplies of cattle on the market this spring. And yet it proceeded to make concessions on Canadian cattle that would bring more of them into this country!

Such a program just doesn't make sense.

What happened? The Canadian agreement went into effect January 1. Canadian cattle were rushed in and naturally prices fell. Here is the record. The first of January the average good grade steer of 900 to 1,100 pounds was selling on the South St. Paul market at $9.75 a hundredweight. By June the price was down to $7.25 a hundredweight. On every occasion the biggest drop in prices followed the heaviest receipts of Canadian cattle.

This price decline was reflected in the cattle markets throughout the country. It wiped out the hopes of any profit for thousands of cattle-feeders in our Middle Western States.

In short, as a result of the policies of this Administration, there has been added to the drought and the depression another burden for the American farmer to carry—foreign competition. In spite of its promises, the present Administration has given American farmers the short end of the deal.

Sees Other "Casualties."

I have discussed only two of the casualties of the trade policies of this Administration. Numerous others might be listed. The Florida growers of early vegetables had their markets turned over to the cheap-labor products of Cuba. The growers of cigar-wrapper tobacco in the Connecticut Valley, lost out in the agreement with the Netherlands, as did the bulb industry in the Pacific northwest. And the hope of increased domestic production of corn and potato starches was destroyed in the same agreement because tapioca and sago were found on the free list!

Now let us look at some general results. Eight of these agreements have been in force long enough for us to see the results. In these cases, the imports of farm products have increased 84 per cent over a corresponding period prior to the agreements. Exports of farm products increased only 26 per cent. In other words, under these eight agreements, our imports increased more than three times as fast as our exports.

Today the exports of our farm products represent the smallest proportion of our foreign trade in the history of the Nation. This is due in large measure to the confused and destructive policies of the Administration. With the most intelligent and capable farm population in the world, and with unsurpassed natural resources, we are now one of the largest importers not only of those things we do not produce, but of those we are adapted to produce. This is a scandalous situation!

Now, why have the reciprocal trade agreements of this Administration had such destructive results? There are various reasons. One is the selection of countries with which the agreements have been made. As I said earlier, it is a basic principle of reciprocity that such treaties be used to handle only those situations which cannot be met satisfactorily in the general tariff program. This means that reciprocity is valuable only when non-competing commodities are to be exchanged between two nations concerned.

Says Policy Wrong.

That is, each country by means of such treaties makes it easier to trade the commodity of which it has a surplus, for something it needs from the other country. It never is a question, when the reciprocity principle is properly used, of making agreements on competing commodities.

This Administration has followed quite a different policy. Its most important agreement, that with Canada, is largely concerned with commodities in which our producers are in competition with Canadian producers. It is inevitable, therefore, that the effect of the agreement should be not an increased trade on non-competing articles, but a reduction of tariffs on articles of which we do compete.

If an agreement is on noncompeting articles, there is the possibility of mutual advantage. But when it is made with a competitor, one side or the other is almost certain to lose.

Had the Administration been interested in using the principle of reciprocity in its proper manner it would have made agreements only with our customers. It wouldn't have made an agreement on agricultural products with our very good friend Canada, which in this field is a competitor, not a customer!

It is for this reason that the Republican platform pledges "to furnish Government assistance in disposing of surpluses in foreign trade by bargaining for foreign markets selectively by countries, both as to exports and imports. We strenuously oppose so-called reciprocal treaties which trade off the American farmer." To do this intelligently, we must know at all times the exact status of our trade with every nation—in other words, how we stand on the books so far as both consumers and competitors are concerned.

Charges "Star Chamber."

Another further major shortcoming of the trade program of this Administration is the method by which the agreements are made. It is a regular star-chamber proceeding. Those producers whose products may be covered by the agreements are given no real chance to make an effective presentation of their views. Hearings are held, it is true, but from the point of view of producers they amount to little. They amount to little for the simple reason that the Administration refused to divulge what commodities are under consideration. All the potential witness knows is that an agreement is being considered. Any one of thousands of commodities may be the subject of negotiation. The witness has to take his chance. If he is interested in only one commodity his job is easy. In testifying, he may be wasting his time, since that commodity may not be under consideration at all, but at least his case is presented. If he is interested in 100 commodities the situation is different. He must, if he wants his views considered, present a brief on each of the 100.

Of course in actual practice the producers interested in a large number of commodities does not present a brief on all of them. He knows in the first place that there is little chance they will be read. Besides there is an easier way to handle the situation. This is to have his foreign correspondent find out from the foreign government with which the agreement is being negotiated what commodities are under discussion. The little fellow, unable to afford a foreign representative, is the one who gets stuck. This is still another one of those millstones that this Administration has placed around the necks of our small producers.

Another major shortcoming of these agreements is the use of the unconditional most-favored-nation principle. This principle, then widely followed by the leading commercial nations, is a proper and wholesome way of promoting international trade. But today most nations have ceased to use the principle. In consequence, when we apply it, we are making a concession to foreign nations without getting anything in return. This is not reciprocity. It is charity paid for by American producers.

Questions Executive Power.

One more point on the making of these agreements: This is the question of whether it was wise for Congress to give to the President such sweeping powers. Under our Constitution, if these agreements are commercial treaties they should be ratified by a two-thirds vote of the Senate. On the other hand, if they are simply revisions of our tariff laws, they come under the revenue provisions of the Constitution. In this case they should be approved by a majority vote of both houses of Congress.

The present Administration has chosen to ignore both these courses. There is no legislative approval of the agreements before they go into effect. They are simply imposed upon the public. That is not representative government.

These policies have got to stop. The way to trade is to trade, and let me tell you this—we Republicans are going to trade, not against, but in the interest of, American producers. In too many of the present agreements we are the fellow who got the blind horse.

We have got to stop destroying the market of our farmers. The Republican Party is pledged to protect the American market for the American farmer.

Wouldn't Ban All Imports.

This does not mean that we propose to prohibit the importation of commodities which we cannot grow at reasonable cost to consumers. It means that in the case of farm products we will not permit the shelves of our stores to be filled with foreign commodities suited to our soil and climate. It means we will not permit unnecessary imports of such products as meats, dairy and poultry products, grains, and such fruits and vegetables as we can grow to good advantage.

We require many things which we either do not produce or can produce only at great cost. In turn, we produce many products in greater abundance than we can use. The interchange of these two classes of goods is essential to our well-being.

We must not reduce farm production in this country to the needs of the domestic market. This is the doctrine of despair. It would mean the abandonment of at least one out of every ten acres of our developed farm land. It would mean less production to be divided among an increasing farm population. In short, it would mean a lower standard of living and a greatly increased relief load in the rural districts.

The Republican Party refuses to accept this philosophy of despair. It believes in making it possible for the farmer to plant full crops. It believes in increasing the demand for farm products, not reducing the supply. It believes the American farmer worthy of prosperity.

Wallace Plans Five Talks.

By the Associated Press.

A series of five farm speeches by Secretary Wallace in Middle Western cities was announced yesterday by his office.

The Secretary said yesterday in New York City that he would discuss the farm views of Gov. Landon, Republican Presidential candidate, in the Middle West.

Wallace will talk at Aurora, Ill., September 29, at a dairy meeting; at Davenport, Iowa, September 30, at a four-county farm bureau session at Pawnee, Nebr., October 1, at a session sponsored by the Kiwanis Club and other business organizations there; at Pierson, Iowa, October 2, at dedication of a cooperative elevator, and at Decorah, Iowa, October 3, at a meeting called by Representative Bierman.

Debt Due RFC Is Reduced.

New York, Sept. 24 (AP).—The New York Central Railroad has reduced its outstanding debt to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to $9,478,737 by paying off $2,420,262 in notes maturing next June, the carrier announced today.

Last December the road repaid $5,000,000 to the Federal credit agency. The remaining debt matures in 1941.

Re-election of President Is 'All-Important,' Asserts Democratic Leader.

By the Associated Press.

Des Moines, Sept. 24.—Representative Marvin Jones (Democrat), Texas, chairman of the House Committee on Agriculture, declared tonight the Nation's farming industry had revived under the Roosevelt Administration.

Jones is the spearhead of the speaking campaign sponsored by the Roosevelt all-party agricultural committee and that organization termed his prepared address "an answer to the farm program speech" of Gov. Alf M. Landon, Republican Presidential candidate, who spoke here Tuesday night.

Early in 1933, Jones said, "corn was selling on the farm at 18 cents per bushel, wheat at 32 cents, hogs at less than 3 cents a pound, cattle at 5 and butter at 15." He added:

"Hundreds of thousands of homes were facing foreclosure. Business of almost every kind was in the red. Millions of blameless people were shuffling in the bread lines, leaderless and despairing."

The Roosevelt Administration, he said, then placed its farm program in operation.

Cites Rise in Income.

"In two and a half years," the Representative stated, "not only was the price of farm commodities greatly increased, but there was paid to American farmers $1,500,000,000 in benefit payments. In spite of the drought, the national farm income increased from $5,300,000,000 in 1932 to $8,100,000,000 in 1935 and to approximately $8,500,000,000 for the year ended September 1, 1936.

"This renewed purchasing power soon began to be reflected in the channel of trade. Factory wheels began to turn. The country took on new life.

"In Iowa alone $100,000,000 was paid in corn-hog and wheat benefit payments. Administrative costs were less than 7 per cent, so that 93 cents of every dollar of the processing fees allocated went directly to the pockets of Iowa farmers."

Urges Roosevelt Re-election.

Jones related how the soil conservation program replaced the invalidated AAA and contended re-election of President Roosevelt was "all-important" to continuation of a successful farm aid plan.

"I have no objection to Gov. Landon," he said. "I think he is a good man, but let us look at the company he is keeping. He is backed by the Liberty League. The great financiers are behind him."

Jones said contributions to the Republican campaign in Maine included P. S. Lamont, Irenee, Henry B. and B. Felix du Pont; J. P. Morgan and John D., jr., and every Rockefeller. He added:

"It would take a man of tremendous power to turn down all of these old-time financial elements which have for so long shaped the affairs of the Nation and those who resent so bitterly the fact that they cannot control the man who is in the White House today.

"Do you want to trust the future of the farm program to an administration whose most ardent supporters are the Liberty Leaguers, the du Ponts, the Mellons and the Millses?"

"The farm program is not perfect," he said. "It will be improved as we go along. The difficulties and the inequalities will be ironed out."

Declaring farm prices were up 50 per cent; farm pay rolls, 60 per cent; factory employment, 35 per cent; industrial earnings and bank deposits, 35 per cent, and that the total national income had increased more than $20,000,000,000, while more than 5,000,000 "additional people have found employment," Jones asserted:

"If there is one supreme thing the farmers need to do today, it is to support those who have proven to be their friends in the long struggle upward."

Boykin Assails Knox's Speech At Nearby Rally

Talks to Big Democrat Throng at Casey Place, Near Gaithersburg.

Frank W. Boykin, Democratic Representative from Alabama, last night attacked Col. Frank Knox's Allentown (Pa.) speech, and declared that business in the country today had improved tremendously since Roosevelt's inauguration.

Boykin was speaking at a rally of the United Democratic Women's Clubs of Montgomery County, on the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene J. Casey, near Gaithersburg. About 1,000 attended the rally.

The Alabama Representative hit particularly at statements of Col. Knox, in which he said that neither life insurance policies nor savings deposits are safe today.

Boykin declared that during the years 1931-33, "when Hoover was President and Knox was his adviser," there was a loss of 8,000,000 insurance policies, a drop of $11,000,000,000 in insurance and a drain of $13,000,000,000 in loans on policies.

Since 1933, he said, millions of dollars in RFC and HOLC loans have put a number of insurance companies back on their feet and sales have increased until last year $2,200,000,000 in policies was written. That figure, he said, represented one of the most favorable years in insurance history.

Citing 8,323 bank failures during the Hoover Administration, with a loss to depositors of $3,000,000,000, Boykin said there had been only 57 failures during 1934, 34 failures during 1935, and 31 failures so far this year. In none of these, he added, had a depositor lost money.

The Roosevelt Administration has so strengthened the public confidence, the speaker declared, that today bank deposits are 42 per cent above the 1933 total.

"These figures speak for themselves," he said. "They are our own reply to the unlawful and irresponsible fear-mongering of Col. Knox."

Other speakers were Maryland State Senator Stedman Prescott and J. S. Dawson, jr., president of the United Young Men's Democratic Clubs of Montgomery County. Mrs. Charles Y. Latimer, president of the United Democratic Women's Clubs of the county, presided at the meeting and introduced the speakers. Music was furnished by Mrs. Mary O'Brien and her accordion accompanist, Helen McLaughlin.

Edith Maxwell's Neighbors Shift Slaying Attitude

Hostility Against Mountain Girl in Death of Her Father Lessens.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Wise, Va., Sept. 24.—Edith Maxwell, the 22-year-old Cumberland Mountain school teacher, who faces a second trial November 16, on a charge of killing her coal-miner father with a slipper, will encounter a changed atmosphere when she returns to her home in The Pound, a cross-roads hamlet 13 miles from here.

Edith is now living on the farm of relatives outside of Richmond. She was released on $6,000 bond last week after the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals had granted her a new trial. In the first trial, she was found guilty of first-degree murder and sentenced to 25 years in the penitentiary. This verdict, the high court said, was not justified by the evidence

That opinion of the court, together with protests from all over the world, accounts for the lessening of hostility toward Edith down here.

Defended Verdict.

At first many of the mountain people, rankled by what they regarded as unfair remarks in the metropolitan press, stubbornly defended the verdict. They said "outsiders" were in no position to judge the case.

But when the supreme court of their own State denounced the verdict, and at the same accused the trial judge of having "erred" in not setting it aside, they were forced to unbend in their attitude.

They admit that if it had not been for outside interest—notably the interest of readers of The Washington Post, who financed the fight for a new trial, Edith in all likelihood would be a mere number in the State penitentiary, a 25-year sentence hanging over her.

Still Angry.

It would not be correct to say that all hostility toward Edith Maxwell has disappeared. There are some who are still angry with her because of the publicity given Wise County. But the people for the most part think that the county will have a better conscience when the case is tried over again.

Even so, Charles Henry Smith, Alexandria (Va.) attorney, brought into the case by The Post, is determined to fight for a change of venue on the ground that the young teacher cannot get a fair trial in this county. The court's attitude on this remains to be revealed. But many natives of Wise agree that a change of venue would be a good thing.

Democrats Will Hold Rally in Prince Georges

Trio Injured as Plane Overturns on Landing

Leavenworth, Kans., Sept. 24 (AP).—An Army officer and two soldiers were injured late today when a 14,000-pound bimotored bombing plane from Langley Field, Va., overturned on landing at Sherman Field, Fort Leavenworth, after a test flight.

Corpl. William R. Murray, Langley Field, suffered a fractured left thigh and body bruises. Second Lieut. E. S. Scott, pilot of the plane, Langley Field, and Private Randall Headden, Quartermaster Corps, Fort Leavenworth, were cut and bruised.

Storm Perils Nova Scotia.

Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 24 (AP).—The Federal hurricane advisory system warned tonight a tropical storm of gale force was moving rapidly toward Yarmouth, N. S. The storm, the warning system said, was the one which originated last week near the source of the hurricane which recently battered its way up the Atlantic seaboard from the Carolinas to New York.

IT IS A FAR CRY FROM THE HALLS OF MONTEZUMA TO THE CORNER OF 11th and F STREETS

① William & Mary
② Late Georgian
③ Lady Diana
④ Fairfax
⑤ Minuet

THE sands of time have said goodbye to many generations since Spanish conquistadors first startled the world with fabulous discoveries of silver in Mexico. The unbelievable march of Cortes with 400 men across a savage country up to the very Halls of Montezuma, Aztec Chief, has gone down in history as a saga of daring.

It seems a far cry, today, from the conquest of Mexico to the precious wares in Woodward & Lothrop's Silver Room. Yet every silver bowl, yes, every fork and spoon which gleams from these abundant shelves, owes its existence in some measure to Cortes, the incredible Spaniard, and to his kind.

Almost a third of the world's supply of silver comes from Mexico . . . nearly three-fourths from the entire New World. It was not idle curiosity which launched explorer's ships to sail uncharted seas in search of land . . . and silver.

From the old world comes the fine tradition of skilled craftsmanship . . . the knowledge and patience to work the pale metal into useful forms.

But from the New World comes an almost unlimited supply of pure silver, exceeding the wildest dreams of the adventurous.

In times gone by, none but the richest could afford to have silver for their tables. The cost was so prohibitive, because of limited supply, that ways were devised to save expense by super-imposing a coat of silver upon some baser metal. In Sheffield, England, this was done with such consummate skill that Sheffield Plate became the standard. Today, however, sterling silver actually costs less than old-time Sheffield Plate. Those who purchase silverware today get not only the joy which comes from owning something beautiful and enduring, but have that comfortable assurance that comes of having made a shrewd investment.

For three generations Washington has looked to Woodward and Lothrop for the best of everything. Not interested in mere volume sales, but in rendering customer satisfaction, nevertheless Woodward and Lothrop sells a large part of the fine silverware that is sold in Washington. Partly responsible for this is the large and fine stock of silver always shown by Woodward and Lothrop. Partly responsible is the knowledge and taste in selecting from the best silversmiths, and the ability to obtain workmanship without paying a price premium.

But chiefly responsible is the confidence that the public places in the name of Woodward and Lothrop as representing the best tradition of an industry in which integrity and skill play such an important part.

U. S. Ship Units Join Activities In Subsidy Plan

Two Studies Held Vital to Future of Industry to Begin Soon.

By the Associated Press.

Existing Federal shipping agencies yesterday prepared to unite their activities into a new and far-reaching subsidy program under the Maritime Commission, designed to revitalize the American merchant marine.

With appointment of three of the five maritime commissioners at Hyde Park Wednesday night, President Roosevelt signalled launching of the new program.

Officials reported the 600 regular employes of the Shipping Board Bureau and the Merchant Fleet Corporation will be continued for a six-month "probation period" under the civil service ratings.

Two Important Studies.

The commission will take over all activities of the existing agencies 30 days hence and, meanwhile, will begin two studies of vital importance to American shipping.

One study will determine whether any existing trade routes are "non-essential" and should be stricken from the Federal subsidy list. The other will be an analysis of cargoes, foreign competition, revenues, construction and operating costs and other factors which will enable the commission to lay down a yardstick for allocating subsidies.

In the forefront of its administrative problems rests the tedious work of adjusting mail-carrying contracts and substituting the direct subsidies provided under the new law.

These mail contracts must be terminated by July 1, 1937. Extensive work may be involved in coming to an understanding with ship operators.

Applications Filed.

Officials said 20 of the 43 contract holders already have filed applications for adjustments and substitution of direct subsidies. How long it will take to work out individual settlements, however, is problematical.

The subsidies will be based directly upon the difference between construction and operating costs in foreign countries and those in the United States.

To launch the subsidy program, the commission will have $1,000,000,000 from the Shipping Board Bureau and the Postoffice Department plus about $87,000,000 of notes receivable held by the Shipping Board.

The three commissioners named by Mr. Roosevelt—Rear Admiral Henry A. Wiley, retired; Rear Admiral Harry G. Hamlet, former Coast Guard commandant, and George Landick, jr., of the Treasury Procurement Division—are expected to meet for organization within the next few days.

Under the command of Capt. Clarence D. Wheeler, 15 planes of the Thirty-sixth Pursuit Squadron, Langley Field, will make the flight between noon and 1 p. m. Tuesday. The goal of the campaign from Sunday, September 27, to October 16, is 65,000 members.

Led by Capt. Wheeler, the formation will skirt the downtown area, flying on a line between the Lincoln Memorial and the Library of Congress, then north to the Union Station yards, and westward over K street to Connecticut avenue. In case of bad weather the flight will be held the following dya.

Consumers Ask 8-Cent Milk For Aid Groups

Council Meets With Unit of Community Chest; Pool Planned.

The Washington Consumers Council yesterday took the initial steps in a move to get milk at 8 cents a quart for welfare agencies operating under the Community Chest.

Mrs. John Boyle, jr., Mrs. Huston Thompson and Matthew Boyd, all of the Consumers Council, met with the executive committee of the Community Chest and asked for a meeting of welfare agency heads to consider pooling their buying power and getting milk from a common distributor.

Under the council plan, competitive bids would be asked and the contract for the entire welfare agencies' supply given to the low bidder. Such a move, Boyd explained, would put the group of welfare agencies on the same bargaining basis with large institutions and would result in dropping the price from the 11 cents a quart now paid to approximately 8 cents a quart.

He added that the official per quart price to welfare agencies is now 13 cents but that the distributors ordinarily rebate 2 cents of this in the form of charitable contributions to the agencies.

Meanwhile, local attorneys representing groups of farmers were preparing to file injunction petitions in District Court asking that Secretary Wallace be enjoined from enforcing the milk marketing agreement which went into effect in the Washington area Monday.

The attorneys are Sefton Darr, representing about 100 producers in Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia, and Louis I. Obergh. Darr said last night that he expected to file his injunction petition before the end of the week.

Catholic Press Asked To Fight Neo-Paganism

Rome, Sept. 24 (AP).—A call for a world crusade in the Catholic press against neo-paganism was sounded tonight by Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state.

The new paganism, he said in inaugurating the International Congress of Catholic Journalists, "is producing the same state of low world morals and dedication to materialism" as flourished in the time of pagan Rome.

44 Arabs Are Killed In Clash With British

Jerusalem, Sept. 24 (AP).—Forty-four Arabs were killed in battle with British troops and scouting planes near Jenin today. Nightfall halted the fight. One plane was shot down and the pilot taken to a hospital, but the British troops suffered no fatalities.

With Lieut. Gen. John Greer Dill organizing a force of 30,000 men, including reinforcements en route from England, it was reported martial law would be proclaimed Sunday unless the Arab general strike was ended.

Discover Modern Gas Cookery

SCIENCE'S LATEST RECIPE FOR KITCHEN FREEDOM . . . BETTER MEALS

Cooking today is not the task of days gone by. Not with Modern Gas Cookery! Today cooking takes less time. Kitchen hours are pleasant hours. You can enjoy better and more healthfully cooked meals. And you can save money as well. The simple secret is a Modern Gas Range!

Automatic heat control prevents fuel waste, makes baking failures almost impossible. Insulated ovens enable you to do 15 to 20% more cooking with the same amount of gas. Smokeless broilers seal in the flavor of meats, broil in about half the time. There are hosts of other outstanding advantages.

If your present range lacks these features—it's time to change to Modern Gas Cookery!

There's nothing like GAS for BROILING — Gas gives you the intense heat needed to brown meats so fast that loss of juices is prevented. Full flavor is saved.

ROASTING — Gas gives you the oven ventilation which produces crisp, juicy roasts. Excess moisture is allowed to escape, preventing that flat "steamed flavor."

BAKING — Baking requires even heat throughout the oven and unlimited range of baking temperatures, for light, evenly browned cakes, pies, breads. Gas gives both!

FRYING — Perfect, speedy frying requires instant high heat—even spread of heat under the skillet—numberless heat variations. Gas gives all three!

BOILING — Fastest! Gas brings foods to a boil in ½ the time or less of other fuels. More flexible, it gives you the exact shades of heat you need.

11 Are Indicted In $1,300,000 Bank Shortage

Thefts Traced From Bookkeeper's Market Speculations Decade Ago.

By the Associated Press.

Erie, Pa., Sept. 24.—A Federal grand jury indicted 11 persons today in connection with an alleged shortage of approximately $1,300,000 in the Commercial National Bank, of Bradford, Pa.

Bench warrants were issued for the arrest of the defendants, most of them well known in the oil town of Bradford, situated near the New York-Pennsylvania line.

District Attorney Charles S. Uhl said his inquiry traced the beginning of the bank's troubles to a bookkeeper's speculation in the stock market 10 years ago, gradually involving others.

Those indicted here: Howard J. Benson, assistant trust officer of the Bradford Bank; Floyd R. Parmenter, trust officer and cashier; Stanley B. Benton note teller; John W. Becker, office manager and director; W. Russell Hungerford, bookkeeper; W. Alderson Lynch, stenographer; Ella E. McCaig, assistant bookkeeper and typist; Hazel A. Benson, discount clerk; Harold Miller, savings teller; Wilson R. Campbell, president of the Farmers and Mechanics Trust Co., of Bath, N. Y., and John T. Cunningham, president of Cunningham Natural Gas Corporation, of Bradford.

The 11,000 depositors of the institution, who had about $4,465,000 in the bank, were protected by Federal deposit insurance.

Bank examiners discovered the shortage in September, 1935. Frank W. Calkins, 47-year-old assistant cashier, left while the accountants were perusing the books and was found dead from monoxide fumes in his garage.

Uhl said the investigation showed Calkins attempted to cover shortages that developed from speculation in the market, started in 1926 by J. Reed Campbell, bookkeeper.

Campbell, too, died under conditions similar to Calkins. His body was found in a garage in June, 1931, and investigators attributed his death to monoxide fumes.

3,000 District Teachers Sign Anti-Communist Declarations

Papers Now on Way to Pay Roll Department; Other School Employes of City Also Take Oath Against Red Advocacy.

Back on the job just three days, Washington's 3,000 public school teachers probably have been too busy with enrolling pupils and organizing classes to even think of extra-curricular activities—the subject of communism, for example.

Yet, anticipating their first checks since last June, they already have neither taught nor advocated this subversive topic. In fact the forms on which the declarations are printed were in the teachers' hands last Tuesday—the second day of school. And they are now on their way to the pay roll department.

The September checks will be ready for distribution next Wednesday, the last day of the month, Robert L. Haycock, first assistant superintendent of schools, said yesterday. And because of the great amount of clerical work that has to be done, the "red" declarations have to be signed about ten days before checks are due.

"This is in line with regular procedure," Haycock explained. "The system was approved last year. The teachers sign their declarations even though they still have several days to go before they get their checks."

For anyone who thinks this oath-taking a simple matter of signing a paper with one hand and accepting a check in the other, there is this information about procedure:

Teachers take the signed statement to their principal. The principal makes sure the names have all been signed as they will appear on the checks and turns the forms over to the supervising principal of her division. The supervising principal looks over the names again, and takes them to the statistician's office in Franklin Administration Building. There the names are checked over against the pay roll list, which, when approved, goes to the District Building, where the checks are made out.

What goes for the teachers goes for the school system's 100 clerks and office assistants, the 400 custodians, and the administrative staff.

Employes who never appear before a class of pupils have declared the same as teachers do because of the word "advocate," Haycock said.

"A custodian doesn't have a chance to 'teach' communism, but he might be suspected of 'advocating.' So he has to sign a form, too."

Coughlin Hints 'Use of Bullets'

Cincinnati, Sept. 24 (AP).—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin declared tonight that "when any upstart dictator in the United States succeeds in making of this Nation a one-party form of Government, and the ballot becomes useless, I shall have the courage to stand up and advocate the use of bullets."

He told a rally of the National Union for Social Justice also that "the red flag has been uplifted in America; we must stop, look and listen, lest disaster confront us."

Police Guard Witness Against Hooded Legion

Detroit, Sept. 24 (AP).—Emerson Becker, Black Legion member who said "my lift isn't worth two cents now," after he had testified against 12 men charged with lynching Charles A. Poole, was given police protection today.

Becker testified he attended a Black Legion meeting a few hours before Poole was shot to death May 12, that he heard members of the hooded band shout that Poole should be killed.

Parking Plans For Boat Races Are Announced

Specially Routed Buses Will Be Provided for Regatta Crowds.

Special parking and transportation arrangements have been made by the committee in charge to care for the thousands who are expected to watch the sail and motorboat races during the President's Cup Regatta, today through Sunday.

The Capital Transit Co. will provide specially routed buses to pick up motorists who want to leave their cars near the regatta course.

Passengers will be picked up by special buses at four marked points along the south Potomac Parkway, the Capital Transit Co. announced.

This special bus service will be augmented whenever passenger traffic demands it, the company asserted.

It was announced yesterday that lots near the Department of Commerce would be open tonight, tomorrow afternoon and all day Sunday.

The Constitution avenue parking area opposite the Navy Department also will be available during the same periods.

Parking also will be permitted on driveways and roads in the vicinity of the Lincoln Memorial and other points in the Potomac Park area.

Over 3,000,000 Get Aid in Farm Areas

The Resettlement Administration yesterday reported that more than 3,000,000 persons, representing upwards of 800,000 families, were being assisted in rural areas.

It said 102,000 drought victims had been helped by grants or loans up to September 12, and increase of more than 20,000 in three weeks. In addition, the agency said 750,000 farm families were regular clients of its rehabilitation service.

Since April, 1935, the report said $106,000,000 had been spent on rehabilitation.

Various works projects under the agency were said to employ 55,000 family heads. These included 40,000 men working on the land program of resettlement, clearing forests, checking land erosion and building wild life refuges and recreational areas. Another 16,000 were reported employed on construction of rural and suburban communities.

Aimee's Daughter Leaves.

Los Angeles, Sept. 24 (AP).—Aimee Semple McPherson's daughter today announced she was moving out of the parsonage of the Four Square Gospel, but the evangelist mother insisted reports of a new row at Angelus Temple were "decidedly not true."

'Spittingest' Man Defies High Wind To Capture Title

Fishersville, Va., Sept. 24 (AP).—Jasper Davis, bronzed and robust Fishersville farmer, successfully battled a high wind here today to win the title of "spittingest" man in South River District.

Taking a generous chaw from his hip-pocket plug, Davis scored a bull's eye at 12 feet 9 inches to lead the field by a full inch. Bill Barton, who prefers the tobacco twist, spat mightily but lacked accuracy beyond 12 feet 8 inches.

The wind was too much for Jake Kiblinger, another veteran, whose best efforts were far short of the leaders. He claimed third place with a measured range of 8 feet 9 inches.

Prim maids and housewives retired discreetly to the fancy work departments of the Fishersville Community Fair, while the "spittoon nimrods" warmed up for their battle for one of the most cherished titles in the district.

Girl, 18, Scalded

Dorothy Libbey, 18, of 211 Eleventh street southeast, was scalded severely late yesterday when she tripped and fell down a flight of stairs at her home as she was carrying a basin of water. She was taken to Gallinger Hospital, where physicians described her condition as serious.

Here's us fishing before the creek got to drying up like it did

That's my brother William leaning down from the log, and me reaching his drink up to him, and Larry Burkes over on the bank grinning like everything and helping himself. Larry's been a friend of the Wilken Family pretty near ever since our Family first took up distilling. I couldn't just say as Larry was acquainted with Grandad Wilken when he started out. I'm referring to his knowing Dad and all the rest of us. Larry says he never heard of any other family distilling one generation after another like ours. I don't know about that, but I guess there's no other Family's Recipe like ours anyhow!

Harry E. Wilken

You're getting the self same whiskey as us!

—and our Family's been distilling 50 odd years

I'll just bet Grandad Wilken's eyes would pop if he was here to see how everybody's so keen for The Wilken Family's own personal recipe! And I just know we're trying like anything to follow out every one of his teachings so as he'd have a right to be real proud of us.

When you come right down to it, William and Tom and me—and I guess all you folks that are so tickled over the mildness and tastiness of The Wilken Family Whiskey—I guess we all have got to hand every bit of the credit to Grandad and Dad. It was Grandad that taught Dad, and Dad that taught us. So there's no getting around it—all we're doing now is watching out to make sure every batch we turn out is made just like Dad said to.

Well there's no fear of us ever slacking up on our care. You'd find the lot of us on the job every day from 6 a.m. till quitting time. It was mighty seldom we got off to fish this summer. Well, the creek's all dried up now anyhow!

Speaking Of Incompetence.

What Lloyd George writes in his memoirs regarding American participation in the World War should be a matter of profound indifference to this country. History shows abundantly how anxious the wartime British premier was to secure American participation in the struggle. And the record does not indicate that he was thereafter anxious to dispense with our assistance, in spite of "American indecision and bustling incompetency."

There is a subject of much more moment to the present generation on which Mr. Lloyd George could make some timely revelations, though he is unlikely to do so. It concerns his own "bustling incompetency" in making peace. Whatever the shortcomings of America's war-making machine they fade into insignificance beside the incredible bungling which this self-styled statesman committed at Versailles.

It is for the heritage of disaster which he so largely helped to create for future generations that Lloyd George will be remembered in history. And what he writes in his memoirs about the "fussy muddle" of American participation will not divert the larger responsibility from the head on which so much of it belongs.

The Maritime Commission.

By making temporary appointments to get the work of the Maritime Commission under way President Roosevelt has manifested his awareness of the urgent tasks awaiting this body. His action suggests, also, that he is eager to select the best qualified men available for these posts without further delaying organization and temporary operation of this new "I. C. C." for the merchant marine.

Each of the temporary commissioners has much to commend him.—Aside from his extensive knowledge of ships and the sea, and his experience as a former commander in chief of the naval fleet, Admiral Wiley has served on a number of arbitration boards since his retirement. His age is likely to be his chief handicap. Rear Admiral Hamlet has won public confidence and respect through his services as commandant of the Coast Guard. No doubt he will prove to be a valuable member of the commission. Apparently George Landick, jr., owes his appointment to his 32 years of experience in Government contract, equipment and supply work.

The viewpoint of the Government is certainly well represented in the temporary commission. It is reasonable to suppose, therefore, that the other two members will be chosen to represent the views of the shipping industry and those of organized labor. If that is the plan, the President's desire to give the matter still further study can be easily understood. For these appointments will be more difficult than was the selection of three men who have grown up in the Government service.

Even so, there is ample reason to hope that the final appointments will be made in the near future. Labor troubles in the merchant marine are becoming more and more serious. The services of an expert in this field, with sufficient experience and prestige to command the respect of both employers and employed, is much in demand. Without such aid, the commission would begin its career under a serious handicap.

More One-Man Street Cars.

Considerable dissatisfaction has already been manifested over the Public Utilities Commission order permitting one-man operation of 20 additional street cars of the Capital Transit Co. There are many indications, however, that the ruling will redound to the public interest.

The question was given exhaustive study by the P. U. C. After long hearings the evidence was scrutinized for two months before a decision was reached. In that decision the welfare of the public in general appears to have been considered with the utmost care. The company was granted permission to buy and operate 20 used one-man cars only on condition that they replace obsolete one-man cars now in operation. That certainly would be a gain.

Speed may be slowed down somewhat by one-man operation, but this disadvantage may be off-set by the discard of obsolete rolling stock. If, as the commission intimates, economies are essential to permit the company to purchase more up-to-date equipment, it is difficult to see how those economies conflict with the public welfare.

From the theoretical viewpoint the two-man cars are doubtless superior. But it is the duty of the commission to study the problem from every angle in fairness to the company as well as its patrons. There seems to be nothing in the record of this case to suggest that the P. U. C. has failed in that essential function.

On Keeping News Unbiased.

Freedom of the press is happily not an active issue in the 1936 campaign. Interest reverts to this old established principle chiefly because the right of printing uncensored opinions has been so widely abrogated in other parts of the world. In view of that tendency it is both significant and gratifying to have both the major Presidential candidates emphasize the importance of free expression as a first essential in the operation of democracy.

When the President made his memorable address to the General Conference of Code Authorities on March 5, 1934, he denounced all negative criticism as "unpatriotic." In brief, he laid down the formula that citizens with alternative solutions for specific problems might properly criticize plans originated by the Government. But patriotism should induce those having no alternative plans to hold their tongues.

Fortunately there seems to be no trace of such an insidiously repressive attitude in the President's current message to the Herald Tribune's Forum on Current Problems. Rather he waived any objection to editorial opinion free from misstatement of fact, and laids the following emphasis upon the very vital responsibility of newspapers to keep their news columns free from bias:

> I do not believe—and I do not think any disagreement is possible on this subject—that a journal's news columns ought to be tampered with, either by coloring news or by leaving out news. The news is the commodity that is marketed to the whole people.

Mr. Roosevelt's point is well taken. Headlines that reveal prejudice and news stories sullied with partisanship are no asset to any newspaper. The press has an enormous responsibility to print "the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth" as nearly free from bias and coloring as the best journalistic judgment can make it. That is a high standard to set. However, it is no less desirable because frequently ignored by publications more interested in politics and sensationalism than in real public service.

As a corollary to the fine principle enunciated by the President, impartiality and scrupulous regard for facts should also characterize the "news" originating in governmental agencies. It is no secret that some New Deal "information bureaus" have degenerated until they verge on propaganda dissemination. An enormous volume of "publicity," distinctly partisan in tone and none too complete in factual basis, is furnished to the newspapers by the present Administration.

What the President says with regard to news columns is equally applicable to the news releases and publications put out by the Government itself. It could scarcely be argued that the Government set up to serve all the people has less of a public obligation in this respect than privately owned publications. The WPA, the Resettlement Administration and various other much-publicized agencies may usefully interpret the President's criticism as applicable to themselves as well as to the press.

In Defiance Of Italy.

Acting as members of the League of Nations, 39 governments have voted to seat Haile Selassie's representatives as a delegation with full powers in the current League Assembly. The action flatly denies recognition to the Italian conquest of Ethiopia and, incidentally, ends for the present any Italian hopes of floating loans with which to exploit the country which she holds under military subjection.

The temptation was great to find an easier way out of the dilemma created by Mussolini's demand for the exclusion of Ethiopia from League meetings. It is a tribute to the vitality of the Geneva enterprise that no compromise on the issue was accepted.

Not only Great Britain and France, but all the other nations voting to seat Ethiopia, would like to see Italy remain in the League and collaborate in its labors. But where the British and French government were, at first, prepared to consider violence to the spirit of the League Covenant in order to satisfy Mussolini, the smaller powers were not.

They clearly recognized that exclusion of Ethiopia from the Assembly would be tantamount to recognition of the validity of Italy's conquest of a fellow League member. They perhaps envisaged the day when some other weak nations may be in Ethiopia's present position. So, in the upshot, only three of Italy's satellites—Austria, Hungary and Albania—and Ecuador voted to prevent the exiled Ethiopian government from claiming its seat as a "fully self-governing state."

To be sure, an independent Ethiopia will not be resurrected as an independent nation through any votes taken at Geneva. Nevertheless the problem of whether or not the exiled Emperor's delegation should be seated was one of great moral importance. It is a tribute to the democratic spirit with which the League is imbued that this was recognized by the Assembly.

Should Italy now resign its absence will be regretted. Possibly such action might even accelerate disintegration at Geneva. But it would be far better for the League to go down with its flag flying, and its record of endeavor unsullied, than to survive merely as an instrument of high politics, dominated by one or another of the great powers for its own particular ends. Moreover, such manifestations of independence as the Assembly has now shown may, in the long run, prove much more a source of strength than any opportunistic deference to a successful aggressor.

A Field For Regulation.

Those who are in the habit of extolling the good manners of British trade unions, and who ask why American labor is often so much less genteel, will find at least a partial answer in the testimony now being recorded by the Senate civil liberties committee. Dante's vision of the Inferno is recalled by the pictures of scalding steam, high tension wires and poison gas preparations brought out by the cross-examination of private detectives who have served as strikebreakers.

As yet, the employers of the detectives have not fully given their side of the story. But they will be bold men if they attempt to approve the tactics of those "gorillas" who, by their own testimony, are as willing to cheat their patrons as to undermine employe morale by any means. Even without waiting for further unsavory evidence, it seems clear that the committee must report back to the Senate that there are "undue interferences with the right of labor to organize" and, in further fulfillment of its instructions, that remedial legislation is desirable.

What type of legislation is best to meet so disgraceful a situation is another problem. Senator La Follette, the committee chairman, is from Wisconsin and the Wisconsin Legislature last year adopted a law requiring private police to register with municipal clerks in the localities of their employ. The registrations being public documents, this procedure tends to discourage espionage and other undercover activities. It also tends to disqualify men with unsavory police records from finding employment, as they now are accustomed to, in private detective agencies.

Possibly some adaptation of this local legislation may seem desirable. At least there is no doubt that control over these abuses should be a concern of the Federal Government. This was made clear yesterday, when testimony revealed the Connecticut agent of an Ohio chemical company as doing "missionary work" in stirring up strikes where gas sales might be made.

The whole problem gives admirable point to Gov. Landon's recent observation that the issue is "not whether there have been abuses in the economic system that need to be corrected." Rather, he described the choice in the campaign as between Government regulation and Government management of business. Here, decidedly, is a situation where regulation is in order.

Not A Lip to Land On.

Properly, all fairy stories begin with the phrase "Once upon a time." Every bit as traditional is the ending of all movies with a kiss signifying that "they lived happily ever after." Of course, there are pictures in which the love interest is subordinated, but they are the exception. Now comes word from Hollywood that Cupid is to be practically demoted from leading roles and relegated to playing "bits."

Contrary to popular opinion, the kiss did not originate in Hollywood. Even the Chamber of Commerce of that region of climate and cameras would not be so bold as to claim that. But it does look as though osculation is to meet an inglorious end there.

The preferred blonde, Lorelei Lee, once said that a kiss on the wrist was very nice but a diamond bracelet lasted forever. That was because Lorelei was a realist. And now we hear that kissing in pictures is about to be shelved because Hollywood is "getting more imaginative." Between the two, it looks as if the kiss soon won't have a lip left to land on.

A Cooling Contrast.

From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

We recommend that you get a long, cool drink, sit under an electric fan and concentrate on this dispatch from Buenos Aires.

"Argentina is in the grip of the severest cold wave of the year, with heavy snowfall in many parts of Buenos Aires Province and also in such widely separated regions as Mendoza City and Salta, the latter 900 miles nearer the equator than this city is. The temperature touched 2 degrees below freezing here this morning and several points to the south and west reported temperatures between 25 and 30 degrees, Fahrenheit. The coldest spot in Argentina today was at the statue of Christ of the Andes, above the trans-Andean tunnel, where 6 degrees below zero was reported."

"Throttling Liberty."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am not much inclined to write letters to newspapers and as a rule I refrain from doing so, but when I read some of the babblings published from the pens of some people who are no doubt laboring under the delusion that they are true Americans and that anyone who happens to take a different view to their own should leave this country, I cannot but be aroused to righteous indignation.

Your issue of September 16 carried such a letter signed by Clara Hine, of Alexandria, in which she stated that "if Ludke does not like to do that (namely, salute the flag), he should leave this country and try some other place where they kill the people for their belief in God." May I state right here that Mr. Ludke and his children are exercising their rights as provided by the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of Maryland, in which they live. Since they are proven to be law-abiding in every respect and since their failure or refusal to salute the flag cannot possibly harm anyone, then why should they leave this country and go some other place to be killed?

Since the afore-mentioned writer thinks that is what she wants done to those with whom she takes issue, maybe she should go to Germany, for instance, where a failure or refusal to stand up and 'Heil Hitler" and salute the Nazi flag is counted a crime for which the most cruel and inhuman punishment is meted out to the offenders.

What would that great man, Thomas Jefferson, think of such throttling of the liberties of the people as the expelling of these Ludke children from school, where each one, to my personal knowledge, received the highest average and the most excellent term reports I have ever seen? What would that other great Virginian, Patrick Henry, who cried, "Give me liberty or give me death, say to such tyranny? If he could see the way the liberties of the people are being destroyed and in their stead a despotism being inaugurated second, only to that wicked so-called "Holy Inquisition," he could only say, "I am glad I died when I did."

It is high time that those who really love liberty and peace should take their stand for it instead of wanting any and everyone sent out of the country who has the courage of their conviction. Shame on the individuals and so-called patriotic organizations who have either never known or have forgotten the principles of freedom and justice upon which this country was founded. This has been called "the land of the free and home of the brave," but now it seems that anyone who is brave enough to stand up for his rights brings down the wrath of these self-styled, not real, Americans upon their heads.

I did appreciate your editorial some time ago in which you also defended the right to freedom here and I hope I may see more, but I warn you, it will bring the wrath of these "un-" Americans upon your head.

Safe And Quiet Traffic.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having read your article on the P. U. C. and traffic situation here in Washington may I state that traffic is being controlled in both London and Paris.

One feels safer in Piccadilly Circus than one feels at Eighteenth and Columbia road. One can sleep at night in the heart of London and Paris while at Sixteenth and Harvard streets it is often bedlam at midnight.

The Consumer Consumed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The complete abandonment of the former NRA consumers division leaves the consumer, in the face of the constantly rising commodity prices, at the mercy of the entrepreneur. Secretary Roper recently warned against inflation in real estate, which is very timely, but housing is only a part of the consumer's burden. Food, that ever-present necessity, is constantly becoming more expensive.

Here in Washington, where the Government controls the income of a large part of the population, will not some agency turn a hand to prevent its army of servants from being crushed beneath the nether millstone of rising prices? The drought, the election, and returning prosperity are all but excuses for some middlemen to "make a killing." How many will be made in a winter of inflationary prices remains to be seen.

Some blame the AAA for high prices. They have a consumer council. Let them, then, together with the remaining NRA consumers division, work our way out of this dilemma. This is no time to leave the consumer without representation in the Government organization. If higher prices to the farmer is the desideratum (and my share of a farm is not yet able to support itself), well and good. But whatever the return to the producer, the goods must eventually be consumed, or eventually drag down the market.

In order to buy, the would-be consumer must have the price of the goods. Income remaining constant, prices continuing to rise, resulting inability to buy. The $1,000-a-year clerk will not be warm and well fed before the winter is over (if he is, now), unless this steady advance in food prices is not checked, or incomes raised to keep pace with the rising cost of living.

Why "They Hate Roosevelt."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Ever since reading a magazine article several months ago, in regard to the hatred of certain people for Roosevelt, I have been trying to analyze the motive behind such hatred and have been unable to account for it, unless it is the perversity of human nature, or a determined effort on the part of the "special interests" and the privileged classes, to get control of the Government again, so that they can pursue their nefarious practices unmolested by Government regulation.

It seems ironical that the very class of people who hate Roosevelt most are the ones who have profited more largely from his policies. Aside from his help to the farmers; his relief of the unemployed; his attempts to guarantee social and economic justice to all, and his other numerous benevolent objects, he has benefited all classes, including banks, insurance companies, real estate men, lawyers, and in fact every class of society.

It is very comforting to think that the "haters" will be rebuked at the polls in November, for I feel sure that the majority of the people are not willing to go back to the old Hoover days.

Miss Thompson's Address.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Reference is made to Miss Dorothy Thompson's address at the dinner opening the Mobilization for Human Needs Conference.

My object is to thank you for the space in your excellent paper giving opportunity for persons who do their own best thinking a chance to read and digest her wonderful discourse. It reads like some of a Japanese philosopher, Yoritomo-Taski, "the reviser of the empire's code of laws." He rescued his native land from the slough of demoralization into which it had sunk in 1186. He did not say "to create," but to "reawaken" in men's souls a resolution toward good and a hatred of evil.

Britain And The Palestine Mandate.

To the Editor of The Post— Sir: Politicians are, perhaps, necessary evils in government, but that they are the greatest of evils incident to government and are responsible for much of the troubles of mankind, is self-evident.

The chief characteristics of the politician is that he rarely thinks exclusively in terms of national interest and welfare, present or future, but solely of his own personal and political fortunes. Senator Copeland is at present a case in point. While he is not up for re-election this year he is doubtless looking to the future when he will be.

He has the largest Jewish constituency in the country. He has just returned from a visit to Palestine. He reports there are about 12,000 American Jews there. He charges that Great Britain has been derelict and has fallen down in her administration of the mandate given her over Palestine by the Versailles treaty, and that the United States should do something about it.

In the first place, these Jews are expatriates. They pay no taxes for the support of the United States, and are charged with no duty or responsibility for their defense. There rests, therefore, no obligation on the part of the United States Government to interfere in their behalf. And if we did the probability is that Great Britain would properly tell us to mind our own business, or might suggest that we take over the mandate, which she would be only too glad to be rid of. Is there any reason to believe we could or would do any better? The answer in the negative is the mess we have made of our Indian problems, the Philippines, the Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico, etc.

And, finally, it is not believed that Dr. Copeland is primarily interested in the Jews of Palestine, but that his simulated interest in them is motivated solely to carry favor with the Jewish voters in his State, and that but for this large vote nothing would ever have been heard from him on the subject.

He certainly could not have had the best interest of the United States at heart in making the suggestion that we interfere in this matter. And well may it be asked: Have we not enough troubles at home without hunting more trouble in remote parts of the world?

We are not a homogeneous people, but are composed of representatives of all nationalities, most of whom are not so long removed from their original habitats, and who still have ties of kinship in, and retain affection for the countries of their origin. The result is that every time anything happens to the kindred or friends in the countries from whence they come they want the United States to intervene in their behalf. If our Government did as it is constantly being urged to do, as in Mexico, Germany, Spain, Italy and other countries, by these discordant and unassimilated elements among us, we would be at enmity, and, perhaps eventually, at war with the entire world.

New Orleans Gambling

The following is composed of extracts from an article by Herbert Asbury appearing in the current American Mercury.

THE dominating vice of Creole New Orleans, early in the last century, was a passion for gambling which has never since been equaled on this side of the Atlantic Ocean. Addiction to games of chance was so nearly universal, and became so definitely a trait of local character, as to foster a tradition that the first of the riffraff colonists sent to Louisiana by the Mississippi Company stepped ashore with a deck of cards in his pocket and a roulette wheel under his arm. Professional gamblers appeared on the scene in large numbers as soon as the flatboats and keelboats began coming down the Mississippi, and Girod and Tchoupitoulas streets bloomed as the favorite haunts of the boat crews and the rougher elements of the city's population. In both of these areas every dive, even the bordellos, furnished facilities for gambling and practically all of them were crooked.

So far as the records show, the only square game among the scores frequented by the river men was to be found in a little roulette house on Tchoupitoulas street, operated by an old Frenchman named Grampin, who went bankrupt in an extraordinary fashion. Among his regular customers was a flatboat captain who came in every night while he was in port and bet 25 cents—never more and never less—on the red at roulette.

One night the captain sat down, staked his coin, and leaned his head on his hand while Grampin spun the wheel. Red won, and the money was doubled. As the captain did not pick up his winnings, Grampin again started the little ball rolling, and again it stopped on red, once more doubling the stake. Again and again the frantic Frenchman spun the wheel, and each time red won, while the flatboat captain sat like a stone image, apparently oblivious both to his good fortune and to the excitement which his play was creating.

At the sixteenth turn of the wheel, when the captain's winnings amounted to about $8,000 on his original investment of a quarter, Grampin pushed all the money he had across the table and excitedly ordered the river man to leave. When the latter still did not move, Grampin pushed him, and he rolled stiffly from his chair to the floor. He was dead.

* * * *

Of the few old-time river gamblers who were known as "square players," and who depended entirely upon luck and skill, the most celebrated were Dick Hargraves and Maj. George M. White. The last named followed gambling as a profession for 62 years, and won and lost a dozen fortunes. He began his career in New Orleans in 1825, when 20 years old, and dealt his last card in 1887, his hand still firm and his eye clear at 82. Maj. White made a profit of $30,000 in one year—1857—on the Mississippi, and for several years received $400 a week to run a faro bank in New Orleans, said to have been the highest salary ever paid to a faro dealer in the United States. He died in San Francisco in 1900, at the age of 95.

John Powell, a native Missourian who lived in New Orleans most of the time he was ashore, was the beau ideal of the river gamblers—tall, handsome and distinguished, well-educated, always richly dressed without the vulgar flashiness of his colleagues, and possessing a charm of personality which made him welcome in the best of society—except among the haughty descendants of the casket and corrections girls in New Orleans. He refused a nomination for Congress in Missouri when he was a young man, but continued to take an active interest in politics both in his native State and in Louisiana; he was a friend of Andrew Jackson and Stephen A. Douglas. During the period of his greatest success as a gambler—from about 1845 to 1858—Powell was considered the most daring and expert poker player on the river, and was always ready to back his judgment on cards with everything he possessed. With the exception of Hargraves, he was probably the most consistent winner, and the richest, of all the square gamblers who worked the steamboats.

Powell's triumphs, however, ended in 1858, when he was one of the participants in a famous poker game aboard the steamer Atlantic, with two other professional gamblers, square players, and Jules Devereaux, a rich planter. Within an hour after play had begun there was $37,000 in gold on the table, and on the first hand Powell is said to have won $8,000. The game continued without intermission for three days, during which time the four men, drinking the finest wines only, ran up a bar bill of $791.50. Devereaux's losses are said to have been approximately $100,000, of which Powell won slightly more than half. A few months after, Powell played a two-handed game of poker with a young English tourist, and won $8,000 and the visitor's luggage. Next morning the Englishman came on deck, shook hands with all the passengers and then put a pistol to his head and blew his brains out. Powell sent the young man's money and luggage to his relatives in England and retired from gambling for a year. But when he returned to the river both his luck and his skill had deserted him; he is said to have never won another pot after his tragic triumph over the Englishman. Within another year he had lost all his property and was a shabby, desperate man. When the Civil War began he went to Seattle, where he died in poverty in 1870.

Fair Enough

Secretary Hull On Simpson.

Secretary Hull's defense of the State Department in the Lawrence Simpson case sets me back on my heels—or, anyway, on one heel—because I seem to have been slightly mislead, not to say deceived, regarding the sailor's politics.

I am afraid, moreover that I missed some earnest, angry Americans who wrote in offering to raise money or just hell on behalf of a poor countryman, held 15 months without trial in a German jail.

If Simpson is a Communist who was doing the work of Moscow under cover of his American citizenship and his American passport, my interest in the case loses all sentiment, because Moscow ought to look after her own. I don't think any of the people who wrote direct to the State Department on Simpson's behalf would feel sentimental about an American who would put his country on the spot that way.

True, as long as he retains his citizenship and his passport our law and our treaties are supposed to give Simpson full legal protection, but that is a weakness of the law and a subtlety of the Communist method.

• • • •

They are always demanding protection under the laws of a government which they are trying to destroy and beefing their heads off at little failures of law, due to human nature, but glorifying bloody dictatorship. But, after all, public opinion and sentiment are the real force behind our law, and if it turns out that this man is a communistic political agent or propagandist the popular resentment on his behalf will vanish.

Mr. Hull doesn't say in so many words that Simpson is a Communist, but he did say the sailor demanded a Communist lawyer in Germany, and none of those who appeared on his behalf in Washington took advantage of a very inviting opportunity to say that he is no such thing, if he isn't.

Before I began to run a temperature about the case I specifically asked three times whether Simpson was a Communist. Each time Gifford Cochran, who is leading the fight for Simpson, said he didn't know.

Nevertheless, Mr. Hull made out a bad case for his department, because he insists that, regardless of Simpson's politics, the department has been diligent to protect his rights and yet admits the man has been held without trial since a year ago June.

• • • •

If that is the best the State Department can do for a man who is presumed to be entitled to the full protection of the American passport and the influence of the American Government, Mr. Hull merely proves the contention of all those who say that a poor and obscure American is pretty much on his own when he gets into trouble in Germany.

It took ten months to obtain a trial for an American citizen from Brooklyn, who was finally convicted in Munich last winter and given a prison sentence in addition to the ten months' detention, on a charge of political activity. Almost any chance remark may be political activity in Germany if it chafes the Nazi idea.

Our diplomatic service and, to a degree, our consular service are inclined to regard the individual American of no prominence as a pain in the neck when he gets into a jam in a foreign land. There is a lot of snobbery in the diplomatic service, and it is much easier to stick a foot in the door of the White House and climb into the President's lap than to catch a few hundred words with the First Secretary of the Embassy or Legation in some foreign capital, unless you happen to be a fugitive tax slave, in which case you walk right in and discuss conditions in deep abdominal tones with the ambassador himself—and do have some more turkey. And don't think that is any news to the Department of State.

The way to treat the Nazis or any other haywire government which can see treason in the color of a wandering American's necktie or the way he parts his hair is to demand for our people the same freedom from molestation that Nazis enjoy in our country, where they hold public meetings in a foreign tongue to extol the Nazi system and vilify elected public officials who, for better or worse, represent that American form of government. There is no need to wait 15 months for them to bring to trial an American who, for all that Mr. Hull has stated to the contrary, is entitled to the same protection from his department as anyone else.

William Randolph Hearst is our leading American Fascist, but if he were picked up in Moscow on the same charge which the Nazis brought against Simpson it wouldn't take 15 months to get him to trial—and in open court, too. Fifteen minutes would be more like it.

Samuel Butler

By William Lyon Phelps.

Author of "Hudibras."

He died on September 25, 1680, two years after the publication of the third part of his famous satirical poem "Hudibras." He was 68 years old.

He wrote in verse, and his great namesake, the nineteenth century Samuel Butler, wrote in prose. But in temperament they were alike. They both satirized with diabolical wit the Puritanical, evangelical religious and social leaders.

Butler served in the household of one of the most prominent of these gentlemen, and had abundant opportunity for satirically minute observation. Butler was a born caricaturist, and it may be that his position in the household galled him and added venom to his pen.

• • • •

The poem "Hudibras" has over 10,000 lines, and is no doubt more often quoted than read. The first part was published in 1663, and became immediately popular. Today, while it has, outside of college courses, comparatively few readers, it is still constantly quoted. The lines move like a rocking-horse, swinging rather than running. Dean Briggs, of Harvard, said the poem was "monotonously brilliant," which describes it very well indeed.

When the book appeared, the diarist Pepys bought it for two shillings sixpence, did not like it and sold it for one shilling sixpence, and not long after bought it again, being ashamed of not liking a book that was such a best-seller. His testimony is valuable as showing its immediate success with the public.

• • • •

Of the Baptists using baptism only by immersion, Butler said they "dive like wildfowl for salvation"

One of his most famous couplets is:

"Compound for sins they are inclined to,
By damning those they have no mind to."

Again:

"He that complies against his will
Is of his own opinion still."

"The sun had long since in the lap
Of Thetis taken out his nap,
And, like a lobster boiled, the morn

The South's Place

Analysis Of Public Affairs Committee Concludes That Region May Either Prove Symbol Of Democracy Or Degenerate.

"IN THE HANDS of the South may be the final destiny of the common man, symbol of American democracy. For here is testing field for democracy among five to ten million marginal white folk and ten million negroes."

This striking comment is taken from the conclusion to Mr. Rupert B. Vance's pamphlet, "The South's Place in the Nation," published by the Public Affairs Committee of Washington. The pamphlet was prepared on the basis of "The Southern Regional Study," sponsored by the Southern regional committee of the Social Science Research Council.

And Mr. Vance adds that the South "appears equally capable of making the best or the worst of all possible contributions to the national life in the coming generation. . . . The late Huey Long gave warning that economic issues are open to an agitation every whit as effective as that of white supremacy."

Mr. Vance sees the fateful part the South is likely to play in determining America's future; as a result of that vision he faces the question of the South's present nature and future possibilities with a high seriousness commanding attention.

The author divides his region into the Southwest (containing Texas, Oklahoma, Arizona and New Mexico) and the Southeast (containing Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas).

The pamphlet deals almost exclusively with the Southeast. Here is a region rich in resources—good land, waterpower, forests, coal, iron, minerals, chemical resources, building stone. And the region has good communications and good rainfall. Yet it is relatively impoverished. What is the answer?

Colonial Economy Explains Poverty.

IN PART, as Mr. Vance points out, the answer is that the South is a colonial economy. "A colonial economy is a debtor economy. It begins as an investment by a mother country, it accumulates but little financial reserves, and as new opportunities arise they must be financed from the outside. The profits are exported outside the area to business men in command of capital . . . (The process) tends to keep the region where it began; a colony rather than a regional economy."

Bad as it is, however, the colonial status of the South would not of itself explain why such a rich land has become "a region of farms yet an importer of foods; potentially a garden spot, actually, a region of broken hearts and backs; abounding in traditions of good living, actually lacking the means, often, of a decent subsistence level of living."

In addition to its colonial economy a large part of the South is burdened with a diseased agricultural system—a one-crop commercial agriculture geared to a foreign demand which unhappily no longer exists.

"If the South possessed a healthy, a decent agriculture," writes Mr. Vance, "it might either endure the colonial economy or work out in time its salvation. Faced with similar situations, peasant populations in other countries have either made a reasonable success of commercial farming or have decided that the farmers' abundance like charity begins at home."

From these two roots—a sick agriculture and a colonial economy—Mr. Vance traces the major ailments of the South. He described these ailments with precision, pointing out how they infect every institution of society. And he never loses sight of the tragic contrast between boundless opportunities and meager accomplishment.

"There is ample evidence," he writes, "to justify the conclusion that the task of planning the 'way on,' for the Southeast is an extraordinarily difficult one, but that all the elements necessary for success are present, provided they can be focused in the right ways and combinations. On the other hand, there is also ample evidence to warrant the conclusion that unless there is a definite change in the regional economy there will be retrogression in agriculture, in industry, and in general culture and institutions . . . The South may contribute to the culture of the Nation in the future an extraordinary exhibit of social degeneration, of tragic men and women, broken and depraved in the ongoings of a great Nation."

Without Planning Region Seen Doomed.

IN CONCLUSION, the author writes, "If the South, sensing its unbalance and lack of equilibrium between the lower brackets of common men and its upper brackets of resources and cultural institutions, does not will and plan for 'the better ordering' of its heritage and prospect, the South may contribute to the culture of the Nation in the future an extraordinary exhibit of social degeneracy, of tragic men and women, broken and depraved in the ongoings of a great Nation, whose opportunities may be lost by default, as well as by purpose.

"Turning back to the more hopeful side, there is yet one more important possible contribution which the South may make. It seems quite possible that the South's conservatism, its highly motivated ideologies, and its kaleidoscopic record of experiences might make an important contribution to the stability of the Nation in its transitional period. Both theoretically and practically the transitional period of societies are dangerous, critical periods. The dangers of artificial society, supertechnology, undersigned and chaotic change, appear today most formidable. It may be that the regions can contribute to the poise, the stability, and equilibrium between the old and the new. Here as elsewhere, however, our conclusions indicate that unless the powers of scholarship, of science, and of education are focused upon these problems, these same regional qualities and forces may terminate disastrously."

The Public Affairs Committee has been organized by representatives of leading research institutions in order to make available in concise and readable form information regarding contemporary events supplied by long-time research studies. Its chairman is Raymond Leslie Buell, president of the Foreign Policy Association, and its treasurer is Harold G. Moulton, president of the Brookings Institution. The secretary is Francis Pickens Miller. The members of the committee are serving in a personal capacity and not as representatives of their respective organizations. The organizations with which they are connected are in no way responsible for the policies or activities of the Public Affairs Committee.

would be no interference if she moved forward in the Orient.

The Spanish civil war, universally conceded to contain the possible seeds of a general European conflict; threats of war, between Germany and Russia following Adolf Hitler's anti-Soviet threats in his speeches at the Nazi congress in Nuremberg; the continually expanding armaments race between the great European nations; Britain's preoccupation with the Mediterranean situation, where she must re-establish her dominant position, and France's financial, economic and social unrest.

Farm Program

An Editorial Symposium

Gov. Landon At Des Moines.

Two papers in the heart of the farm country, the Kansas City Star (Republican) and the Kansas City Journal-Post (Independent), were at odds in evaluating the Republican Presidential nominee's proposals for a farm program.

Said the former:

The Republican farm program as interpreted by Gov. Landon will appeal to farmers and the public generally as sound, workable and in accordance with the American tradition.

Said the latter:

Gov. Landon says the Administration has no farm program. However, President Roosevelt did not dare advocate the Landon program. Had he done so, a deafening noise would have been raised by thrifty Eastern Republicans who have taken their own candidate's hodge-podge and like it.

• • • •

The kind of governmental assistance that the Governor apparently has in mind is that of helping agriculture help itself in all reasonable ways, not that of taking over the business of agricultural planning and management . . . Taken as a whole, the Governor's agricultural program suggests a general merger of the more important agricultural isms, from McNary-Haugenism on down.

At the same time, the New York Times (Independent Democratic) was commenting:

Gov. Landon is playing against the President for high stakes. His farm program, if put into effect, will infallibly swell Federal appropriations and increase the deficit. This is what makes the Governor's final plea for economy, for reduced taxes and for cutting down the public debt seem very much like a piece of unconscious irony.

Still another metropolitan view was expressed by the Brooklyn Daily Eagle (Independent Republican), which said:

The one point wherein the Landon views differ notably from those of the President concerns the problems caused by the loss of foreign markets . . . (The) domestic allotment is designed to give the farmers benefits equivalent to those received by industry through the tariff. The plan is utterly at variance with the procedure adopted by the Roosevelt Administration to try to increase our exports not only of farm surpluses but also of American products in general: the reciprocal trade treaties negotiated by Secretary of State Hull. This program has appealed to us as one of the most realistic steps taken by the Administration, since it is obvious that we cannot win back some of our lost export trade without making some concessions on imports from other nations.

A Southern view on the speech is provided by the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot (Democratic), which commented:

The basic difference between the Republican and Democratic farm programs, one gathers, from Gov. Landon's analysis, is that while the Democratic program contemplates restrictive control of production involving Washington dictatorship, waste and impairment of the farmer's self-determination, the Republican program contemplates complete freedom of production with the payment of Federal cash benefits to those farmers who, in the exercise of this freedom, find themselves burdened with unmarketable export surpluses . . . If one turns from this one highly debatable conflict between the restrictive and unbinding philosophies of the two farm programs, one discovers that they are, in other respects, so alike as to defy practical differentiation save by imputing to each detailed techniques that neither has ventured to define. Even Gov. Landon's new proposal to lend farmers Federal money at cheap rates to enable them to warehouse surplus feed crops on their own farms in indistinguishable, in principle, from the Josephian ever-normal-granary proposals of Secretary Wallace.

The Republican Boston Transcript said:

It is, on the whole, not too much to say of Gov. Landon's speech that it has opened new doors of opportunity and new vistas of joy to the American farmer. It shows him the way to enduring prosperity and it is a prosperity based not on a continuing rain of Government checks but on solid economic principles so applied as to give initiative, enterprise and industry the return which they are justly entitled. There will be, under the Landon plan, no reward for the slacker and the totally incompetent. There should be none under any plan.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Shudder Song.

Pestilence and civil war,
Floods and earthquakes are a curse;
Cyclones are an awful bore—
But I think a stymie's worse!

All adversity is tough,
Midnight detours me appal;
I hate icebergs quite enough,
But a stymie beats 'em all!

Haunted houses make me cry,
I hate chills and fevers hot;
Germs quite deadly make me fly,
But a stymie tops the lot!

I hate Greek and higher math;
Ghosts will shake me, head to toes;
I dislike an ice-cold bath—
But a stymie's worse than those.

Smallpox is an awful blight,
Jungle fever's bad, they say,
But I'll get a greater fright
From a stymie any day!

Fire scares me to the heels;
I hate dreams that I'm unclad;
I detest all Chinese meals,
But a stymie's twice as bad.

Pythons in my path . . . Oh, gee!
Make me shiver, drive me mad;
Avalanches frighten me,
But a stymie's worse, egad!

Lethal poisons I detest,
Lions fill me full of fear;
I hate scorpions at best,
But a stymie! . . . Omidear!

Cops or felons in my path,
Blizzards, storms and like of that
Stir me to the fiercest wrath . . .
But a stymie! Quick! My gat!

Listen, Alf, and listen, Frank:
To you both I'll give the air
Till you come out with a plank

Progress, But—

Well, the railroad trains that ran smack through the main street of Syracuse, N. Y., are no more. The New York Central has run its last train through Washington street and into the old station hard by the Yates Hotel. Progress is progress, but we think Syracuse is losing something. The locomotives puffing through the city with all those through trains gave the city a lot of advertising. First visitors always gazed from the car windows goggle eyed at the idea of traveling right through the heart of a big city.

Col. House's Pivotal State Drive Held Good Political Strategy

By Claude Robinson.

One of the best discussions of Presidential campaign tactics ever set down in print was written for the Cosmopolitan Magazine for September, 1932, by Col. Edward M. House, friend and counselor of Woodrow Wilson. In electing a President, explained this veteran of the political wars, the first task is to make a survey State by State of the current preferences of the voters. The States must then be ranked from sure-fire Republican to sure-fire Democrat, and special effort be concentrated in those areas where the division of the vote is close and where the maximum number of electoral votes can be won with the minimum of effort.

There is no good in wasting energy on States where there is a large margin for you or against you. What the high command must do is concentrate on the pivotal States where oratory, bands, red fire and organization work may gain enough votes to decide the election.

State surveys of current voting preferences, required as the first step in Col. House's analytical scheme, are available in returns from the numerous straw polls now being conducted over the country.

ROOSEVELT		LANDON
The South		New England
Alabama	11	Connecticut	8
Arkansas	9	Maine	5
Florida	7	Massachusetts	17
Georgia	12	New Hampshire	4
Louisiana	10	Vermont	3
Louisiana	10	Others.
Mississippi	9	Kansas	9
North Carolia	13
South Carolia	8		46
Texas	23
Virginia	11
	113
Border States
Kentucky	11
Maryland	8
Missouri	15
Tennessee	11
	45
Middle West Southwest and West
California	22
Montana	4
Nevada	3
New Mexico	3
North Dakota	4
Oklahoma	11
Utah	4
	51

LESS DECISIVE

PROBABLY ROOSEVELT		PROBABLY LANDON
Arizona	3	Delaware	3
Idaho	4	New Jersey	16
Oregon	5	Rhode Island	4
Washington	8	Wyoming	3
Wisconsin	12
	32		26

CLOSE—PROBABLE WINNER IN DOUBT

Colorado	6
Illinois	29
Indiana	14
Iowa	11
Michigan	19
Minnesota	11
Nebraska	7
New York	47
Ohio	26
South Dakota	4
West Virginia	8
Pennsylvania	36

In this tabulation the Democrats start out with 113 electoral votes in the South. Their pluralities in the border States appear to be quite secure, adding another 45 votes. On the Pacific Coast, in the mountain areas, and in the Southwest the New Deal finds favor among the majority of voters and also in the politically radical States of Wisconsin and North Dakota. Adding the electoral votes of these States to those of the South and the border gives Roosevelt a total of 241 votes, leaving 25 more to be gained from the States where the contest is close. This numbr of electoral votes, with a margin to spare, can be won by carrying, singly, New York, Ohio or Illinois; or by jointly carrying Michigan and Indiana or any other small combination of States now listed as close.

The obvious move in the Roosevelt campaign is to concentrate effort in these pivotal States, for it is in these areas that public appearances by the President, organization of motor corps for duty on election day and intensive house-to-house work by the party are likely to pay the largest dividends in electoral votes.

Landon Starts With 72.

In light of this analysis, too, it is obvious that President Roosevelt's nonpolitical tour of the drought region was helpful to him as Candidate Roosevelt because it gave him favorable headlines in a territory where the change of a few individual votes will rapidly pyramid into electoral college votes.

Mr. Landon has one of the toughest jobs in political tactics that ever confronted a Presidential candidate. He has clean-cut pluralities in New England and his home State of Kansas. He also has the edge in Delaware, New Jersey and Wyoming, giving him an electoral college backlog of 72 votes.

From this point on he must win practically all the close States to be elected. The South is, of course, closed to him. In the border States Democratic attitudes are distinctly in the majority, and no amount of Republican rhetoric, it would seem, will change the situation in the next six weeks. The Far West swung heavily to the Democrats in 1932, and, while a few Republican voters have come back into the fold, the New Deal is still popular there.

G. O. P. Plays a Long Shot.

The States which the Republican Col. Houses can designate as the ground where the maximum number of electoral votes can be won with the minimum of effort lie on the Middle Atlantic seaboard and in the Middle West. Here is where the Republicans must labor mightily if their cause is to prevail in November.

If this analysis is sound, Mr. Landon was a political realist when he chose Pennsylvania and New York for his first major platform appearances. On his way to and from Maine he made short stops in the highly crucial areas upstate in New York, Indiana, Illinois and Iowa. Now he has embarked on a trip which will take him through Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Illinois. All these States except Wisconsin are debatable territory and must be won by the Republicans if this party is to control the White House.

Mock Battle in Moscow.

Moscow, Sept. 24 (AP).—A vast mock battle between "Spanish loyalists" and "Spanish rebels" featured a meeting tonight of 100,000 workers in a campaign to raise money for the relief of Spanish women and children.

For hours before the meeting, government trucks rolled into the heart of Moscow carrying thousands of workers to the meeting at which delegates were elected to accompany a "food ship" taking supplies to Spain.

Some 5,000 persons participated in the mock "battle," which was supposed to be a replica of the fighting in Toledo.

Finally, the "workers" ran on the stage in a fierce battle firing regulation rifles loaded with blank cartridges. Amid loud cheers they finally emerged victorious.

Similar meetings were held in various sections of Russia tonight with workers asked to pledge one-eighth of a day's salary for the relief of women and children in war-torn Spain.

Nation's Police Urge New Deportation Laws

Kansas City, Sept. 24 (AP).—The Nation's police officials today urged broader deportation laws to help them cope with the problem of alien criminals.

In a resolution unanimously adopted by the International Association of Chiefs of Police, the existing deportation law was declared "unsatisfactory because it fails to provide for deportation of large numbers of dangerous and habitual criminals who should be deported."

Highway Fund Plan.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 24 (AP).—Commissioner Henry G. Shirley, of the State highway department, said today that he favored submitting the question of an amendment to the Virginia constitution to prohibit the diversion of highway funds to the voters in a popular referendum.

France to Urge League Parley To Slash Arms

Steering Committee Tells President to Cut Off Inflammatory Talks.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Sept. 24.—France tonight presented a plan for a League of Nations disarmament conference while the League moved to prevent inflammatory speeches from its rostrum.

France officially notified the League Assembly steering committee it would propose convocation of the general committee as a disarmament conference.

The committee, meanwhile, authorized President Saaveddra Lamas to halt any speaker who he thinks guilty of utterances liable to affect adversely international relations.

The first scheduled speakers include Julio Alvarez del Vayo, delegate of the Spanish Madrid government; Yvon Delbos, French delegate, and Anthony Eden, Great Britain's foreign secretary.

Del Vayo, it was understood, would address the League on the Spanish civil war.

Premier Mussolini of Italy, it was reported tonight, has been advised to hurry the complete conquest of Ethiopia to fortify his demands Haile Selassie's kingdom be excluded from the League of Nations.

(Seats for Ethiopia, informed sources declared in Rome, would mean the absence of Italy from Geneva but not its withdrawal from the League. Mussolini was reported considering a statement of his future policy, outlining a course of Italian action.)

Speaking Of Incompetence.

What Lloyd George writes in his memoirs regarding American participation in the World War should be a matter of profound indifference to this country. History shows abundantly how anxious the wartime British premier was to secure American participation in the struggle. And the record does not indicate that he was thereafter anxious to dispense with our assistance, in spite of "American indecision and bustling incompetency."

There is a subject of much more moment to the present generation on which Mr. Lloyd George could make some timely revelations, though he is unlikely to do so. It concerns his own "bustling incompetency" in making peace. Whatever the shortcomings of America's war-making machine they fade into insignificance beside the incredible bungling which this self-styled statesman committed at Versailles.

It is for the heritage of disaster which he so largely helped to create for future generations that Lloyd George will be remembered in history. And what he writes in his memoirs about the "fussy muddle" of American participation will not divert the larger responsibility from the head on which so much of it belongs.

The Maritime Commission.

By making temporary appointments to get the work of the Maritime Commission under way President Roosevelt has manifested his awareness of the urgent tasks awaiting this body. His action suggests, also, that he is eager to select the best qualified men available for these posts without further delaying organization and temporary operation of this new "I. C. C." for the merchant marine.

Each of the temporary commissioners has much to commend him. Aside from his extensive knowledge of ships and the sea, and his experience as a former commander in chief of the naval fleet, Admiral Wiley has served on a number of arbitration boards since his retirement. His age is likely to be his chief handicap. Rear Admiral Hamlet has won public confidence and respect through his services as commandant of the Coast Guard. No doubt he will prove to be a valuable member of the commission. Apparently George Landick, jr., owes his appointment to his 32 years of experience in Government contract, equipment and supply work.

The viewpoint of the Government is certainly well represented in the temporary commission. It is reasonable to suppose, therefore, that the other two members will be chosen to represent the views of the shipping industry and those of organized labor. If that is the plan, the President's desire to give the matter still further study can be easily understood. For these appointments will be more difficult than was the selection of three men who have grown up in the Government service.

Even so, there is ample reason to hope that the final appointments will be made in the near future. Labor troubles in the merchant marine are becoming more and more serious. The services of an expert in this field, with sufficient experience and prestige to command the respect of both employers and employed, is much in demand. Without such aid, the commission would begin its career under a serious handicap.

More One-Man Street Cars.

Considerable dissatisfaction has already been manifested over the Public Utilities Commission order permitting one-man operation of 20 additional street cars of the Capital Transit Co. There are many indications, however, that the ruling will redound to the public interest.

The question was given exhaustive study by the P. U. C. After long hearings the evidence was scrutinized for two months before a decision was reached. In that decision the welfare of the public in general appears to have been considered with the utmost care. The company was granted permission to buy and operate 20 used one-man cars only on condition that they replace obsolete one-man cars now in operation. That certainly would be a gain.

Speed may be slowed down somewhat by one-man operation, but this disadvantage may be off-set by the discard of obsolete rolling stock. If, as the commission intimates, economies are essential to permit the company to purchase more up-to-date equipment, it is difficult to see how those economies conflict with the public welfare.

From the theoretical viewpoint the two-man cars are doubtless superior. But it is the duty of the commission to study the problem from every angle in fairness to the company as well as its patrons. There seems to be nothing in the record of this case to suggest that the P. U. C. has failed in that essential function.

On Keeping News Unbiased.

Freedom of the press is happily not an active issue in the 1936 campaign. Interest reverts to this old established principle chiefly because the right of printing uncensored opinions has been so widely abrogated in other parts of the world. In view of that tendency it is both significant and gratifying to have both the major Presidential candidates emphasize the importance of free expression as a first essential in the operation of democracy.

When the President made his memorable address to the General Conference of Code Authorities on March 5, 1934, he denounced all negative criticism as "unpatriotic." In brief, he laid down the formula that citizens with alternative solutions for specific problems might properly criticize plans originated by the Government. But patriotism should induce those having no alternative plans to hold their tongues.

Fortunately there seems to be no trace of such an insidiously repressive attitude in the President's current message to the Herald Tribune's Forum on Current Problems. Rather he waived any objection to editorial opinion free from misstatement of fact, and laids the following emphasis upon the very vital responsibility of newspapers to keep their news columns free from bias:

> I do not believe—and I do not think any disagreement is possible on this subject—that a journal's news columns ought to be tampered with, either by coloring news or by leaving out news. The news is the commodity that is marketed to the whole people.

Mr. Roosevelt's point is well taken. Headlines that reveal prejudice and news stories sullied with partisanship are no asset to any newspaper. The press has an enormous responsibility to print "the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth" as nearly free from bias and coloring as the best journalistic judgment can make it. That is a high standard to set. However, it is no less desirable because frequently ignored by publications more interested in politics and sensationalism than in real public service.

As a corollary to the fine principle enunciated by the President, impartiality and scrupulous regard for facts should also characterize the "news" originating in governmental agencies. It is no secret that some New Deal "information bureaus" have degenerated until they verge on propaganda dissemination. An enormous volume of "publicity," distinctly partisan in tone and none too complete in factual basis, is furnished to the newspapers by the present Administration.

What the President says with regard to news columns is equally applicable to the news releases and publications put out by the Government itself. It could scarcely be argued that the Government set up to serve all the people has less of a public obligation in this respect than privately owned publications. The WPA, the Resettlement Administration and various other much-publicized agencies may usefully interpret the President's criticism as applicable to themselves as well as to the press.

In Defiance Of Italy.

Acting as members of the League of Nations, 39 governments have voted to seat Haile Selassie's representatives as a delegation with full powers in the current League Assembly. The action flatly denies recognition to the Italian conquest of Ethiopia and, incidentally, ends for the present any Italian hopes of floating loans with which to exploit the country which she holds under military subjection.

The temptation was great to find an easier way out of the dilemma created by Mussolini's demand for the exclusion of Ethiopia from League meetings. It is a tribute to the vitality of the Geneva enterprise that no compromise on the issue was accepted.

Not only Great Britain and France, but all the other nations voting to seat Ethiopia, would like to see Italy remain in the League and collaborate in its labors. But where the British and French government were, at first, prepared to consider violence to the spirit of the League Covenant in order to satisfy Mussolini, the smaller powers were not.

They clearly recognized that exclusion of Ethiopia from the Assembly would be tantamount to recognition of the validity of Italy's conquest of a fellow League member. They perhaps envisaged the day when some other weak nations may be in Ethiopia's present position. So, in the upshot, only three of Italy's satellites—Austria, Hungary and Albania—and Ecuador voted to prevent the exiled Ethiopian government from claiming its seat as a "fully self-governing state."

To be sure, an independent Ethiopia will not be resurrected as an independent nation through any votes taken at Geneva. Nevertheless the problem of whether or not the exiled Emperor's delegation should be seated was one of great moral importance. It is a tribute to the democratic spirit with which the League is imbued that this was recognized by the Assembly.

Should Italy now resign its absence will be regretted. Possibly such action might even accelerate disintegration at Geneva. But it would be far better for the League to go down with its flag flying, and its record of endeavor unsullied, than to survive merely as an instrument of high politics, dominated by one or another of the great powers for its own particular ends. Moreover, such manifestations of independence as the Assembly has now shown may, in the long run, prove much more a source of strength than any opportunistic deference to a successful aggressor.

A Field For Regulation.

Those who are in the habit of extolling the good manners of British trade unions, and who ask why American labor is often so much less genteel, will find at least a partial answer in the testimony now being recorded by the Senate civil liberties committee. Dante's vision of the Inferno is recalled by the pictures of scalding steam, high tension wires and poison gas preparations brought out by the cross-examination of private detectives who have served as strikebreakers.

As yet, the employers of the detectives have not fully given their side of the story. But they will be bold men if they attempt to approve the tactics of those "gorillas" who, by their own testimony, are as willing to cheat their patrons as to undermine employe morale by any means. Even without waiting for further unsavory evidence, it seems clear that the committee must report back to the Senate that there are "undue interferences with the right of labor to organize" and, in further fulfillment of its instructions, that remedial legislation is desirable.

What type of legislation is best to meet so disgraceful a situation is another problem. Senator La Follette, the committee chairman, is from Wisconsin and the Wisconsin Legislature last year adopted a law requiring private police to register with municipal clerks in the localities of their employ. The registrations being public documents, this procedure tends to discourage espionage and other undercover activities. It also tends to disqualify men with unsavory police records from finding employment, as they now are accustomed to, in private detective agencies.

Possibly some adaptation of this local legislation may seem desirable. At least there is no doubt that control over these abuses should be a concern of the Federal Government. This was made clear yesterday, when testimony revealed the Connecticut agent of an Ohio chemical company as doing "missionary work" in stirring up strikes where gas sales might be made.

The whole problem gives admirable point to Gov. Landon's recent observation that the issue is "not whether there have been abuses in the economic system that need to be corrected." Rather, he described the choice in the campaign as between Government regulation and Government management of business. Here, decidedly, is a situation where regulation is in order.

Not A Lip to Land On.

Properly, all fairy stories begin with the phrase "Once upon a time." Every bit as traditional is the ending of all movies with a kiss signifying that "they lived happily ever after." Of course, there are pictures in which the love interest is subordinated, but they are the exception. Now comes word from Hollywood that Cupid is to be practically demoted from leading roles and relegated to playing "bits."

Contrary to popular opinion, the kiss did not originate in Hollywood. Even the Chamber of Commerce of that region of climate and cameras would not be so bold as to claim that. But it does look as though osculation is to meet an inglorious end there.

The preferred blonde, Lorelei Lee, once said that a kiss on the wrist was very nice but a diamond bracelet lasted forever. That was because Lorelei was a realist. And now we hear that kissing in pictures is about to be shelved because Hollywood is "getting more imaginative." Between the two, it looks as if the kiss soon won't have a lip left to land on.

A Cooling Contrast.

From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

We recommend that you get a long, cool drink, sit under an electric fan and concentrate on this dispatch from Buenos Aires.

"Argentina is in the grip of the severest cold wave of the year, with heavy snowfall in many parts of Buenos Aires Province and also in such widely separated regions as Mendoza City and Salta, the latter 900 miles nearer the equator than this city is. The temperature touched 2 degrees below freezing here this morning and several points to the south and west reported temperatures between 25 and 30 degrees, Fahrenheit. The coldest spot in Argentina today was at the statue of Christ of the Andes, above the trans-Andean tunnel, where 6 degrees below zero was reported."

Reflection on how the other half lives has its points.

"Throttling Liberty."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am not much inclined to write letters to newspapers and as a rule I refrain from doing so, but when I read some of the babblings published from the pens of some people who are no doubt laboring under the delusion that they are true Americans and that anyone who happens to take a different view to their own should leave this country, I cannot but be aroused to righteous indignation.

Your issue of September 16 carried such a letter signed by Clara Hine, of Alexandria, in which she stated that "if Ludke does not like to do that (namely, salute the flag), he should leave this country and try some other place where they kill the people for their belief in God." May I state right here that Mr. Ludke and his children are exercising their rights as provided by the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of Maryland, in which they live. Since they are proven to be law-abiding in every respect d since their failure or refusal to salute the flag cannot possibly harm anyone, then why should they leave this country and go some other place to be killed?

Since the afore-mentioned writer thinks that is what she wants done to those with whom she takes issue, maybe she should go to Germany, for instance, where a failure or refusal to stand up and "Heil Hitler" and salute the Nazi flag is counted a crime for which the most cruel and inhuman punishment is meted out to the offenders.

What would that great man, Thomas Jefferson, think of such throttling of the liberties of the people as the expelling of these Ludke children from school, where each one, to my personal knowledge, received the highest average and the most excellent term reports I have ever seen? What would that other great Virginian, Patrick Henry, who cried, "Give me liberty or give me death, say to such tyranny? If he could see the way the liberties of the people are being destroyed and in their stead a despotism being inaugurated second, only to that wicked so-called "Holy Inquisition," he could only say, "I am glad I died when I did."

It is high time that those who really love liberty and peace should take their stand for it instead of wanting any and everyone sent out of the country who has the courage of their conviction. Shame on the individuals and so-called patriotic organizations who have either never known or have forgotten the principles of freedom and justice upon which this country was founded. This has been called "the land of the free and home of the brave," but now it seems that anyone who is brave enough to stand up for his rights brings down the wrath of these self-styled, not real, Americans upon their heads.

I did appreciate your editorial some time ago in which you also defended the right to freedom here and I hope I may see more, but I warn you, it will bring the wrath of these "un-" Americans upon your head.

Safe And Quiet Traffic.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having read your article on the P. U. C. and traffic situation here in Washington may I state that traffic is being controlled in both London and Paris.

One feels safer in Piccadilly Circus than one feels at Eighteenth and Columbia road. One can sleep at night in the heart of London and Paris while at Sixteenth and Harvard streets it is often bedlam at midnight.

The Consumer Consumed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The complete abandonment of the former NRA consumers division leaves the consumer, in the face of the constantly rising commodity prices, at the mercy of the entrepreneur. Secretary Roper recently warned against inflation in real estate, which is very timely, but housing is only a part of the consumer's burden. Food, that ever-present necessity, is constantly becoming more expensive.

Here in Washington, where the Government controls the income of a large part of the population, will not some agency turn a hand to prevent its army of servants from being crushed beneath the nether millstone of rising prices? The drought, the election, and returning prosperity are all but excuses for some middlemen to "make a killing." How many will be made in a winter of inflationary prices remains to be seen.

Some blame the AAA for high prices. They have a consumer council. Let them, then, together with the remaining NRA consumers division, work our way out of this dilemma. This is no time to leave the consumer without representation in the Government organization. If higher prices to the farmer is the desideratum (and my share of a farm is not yet able to support itself), well and good. But whatever the return to the producer, the goods must eventually be consumed, or eventually drag down the market.

In order to buy, the would-be consumer must have the price of the goods. Income remaining constant, prices continuing to rise, resulting inability to buy. The $1,000-a-year clerk will not be warm and well fed before the winter is over (if he is, now), unless this steady advance in food prices is not checked, or incomes raised to keep pace with the rising cost of living.

Why "They Hate Roosevelt."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Ever since reading a magazine article several months ago, in regard to the hatred of certain people for Roosevelt, I have been trying to analyze the motive behind such hatred and have been unable to account for it, unless it is the perversity of human nature, or a determined effort on the part of the "special interests" and the privileged classes, to get control of the Government again, so that they can pursue their nefarious practices unmolested by Government regulation.

It seems ironical that the very class of people who hate Roosevelt most are the ones who have profited more largely from his policies. Aside from his help to the farmers; his relief of the unemployed; his attempts to guarantee social and economic justice to all, and his other numerous benevolent objects, he has benefited all classes, including banks, insurance companies, real estate men, lawyers, and in fact every class of society.

It is very comforting to think that the "haters" will be rebuked at the polls in November, for I feel sure that the majority of the people are not willing to go back to the old Hoover days.

Miss Thompson's Address.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Reference is made to Miss Dorothy Thompson's address at the dinner opening the Mobilization for Human Needs Conference.

My object is to thank you for the space in your excellent paper giving opportunity for persons who do their own best thinking a chance to read and digest her wonderful discourse. It reads like some of a Japanese philosopher, Yoritomo-Taski, "the reviser of the empire's code of laws." He rescued his native land from the slough of demoralization into which it had sunk in 1186. He did not say "to create," but to "reawaken" in men's souls a resolution toward good and a hatred of evil. R. E. FARR.

Britain And The Palestine Mandate.

To the Editor of The Post— Sir: Politicians are, perhaps, necessary evils in government, but that they are the greatest of evils incident to government and are responsible for much of the troubles of mankind, is self-evident.

The chief characteristics of the politician is that he rarely thinks exclusively in terms of national interest and welfare, present or future, but solely of his own personal and political fortunes. Senator Copeland is at present a case in point. While he is not up for re-election this year he is doubtless looking to the future when he will be.

He has the largest Jewish constituency in the country. He has just returned from a visit to Palestine. He reports there are about 12,000 American Jews there. He charges that Great Britain has been derelict and has fallen down in her administration of the mandate given her over Palestine by the Versailles treaty, and that the United States should do something about it.

In the first place, these Jews are expatriates. They pay no taxes for the support of the United States, and are charged with no duty or responsibility for their defense. There rests, therefore, no obligation on the part of the United States Government to interfere in their behalf. And if we did the probability is that Great Britain would properly tell us to mind our own business, or might suggest that we take over the mandate, which she would be only too glad to be rid of. Is there any reason to believe we could or would do any better? The answer in the negative is the mess we have made of our Indian problems, the Philippines, the Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico, etc.

And, finally, it is not believed that Dr. Copeland is primarily interested in the Jews of Palestine, but that his simulated interest in them is motivated solely to carry favor with the Jewish voters in his State, and that but for this large vote nothing would ever have been heard from him on the subject.

He certainly could not have had the best interest of the United States at heart in making the suggestion that we interfere in this matter. And well may it be asked: Have we not enough troubles at home without hunting more trouble in remote parts of the world?

We are not a homogeneous people, but are composed of representatives of all nationalities, most of whom are not so long removed from their original habitats, and who still have ties of kinship in, and retain affection for the countries of their origin. The result is that every time anything happens to the kindred or friends in the countries from whence they come they want the United States to intervene in their behalf. If our Government did as it is constantly being urged to do, as in Mexico, Germany, Spain, Italy and other countries, by these discordant and unassimilated elements among us, we would be at enmity, and, perhaps eventually, at war with the entire world.

New Orleans Gambling

THE dominating vice of Creole New Orleans, early in the last century, was a passion for gambling which has never since been equaled on this side of the Atlantic Ocean. Addiction to games of chance was so nearly universal, and became so definitely a trait of local character, as to foster a tradition that the first of the riffraff colonists sent to Louisiana by the Mississippi Company stepped ashore with a deck of cards in his pocket and a roulette wheel under his arm. Professional gamblers appeared on the scene in large numbers as soon as the flatboats and keelboats began coming down the Mississippi, and Girod and Tchoupitoulas streets bloomed as the favorite haunts of the boat crews and the rougher elements of the city's population. In both of these areas every dive, even the bordellos, furnished facilities for gambling and practically all of them were crooked.

So far as the records show, the only square game among the scores frequented by the river men was to be found in a little roulette house on Tchoupitoulas street, operated by an old Frenchman named Grampin, who went bankrupt in an extraordinary fashion. Among his regular customers was a flatboat captain who came in every night while he was in port and bet 25 cents—never more and never less—on the red at roulette.

One night the captain sat down, staked his coin, and leaned his head on his hand while Grampin spun the wheel. Red won, and the money was doubled. As the captain did not pick up his winnings, Grampin again started the little ball rolling, and again it stopped on red, once more doubling the stake. Again and again the frantic Frenchman spun the wheel, and each time red won, while the flatboat captain sat like a stone image, apparently oblivious both to his good fortune and to the excitement which his play was creating.

At the sixteenth turn of the wheel, when the captain's winnings amounted to about $8,000 on his original investment of a quarter, Grampin pushed all the money he had across the table and excitedly ordered the river man to leave. When the latter still did not move, Grampin pushed him, and he rolled stiffly from his chair to the floor. He was dead.

* * * *

Of the few old-time river gamblers who were known as "square players," and who depended entirely upon luck and skill, the most celebrated were Dick Hargraves and Maj. George M. White. The last named followed gambling as a profession for 62 years, and won and lost a dozen fortunes. He began his career in New Orleans in 1825, when 20 years old, and dealt his last card in 1887, his hand still firm and his eye clear at 82. Maj. White made a profit of $30,000 in one year—1857—on the Mississippi, and for several years received $400 a week to run a faro bank in New Orleans, said to have been the highest salary ever paid to a faro dealer in the United States. He died in San Francisco in 1900, at the age of 95.

John Powell, a native Missourian who lived in New Orleans most of the time he was ashore, was the beau ideal of the river gamblers—tall, handsome and distinguished, well-educated, always richly dressed without the vulgar flashiness of his colleagues, and possessing a charm of personality which made him welcome in the best of society—except among the haughty descendants of the casket and corrections girls in New Orleans. He refused a nomination for Congress in Missouri when he was a young man, but continued to take an active interest in politics both in his native State and in Louisiana; he was a friend of Andrew Jackson and Stephen A. Douglas. During the period of his greatest success as a gambler—from about 1845 to 1858—Powell was considered the most daring and expert poker player on the river, and was always ready to back his judgment on cards with everything he possessed. With the exception of Hargraves, he was probably the most consistent winner, and the richest, of all the square gamblers who worked the steamboats.

Powell's triumphs, however, ended in 1858, when he was one of the participants in a famous poker game aboard the steamer Atlantic, with two other professional gamblers, square players, and Jules Devereaux, a rich planter. Within an hour after play had begun there was $37,000 in gold on the table, and on the first hand Powell is said to have won $8,000. The game continued without intermission for three days, during which time the four men, drinking the finest wines only, ran up a bar bill of $791.50. Devereaux's losses are said to have been approximately $100,000, of which Powell won slightly more than half. A few months after, Powell played a two-handed game of poker with a young English tourist, and won $8,000 and the visitor's luggage. Next morning the Englishman came on deck, shook hands with all the passengers and then put a pistol to his head and blew his brains out. Powell sent the young man's money and luggage to his relatives in England and retired from gambling for a year. But when he returned to the river both his luck and his skill had deserted him; he is said to have never won another pot after his tragic triumph over the Englishman. Within another year he had lost all his property and was a shabby, desperate man. When the Civil War began he went to Seattle, where he died in poverty in 1870.

Secretary Hull On Simpson.

Secretary Hull's defense of the State Department in the Lawrence Simpson case sets me back on my heels—or, anyway, on one heel—because I seem to have been slightly mislead, not to say deceived, regarding the sailor's politics.

I am afraid, moreover that I missed some earnest, angry Americans who wrote in offering to raise money or just hell on behalf of a poor countryman, held 15 months without trial in a German jail.

If Simpson is a Communist who was doing the work of Moscow under cover of his American citizenship and his American passport, my interest in the case loses all sentiment, because Moscow ought to look after her own. I don't think any of the people who wrote direct to the State Department on Simpson's behalf would feel sentimental about an American who would put his country on the spot that way.

True, as long as he retains his citizenship and his passport our law and our treaties are supposed to give Simpson full legal protection, but that is a weakness of the law and a subtlety of the Communist method.

• • • •

They are always demanding protection under the laws of a government which they are trying to destroy and beefing their heads off at little failures of law, due to human nature, but glorifying bloody dictatorship. But, after all, public opinion and sentiment are the real force behind our law, and if it turns out that this man is a communistic political agent or propagandist the popular resentment on his behalf will vanish.

Mr. Hull doesn't say in so many words that Simpson is a Communist, but he did say the sailor demanded a Communist lawyer in Germany, and none of those who appeared on his behalf in Washington took advantage of a very inviting opportunity to say that he is no such thing, if he isn't.

Before I began to run a temperature about the case I specifically asked three times whether Simpson was a Communist. Each time Gifford Cochran, who is leading the fight for Simpson, said he didn't know.

Nevertheless, Mr. Hull made out a bad case for his department, because he insists that, regardless of Simpson's politics, the department has been diligent to protect his rights and yet admits the man has been held without trial since a year ago June.

• • • •

If that is the best the State Department can do for a man who is presumed to be entitled to the full protection of the American passport and the influence of the American Government, Mr. Hull merely proves the contention of all those who say that a poor and obscure American is pretty much on his own when he gets into trouble in Germany.

It took ten months to obtain a trial for an American citizen from Brooklyn, who was finally convicted in Munich last winter and given a prison sentence in addition to the ten months' detention, on a charge of political activity. Almost any chance remark may be political activity in Germany if it chafes the Nazi idea.

Our diplomatic service and, to a degree, our consular service are inclined to regard the individual American of no prominence as a pain in the neck when he gets into a jam in a foreign land. There is a lot of snobbery in the diplomatic service, and it is much easier to stick a foot in the door of the White House and climb into the President's lap than to catch a few hundred words with the First Secretary of the Embassy or Legation in some foreign capital, unless you happen to be a fugitive tax slave, in which case you walk right in and discuss conditions in deep abdominal tones with the ambassador himself—and do have some more turkey. And don't think that is any news to the Department of State.

• • • •

The way to treat the Nazis or any other haywire government which can see treason in the color of a wandering American's necktie or the way he parts his hair is to demand for our people the same freedom from molestation that Nazis enjoy in our country, where they hold public meetings in a foreign tongue to extol the Nazi system and vilify elected public officials who, for better or worse, represent that American form of government. There is no need to wait 15 months for them to bring to trial an American who, for all that Mr. Hull has stated to the contrary, is entitled to the same protection from his department as anyone else.

William Randolph Hearst is our leading American Fascist, but if he were picked up in Moscow on the same charge which the Nazis brought against Simpson it wouldn't take 15 months to get him to trial—and in open court, too. Fifteen minutes would be more like it.

Samuel Butler

By William Lyon Phelps.

Author of "Hudibras."

He died on September 25, 1680, two years after the publication of the third part of his famous satirical poem "Hudibras." He was 68 years old.

He wrote in verse, and his great namesake, the nineteenth century Samuel Butler, wrote in prose. But in temperament they were alike. They both satirized with diabolical wit the Puritanical, evangelical religious and social leaders.

Butler served in the household of one of the most prominent of these gentlemen, and had abundant opportunity for satirically minute observation. Butler was a born caricaturist, and it may be that his position in the household galled him and added venom to his pen.

The poem "Hudibras" has over 10,000 lines, and is no doubt more often quoted than read. The first part was published in 1663, and became immediately popular. Today, while it has, outside of college courses, comparatively few readers, it is still constantly quoted. The lines move like a rocking-horse, swinging rather than running. Dean Briggs, of Harvard, said the poem was "monotonously brilliant," which describes it very well indeed.

When the book appeared, the diarist Pepys bought it for two shillings sixpence, did not like it and sold it for one shilling sixpence, and not long after bought it again, being ashamed of not liking a book that was such a best-seller. His testimony is valuable as showing its immediate success with the public.

• • • •

Of the Baptists using baptism only by immersion, Butler said they "dive like wildfowl for salvation."

One of his most famous couplets is:

"Compound for sins they are inclined to,
By damning those they have no mind to."

Again:

"He that complies against his will
Is of his own opinion still."

"The sun had long since in the lap
Of Thetis taken out his nap,
And, like a lobster boiled, the morn

The South's Place

Analysis Of Public Affairs Committee Concludes That Region May Either Prove Symbol Of Democracy Or Degenerate.

"IN THE HANDS of the South may be the final destiny of the common man, symbol of American democracy. For here is testing field for democracy among five to ten million marginal white folk and ten million negroes."

This striking comment is taken from the conclusion to Mr. Rupert B. Vance's pamphlet, "The South's Place in the Nation," published by the Public Affairs Committee of Washington. The pamphlet was prepared on the basis of "The Southern Regional Study," sponsored by the Southern regional committee of the Social Science Research Council.

And Mr. Vance adds that the South "appears equally capable of making the best or the worst of all possible contributions to the national life in the coming generation. . . . The late Huey Long gave warning that economic issues are open to an agitation every whit as effective as that of white supremacy."

Mr. Vance sees the fateful part the South is likely to play in determining America's future; as a result of that vision he faces the question of the South's present nature and future possibilities with a high seriousness commanding attention.

The author divides his region into the Southwest (containing Texas, Oklahoma, Arizona and New Mexico) and the Southeast (containing Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas).

The pamphlet deals almost exclusively with the Southeast. Here is a region rich in resources—good land, waterpower, forests, coal, iron, minerals, chemical resources, building stone. And the region has good communications and good rainfall. Yet it is relatively impoverished. What is the answer?

Colonial Economy Explains Poverty.

IN PART, as Mr. Vance points out, the answer is that the South is a colonial economy. "A colonial economy is a debtor economy. It begins as an investment by a mother country, it accumulates but little financial reserves, and as new opportunities arise they must be financed from the outside. The profits are exported outside the area to business men in command of capital . . . (The process) tends to keep the region where it began; a colony rather than a regional economy."

Bad as it is, however, the colonial status of the South would not of itself explain why such a rich land has become "a region of farms yet an importer of foods; potentially a garden spot, actually, a region of broken hearts and backs; abounding in traditions of good living, actually lacking the means, often, of a decent subsistence level of living."

In addition to its colonial economy a large part of the South is burdened with a diseased agricultural system—a one-crop commercial agriculture geared to a foreign demand which unhappily no longer exists.

"If the South possessed a healthy, a decent agriculture," writes Mr. Vance, "it might either endure the colonial economy or work out in time its salvation. Faced with similar situations, peasant populations in other countries have either made a reasonable success of commercial farming or have decided that the farmers' abundance like charity begins at home."

From these two roots—a sick agriculture and a colonial economy—Mr. Vance traces the major ailments of the South. He described these ailments with precision, pointing out how they infect every institution of society. And he never loses sight of the tragic contrast between boundless opportunities and meager accomplishment.

"There is ample evidence," he writes, "to justify the conclusion that the task of planning the 'way on,' for the Southeast is an extraordinarily difficult one, but that all the elements necessary for success are present, provided they can be focused in the right ways and combinations. On the other hand, there is also ample evidence to warrant the conclusion that unless there is a definite change in the regional economy there will be retrogression in agriculture, in industry, and in general culture and institutions . . . The South may contribute to the culture of the Nation in the future an extraordinary exhibit of social degeneration, of tragic men and women, broken and depraved in the ongoings of a great Nation."

Without Planning Region Seen Doomed.

IN CONCLUSION, the author writes, "If the South, sensing its unbalance and lack of equilibrium between the lower brackets of common men and its upper brackets of resources and cultural institutions, does not will and plan for 'the better ordering' of its heritage and prospect, the South may contribute to the culture of the Nation in the future an extraordinary exhibit of social degeneracy, of tragic men and women, broken and depraved in the ongoings of a great Nation, whose opportunities may be lost by default, as well as by purpose.

"Turning back to the more hopeful side, there is yet one more important possible contribution which the South may make. It seems quite possible that the South's conservatism, its highly motivated ideologies, and its kaleidoscopic record of experiences might make an important contribution to the stability of the Nation in its transitional period. Both theoretically and practically the transitional period of societies are dangerous, critical periods. The dangers of artificial society, supertechnology, undersigned and chaotic change, appear today most formidable. It may be that the regions can contribute to the poise, the stability, and equilibrium between the old and the new. Here as elsewhere, however, our conclusions indicate that unless the powers of scholarship, of science, and of education are focused upon these problems, these same regional qualities and forces may terminate disastrously."

The Public Affairs Committee has been organized by representatives of leading research institutions in order to make available in concise and readable form information regarding contemporary events supplied by long-time research studies. Its chairman is Raymond Leslie Buell, president of the Foreign Policy Association, and its treasurer is Harold G. Moulton, president of the Brookings Institution. The secretary is Francis Pickens Miller. The members of the committee are serving in a personal capacity and not as representatives of their respective organizations. The organizations with which they are connected are in no way responsible for the policies or activities of the Public Affairs Committee.

would be no interference if she moved forward in the Orient.

The Spanish civil war, universally conceded to contain the possible seeds of a general European conflict; threats of war, between Germany and Russia following Adolf Hitler's anti-Soviet threats in his speeches at the Nazi congress in Nuremberg; the continually expanding armaments race between the great European nations; Britain's preoccupation with the Mediterranean situation, where she must re-establish her dominant position, and France's financial, economic and social unrest.

Owing to the traditional rivalry between the Japanese army and navy, it is foreseen that the navy's activities in central and south China are likely to be followed by vigorous moves by the army in the north.

Farm Program

Gov. Landon At Des Moines.

Two papers in the heart of the farm country, the Kansas City Star (Republican) and the Kansas City Journal-Post (Independent), were at odds in evaluating the Republican Presidential nominee's proposals for a farm program.

Said the former:

The Republican farm program as interpreted by Gov. Landon will appeal to farmers and the public generally as sound, workable and in accordance with the American tradition.

Said the latter:

Gov. Landon says the Administration has no farm program. However, President Roosevelt did not dare advocate the Landon program. Had he done so, a deafening noise would have been raised by thrifty Eastern Republicans who have taken their own candidate's hodge-podge and like it.

• • • •

The kind of governmental assistance that the Governor apparently has in mind is that of helping agriculture help itself in all reasonable ways, not that of taking over the business of agricultural planning and management . . . Taken as a whole, the Governor's agricultural program suggests a general merger of the more important agricultural isms, from McNary-Haugenism on down.

At the same time, the New York Times (Independent Democratic) was commenting:

Gov. Landon is playing against the President for high stakes. His farm program, if put into effect, will infallibly swell Federal appropriations and increase the deficit. This is what makes the Governor's final plea for economy, for reduced taxes and for cutting down the public debt seem very much like a piece of unconscious irony.

Still another metropolitan view was expressed by the Brooklyn Daily Eagle (Independent Republican), which said:

The one point wherein the Landon views differ notably from those of the President concerns the problems caused by the loss of foreign markets . . . (The) domestic allotment is designed to give the farmers benefits equivalent to those received by industry through the tariff. The plan is utterly at variance with the procedure adopted by the Roosevelt Administration to try to increase our exports not only of farm surpluses but also of American products in general: the reciprocal trade treaties negotiated by Secretary of State Hull. This program has appealed to us as one of the most realistic steps taken by the Administration, since it is obvious that we cannot win back some of our lost export trade without making some concessions on imports from other nations.

• • • •

A Southern view on the speech is provided by the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot (Democratic), which commented:

The basic difference between the Republican and Democratic farm programs, one gathers, from Gov. Landon's analysis, is that while the Democratic program contemplates restrictive control of production involving Washington dictatorship, waste and impairment of the farmer's self-determination, the Republican program contemplates complete freedom of production with the payment of Federal cash benefits to those farmers who, in the exercise of this freedom, find themselves burdened with unmarketable export surpluses . . . If one turns from this one highly debatable conflict between the restrictive and unbinding philosophies of the two farm programs, one discovers that they are, in other respects, so alike as to defy practical differentiation save by imputing to each detailed techniques that neither has ventured to define. Even Gov. Landon's new proposal to lend farmers Federal money at cheap rates to enable them to warehouse surplus feed crops on their own farms in indistinguishable, in principle, from the Josephian ever-normal-granary proposals of Secretary Wallace.

• • • •

The Republican Boston Transcript said:

It is, on the whole, not too much to say of Gov. Landon's speech that it has opened new doors of opportunity and new vistas of joy to the American farmer. It shows him the way to enduring prosperity and it is a prosperity based not on a continuing rain of Government checks but on solid economic principles so applied as to give initiative, enterprise and industry the return which they are justly entitled. There will be, under the Landon plan, no reward for the slacker and the totally incompetent. There should be none under any plan.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Shudder Song.

Pestilence and civil war,
Floods and earthquakes are a curse;
Cyclones are an awful bore—
But I think a stymie's worse!

All adversity is tough,
Midnight detours me appal;
I hate icebergs quite enough,
But a stymie beats 'em all!

Haunted houses make me cry,
I hate chills and fevers hot;
Germs quite deadly make me fly,
But a stymie tops the lot!

I hate Greek and higher math;
Ghosts will shake me, head to toes;
I dislike an ice-cold bath—
But a stymie's worse than those.

Smallpox is an awful blight,
Jungle fever's bad, they say,
But I'll get a greater fright
From a stymie any day!

Fire scares me to the heels;
I hate dreams that I'm unclad;
I detest all Chinese meals,
But a stymie's twice as bad.

Pythons in my path . . . Oh, gee!
Make me shiver, drive me mad;
Avalanches frighten me,
But a stymie's worse, egad!

Lethal poisons I detest,
Lions fill me full of fear;
I hate scorpions at best,
But a stymie! . . . Omidear!

Cops or felons in my path,
Blizzards, storms and like of that
Stir me to the fiercest wrath . . .
But a stymie! Quick! My gat!

Listen, Alf, and listen, Frank:
To you both I'll give the air
Till you come out with a plank

Progress, But—

Well, the railroad trains that ran smack through the main street of Syracuse, N. Y., are no more. The New York Central has run its last train through Washington street and into the old station hard by the Yates Hotel. Progress is progress, but we think Syracuse is losing something. The locomotives puffing through the city with all those through trains gave the city a lot of advertising. First visitors always gazed from the car windows goggle eyed at the idea of traveling right through the heart of a big city.

Col. House's Pivotal State Drive Held Good Political Strategy

By Claude Robinson.

One of the best discussions of Presidential campaign tactics ever set down in print was written for the Cosmopolitan Magazine for September, 1932, by Col. Edward M. House, friend and counselor of Woodrow Wilson. In electing a President, explained this veteran of the political wars, the first task is to make a survey State by State of the current preferences of the voters. The States must then be ranked from sure-fire Republican to sure-fire Democrat, and special effort be concentrated in those areas where the division of the vote is close and where the maximum number of electoral votes can be won with the minimum of effort.

There is no good in wasting energy on States where there is a large margin for you or against you. What the high command must do is concentrate on the pivotal States where oratory, bands, red fire and organization work may gain enough votes to decide the election.

State surveys of current voting preferences, required as the first step in Col. House's analytical scheme, are available in returns from the numerous straw polls now being conducted over the country.

ROOSEVELT		LANDON

In this tabulation the Democrats start out with 113 electoral votes in the South. Their pluralities in the border States appear to be quite secure, adding another 45 votes. On the Pacific Coast, in the mountain areas, and in the Southwest the New Deal finds favor among the majority of voters and also in the politically radical States of Wisconsin and North Dakota. Adding the electoral votes of these States to those of the South and the border gives Roosevelt a total of 241 votes, leaving 25 more to be gained from the States where the contest is close. This numbr of electoral votes, with a margin to spare, can be won by carrying, singly, New York, Ohio or Illinois; or by jointly carrying Michigan and Indiana or any other small combination of States now listed as close.

The obvious move in the Roosevelt campaign is to concentrate effort in these pivotal States, for it is in these areas that public appearances by the President, organization of motor corps for duty on election day and intensive house-to-house work by the party are likely to pay the largest dividends in electoral votes.

Landon Starts With 72.

In light of this analysis, too, it is obvious that President Roosevelt's nonpolitical tour of the drought region was helpful to him as Candidate Roosevelt because it gave him favorable headlines in a territory where the change of a few individual votes will rapidly pyramid into electoral college votes.

Mr. Landon has one of the toughest jobs in political tactics that ever confronted a Presidential candidate. He has clean-cut pluralities in New England and his home State of Kansas. He also has the edge in Delaware, New Jersey and Wyoming, giving him an electoral college backlog of 72 votes.

From this point on he must win practically all the close States to be elected. The South is, of course, closed to him. In the border States Democratic attitudes are distinctly in the majority, and no amount of Republican rhetoric, it would seem, will change the situation in the next six weeks. The Far West swung heavily to the Democrats in 1932, and, while a few Republican voters have come back into the fold, the New Deal is still popular there.

G. O. P. Plays a Long Shot.

The States which the Republican Col. Houses can designate as the ground where the maximum number of electoral votes can be won with the minimum of effort lie on the Middle Atlantic seaboard and in the Middle West. Here is where the Republicans must labor mightily if their cause is to prevail in November.

If this analysis is sound, Mr. Landon was a political realist when he chose Pennsylvania and New York for his first major platform appearances. On his way to and from Maine he made short stops in the highly crucial areas upstate in New York, Indiana, Illinois and Iowa. Now he has embarked on a trip which will take him through Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Illinois. All these States except Wisconsin are debatable territory and must be won by the Republicans if this party is to control the White House.

Mock Battle in Moscow.

Moscow, Sept. 24 (AP).—A vast mock battle between "Spanish loyalists" and "Spanish rebels" featured a meeting tonight of 100,000 workers in a campaign to raise money for the relief of Spanish women and children.

For hours before the meeting, government trucks rolled into the heart of Moscow carrying thousands of workers to the meeting at which delegates were elected to accompany a "food ship" taking supplies to Spain.

Some 5,000 persons participated in the mock "battle," which was supposed to be a replica of the fighting in Toledo.

Finally, the "workers" ran on the stage in a fierce battle firing regulation rifles loaded with blank cartridges. Amid loud cheers they finally emerged victorious.

Similar meetings were held in various sections of Russia tonight with workers asked to pledge one-eighth of a day's salary for the relief of women and children in war-torn Spain.

Nation's Police Urge New Deportation Laws

Kansas City, Sept. 24 (AP).—The Nation's police officials today urged broader deportation laws to help them cope with the problem of alien criminals.

In a resolution unanimously adopted by the International Association of Chiefs of Police, the existing deportation law was declared "unsatisfactory because it fails to provide for deportation of large numbers of dangerous and habitual criminals who should be deported."

Highway Fund Plan.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 24 (AP).—Commissioner Henry G. Shirley, of the State highway department, said today that he favored submitting the question of an amendment to the Virginia constitution to prohibit the diversion of highway funds to the voters in a popular referendum.

France to Urge League Parley To Slash Arms

Steering Committee Tells President to Cut Off Inflammatory Talks.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Sept. 24.—France tonight presented a plan for a League of Nations disarmament conference while the League moved to prevent inflammatory speeches from its rostrum.

France officially notified the League Assembly steering committee it would propose convocation of the general committee as a disarmament conference.

The committee, meanwhile, authorized President Saaveddra Lamas to halt any speaker who he thinks guilty of utterances liable to affect adversely international relations.

The first scheduled speakers include Julio Alvarez del Vayo, delegate of the Spanish Madrid government; Yvon Delbos, French delegate, and Anthony Eden, Great Britain's foreign secretary.

Del Vayo, it was understood, would address the League on the Spanish civil war.

Premier Mussolini of Italy, it was reported tonight, has been advised to hurry the complete conquest of Ethiopia to fortify his demands Haile Selassie's kingdom be excluded from the League of Nations.

(Seats for Ethiopia, informed sources declared in Rome, would mean the absence of Italy from Geneva but not its withdrawal from the League. Mussolini was reported considering a statement of his future policy, outlining a course of Italian action.)

Alley Featured On La Paree's Premier Card

Ben Gets Going at Lunch Hour Today; Dancing on Bill.

By Chanticleer.

Ben Alley heads the premier show at La Paree, opening today at the luncheon hour. Alley's claim to fame dates back to that broadcasting hour of several years ago—Nocturne Hour—with Ann Leaf. He will emmcee the show, topped by the Continental Revue—consisting in no small part of a group of dancing lovelies direct from the Main Stem.

Al Sakol contributes the piece de resistance of the news from La Paree, presenting to Washington today his new 10-piece orchestra—with Buddy Shaner and Honey Davis vocalizing.

Paul Tremaine is coming next Tuesday to Cocoanut Grove to fill a weak spot in the Grove's set up. Tremaine brings his orchestra to the Grove for an indefinite stay. Whatever else might be said of Pete Moss and his colored band, they just didn't fit the requirements for music at a spot of this type.

Tremaine's band has been known to dancers and the radio audience for years—remember that signature song, "Lonely Acres?" He brings a company of 11 artists for the premier next week. Cassandra, psychic (mind-reader, to you), in baffling the customers at the Grove this week.

For Borisoff has been responsible for the schooling of the stagings of the Boatman before. And that's a lot for any evening in Washington.

American University previously had been given $3,990 to aid 43 students, and Howard University $6,420 to aid 138. Jews' Influence Scored By Rome Fascist Chief

Rome, Sept. 24 (AP).—Roberto Farinacci, former secretary of the Fascist Party and a member of the Fascist Grand Council, tonight editorially assailed "the subversive influence of Jews" on European governments.

His editorial was printed in his newspaper Regime Fascista, and attracted wide attention because of his prominence in the Fascist Party in which antisemitism has never been a tenet.

Two Seized in Raid On 'One of Oldest Gambling Joints'

Charges of operating a lottery and setting up a gaming table in the 1100 block of Twenty-third street were placed against two men when vice squad police raided "one of the oldest gambling joints in the city" yesterday.

The men—Barney Susser, 37, of the Twenty-third street address, and Benn Kolodin, 36, of the 1200 block, Oates street northeast—were held under $2,000 bail for a hearing next month when arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

Lieut. George M. Little, chief of the vice squad, said his men seized a quantity of numbers and race horse slips, with several pieces of marked money.

The establishment, operated under the guise of a grocery, has been running off and on for more than ten years, police said. It has been raided many times, but the profit is so great operators always are willing to risk the arrest, they added.

"Play amounted to nearly $1,000 a day," said Sergt. George Deyo, who led the raid.

Clara Bristow, 18-year-old granddaughter of Joseph Little Bristow, former Senator from Kansas, who has been missing from her home, 835 F street southwest, has been staying with her mother in Fairfax County, police were told yesterday.

The girl, who attended Central High School, told relatives in a letter, postmarked Washington, she was "tired of school" and was going to "get a job."

Ernest M. Pier, 29, of the 1400 block Rhode Island avenue northwest, a prisoner at the Second Precinct station, was sent to Gallinger Hospital for observation yesterday after he allegedly tried to hang himself in his cell.

According to police, Pier tried to hang himself with his trousers and then butted his head against the walls of the cell. He had been charged with intoxication and disorderly conduct.

Churchill Urges Unity To Beat an Aggressor

Paris, Sept. 24 (AP).—Winston Churchill, British statesman, declared today that Europe's greatest need was for a "tremendous organization of nations ready to fall upon an aggressor and beat the pride out of him so that no one would dare to break the peace of Europe."

Churchill asserted that France has the finest army and Britain the finest navy in the world, and held that the two nations must unite against aggression.

Nashua, N. H., Sept. 24 (AP).—J. Leon Lazarowitz said today the railroads don't know it, but he owes them $8,522.80 for transporting him into virtually every State in the Union during the last 17 years.

Lazarowitz, self-described former hobo king of America, explained that his habit of riding the rods was responsible for his debt to the Nation's carriers.

He said he stopped off here to look over the White Mountains.

Ruhland Plans City Campaign On Diphtheria

Drive to Seek Inoculation of Every Child; Waits Approval of Aids.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland yesterday stated that he is merely awaiting approval of six physicians, six nurses, and six clerks before launching a city-wide diphtheria campaign on October 5.

The campaign, financed by Social Security funds, will seek to have every child of pre-school age inoculated against diphtheria. Mortality is greatest, he said, at this age.

Dr. Ruhland asserted his recent move to enlist business organizations into the campaign already has produced results. A case of diphtheria was discovered Wednesday at a chain drug store food counter, he said. Other employes were examined immediately, but no other cases were found.

Warning adults against too light dismissal of sore throats, Dr. Ruhland advised consultation of private physicians or, where the patient could not afford this, a visit to health department clinics.

So far this calendar year there have been 676 cases of diphtheria reported to the health department. Twenty-two deaths have resulted.

Dawes Denounces Briton's Criticism

Chicago, Sept. 24 (AP).—Gen. Charles G. Dawes, former Vice President and chief supply commandant of the United States Army in France during the World War, asserted today that David Lloyd George's criticism "that America "failed to turn out mechanism for war" in 18 months of effort was a "gross misrepresentation."

"When studied impartially, I believe the American effort, both in the speed of preparation and in general accomplishments, compared favorably with that of any nation engaged," Gen. Dawes said.

"I have not read the book (fifth volume of Lloyd George's memoirs), but such parts as have been brought to my attention relative to America's participation in the war seem to me a gross misrepresentation."

3 Children Die in Fire; Parents Badly Burned

Mackinaw City, Mich., Sept. 24 (AP). Three children were burned to death today in a fire which destroyed their farm home several miles south of here. Their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Terrian, suffered serious burns.

The children, Virginia, 12; Thermon, 8, and Donald, 5, were trapped in an upstairs bedroom. Terrian ascended a ladder and rescued his youngest daughter, a child of 3, but was unable to reach the other children.

Students Seek 'Mercy' for Boy In Hazing 'Riot'

Petition Asks Maryland U. Authorities to Forego Punitive Action.

Tradition-inspired students at the University of Maryland today came to the rescue of the alleged ringleader of a sophomore hazing party, which resulted in injuries to several students during a general melee Tuesday night, when they began circulation of a petition requesting that no disciplinary action be taken against the boy.

Meanwhile university officials reiterated their statement of yesterday that no decision had been reached. According to President H. C. Byrd the outbreak of sophomore-freshman warfare is still under investigation.

It was stated definitely, however, that representatives of the sophomore class had decided "to discontinue all activities that have to do with attempts to force compliance on the part of freshmen with so-called sophomore-freshman rules."

The petition, carrying more than a thousand names, contends that no severe punishment should be meted out to the student because of the mob spirit which prevailed at the time.

The boy is said to have been the leader of a sophomore "vigilantes committee," which invaded the freshman dormitory and after a lively scuffle forced 75 first-year men to march across the campus and kiss the feet of the bronze terrapin, a replica of the school mascot.

$16,000,000 Rail Unit Dedicated in Syracuse

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 24 (AP).—Syracuse dedicated a new $16,000,000 railroad depot and elevated track system today, ending an era during which it had been known as "the city where the trains run through the streets."

For the last time citizens watched the Twentieth Century Limited, the Empire State Express and other trains wend their way slowly through Washington street and the Chapter 25.

Were Alarmed.

Mal tossed his hat and coat on the bed and went over to where Ito, crouched on the hearth, was touching a match to the fire.

"Tell me exactly what happened New Year's Eve."

The Japanese, with unshakeable politeness, put in a bad half hour. It ended when Mal left off his scrutiny of Ito's face to exclaim hotly:

"Can't I go out alone without having the whole world—Never mind, Ito," he broke off, seeing the man's distress.

"We were alarmed, Mr. Mallard, to think how easily——"

"Yes—yes, I know. Surely you knew. Ito, that I wouldn't have stayed here had I known of this damned melodrama—for fear of embarrassing Miss Wyeth with it?"

"Yes, sir. But I could see Miss Wyeth wished you to stay. Will you read your letters, now, Mr. Mallard?"

Mal let out a short laugh.

"I wish I could switch my thought from one thing to another as easily as you do, Ito!"

He dropped down in a chair near the fire, and abstractedly shuffled through the mail Ito handed him. Suddenly he stiffened and stared at one of the envelopes marked "Personal."

"Ito! Do you know anything about this letter?"

"Only that it was propped conspicuously on your desk."

"It hasn't been forwarded, either from the studio or my attorney. It's been delivered. That means, people are finding out where I'm staying."

Mal restrained an impulse to toss the letter into the fire, and examined it. Yes, boldly addressed to him at Number One, Hilltop road; but evidently prepared in haste and excitement for it was very sketchily sealed. Under the Hotel Wellington coat of arms was written Suite 305.

He drew out a pale brown sheet, covered with Zelda's familiar scrawl.

"Mal," it began, and after a trembling looking dash continued. "I've been trying to reach you by phone—only to be told you were not there. Where are you? I'll go mad unless I can hear your voice. I beg—I implore you to see me. I can't endure this any longer—these years of being continually put off while I've watched you going on and on to greatness. Forget my mistakes. They were of the head—not the heart. Young mistakes which I, as a woman, have regretted.

Desperately Lonely.

"Aren't you lonely, now, Mal? I am—desperately so.

"See me. Let us talk things over. Do you never remember the rapture of those first days of our meeting? Once I seemed to mean everything to you. You still do to me, Mal, in spite of the mad things done through anger and disappointment and, yes, jealousy. Forgive me, Mal, and see me. When you've read this go to your phone and call me—I'm at the Wellington in Pasadena—and tell me where and when I may see you. For a number of reasons it will be best for you not to come here.

"O, Mal, I beg you! Even at your worst you could be appealed to through your kindness—your intuitive sense of what the 'other fellow' is suffering. That you will be kind to me once more, is the prayer of your wife . . . His mouth is still most sweet."

Mal read this through with mounting astonishment, which exploded into a feeling of sick disgust.

"Outrageous!"

He jumped up and again began to pace up and down the room, his hands clenched deep in his pockets, his eyes, smouldering darkly, fixed on the floor . . . Incredible . . . Yet come to think of it, there had been hints of a change in tone for some time past. The mercenary angle had shifted somewhat to queer, almost shy, outbursts of sentiment. He had thought nothing of this except to surmise that Zelda was probably having a tiff with her latest "cousin" and to wish that he might run across something definite with which to free himself. . . . Not for a moment would he believe that the lady had fallen belatedly in love with her husband. Either she was temporarily lacking some man's attentions, or like many other women, was beglamored with his dramatic portraits. More likely, though, up to some trick. At any rate, she knew where he was living—which fact, coupled with speculations as to how she'd acquired it, caused him his only alarm.

"Ito, please reseal that letter and write across it, 'Not at this address.' When you've had your supper, I wish you'd take it down to the Wellington and deliver it to the doorman . . . Now, call my attorney. I've got to talk to him."

Mal stood waiting while Ito dialed the number and received the answer. Then he spoke into the phone.

"Mr. Wainwright? This is Mallard speaking. Sorry to bother you out of office hours——"

"He says—no bother," Ito, listening at the earpiece, interpolated.

"Thanks, Wainwright. The fact is, I'm decidedly upset over a letter sent here by messenger. It is preposterous—begging for a meeting—a reconciliation. In some way, which makes me very uneasy, she's discovered where I'm staying. Please get in touch with her yourself—at the Wellington. Tell her I'm living at the Excelsior. Say nothing about letters, but make it plain that my decision remains the same with regard to everything, including meetings . . . I say, Wainwright, you try to do it as kindly as possible——"

Curled Up on Couch.

"He says he will," Ito whispered.

"Thank you, Wainwright. I'll be moving tomorrow, and will come in soon to see you. Hope I didn't disturb you at dinner."

Mal found Pamella curled up on a couch before the fire in the library. A lamp on the desk behind her shed a glow over the rich bindings of the books that lined the walls from floor to ceiling. It mingled with the sturdy blaze of the fire snapping cheerfully on the hearth, and tinged Pam's face with a false radiance.

Mal's dark glance swept over the grace of Pamella's figure, and lingered on the lines of her head etched exquisitely against a satin pillow. He could see no traces of tears, though her face looked very white.

"May I come in, Pamella?"

She looked up and smiled.

"Don't move!" Mal crossed the room quickly toward her. "Tired, dear? My little powdered lady!"

He leaned over the end of the couch where her head was resting and softly pressed his hand over her hair, which Pam had pushed back in a lovely pure line from her forehead.

"All day I've been looking at those gorgeous red glints in Ellen's hair and envying them," she told him with her face lifted to his.

"You have no cause to envy any woman! To me—you and everything about you couldn't be improved upon."

"But my hair has been a great cross to me, Mal. It began turning gray when I was 17. Nearly broke my heart. For a long time, I would never appear anywhere without a hat—trying to hide it. How foolish vanity can make a woman!"

"It makes greater fools of men. It has complicated certain phases of despair I've gone through while adjusting myself to difficulties. Made pretty much a blithering fool of me."

Mal, bending over Pamella's lifted face, tore his eyes miserably away from her lips where a little expectant smile was trembling. He walked around the couch and flung himself down in a big chair across from her on the hearth. He gripped its arms as if to keep himself seated there at a reasonably safe distance.

Right to the Jaw Lands on Sheriff, So Socker's Jailed

Charles W. Baumbaugh, 56-year-old Washington painter, was in the Arlington County Jail last night after he unwittingly had outraged the majesty of the Virginia law.

Baumbaugh, sitting in a car at Rosslyn, Va., asked a passerby to take him to Nineteenth street. The passerby refused, whereupon Baumbaugh leaped from his car and planted a right to the stranger's jaw.

The passerby, who was Sheriff Howard B. Fields of Arlington County, took Baumbaugh to the county jail, where he was charged with intoxication and assault. He gave his address in the 200 block northeast.

Jimmy Cagney Has a Scheme To Help Road

Plans Hollywood 'Circus' to Take Talented Cast Into Small Towns.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Sept. 24.—Red-haired Jimmy Cagney—"I'm just a barnstormer at heart"—is organizing a round-robin Hollywood "circus" to revive legitimate drama in the small towns.

Recruits to date include stocky Pat O'Brien, former Cagney screen teammate; Robert Montgomery, M-G-M personality boy, and stalwart William Gargan—all on condition their studios let them go.

The Cagney circus will tour towns of less than 100,000 with a play—"We're already dickering for one"—and under the round-robin idea no actor will have a definite part.

Different Part Each Night.

"Tonight," explained Cagney, "I'd play the villain—next night the hero—night after that something else—maybe just carry a spear. Everybody will get to play a different role every performance."

In case anyone wonders why Cagney hankers to take on a job of trouping after alleging he was overworked in his recent court battle with Warner Brothers, he has an explanation for that, too.

Cagney went to court to break his contract with Warners on the ground that an alleged verbal contract limited his output to four pictures a year, whereas he was required to do five or more. A court dissolved the agreement, but for another reason—because an ambitious theater manager violated Cagney's "top-billing clause" by hoisting Pat O'Brien's name above his in "Ceiling Zero." The case had gone to appeal, and meanwhile Cagney has signed to do two a year for Grand National.

"This circus idea is different," he explained. "It will be fun. We'll have a chance to work with real audiences and try a lot of things we'd never have a chance to do on the screen.

Culbertson on Bridge

Stuck!

Dear E. C.:

This week I have a brand new suggestion to advance, strictly in line with my chosen profession and sacred cause, the prevention of cruelty to bridge hands. Briefly put, it is just this: to open a campaign against the dastardly card manufacturers that will force them to discontinue putting glue on the faces of high honor cards! Of course I cant prove that they put the glue there but it must be so, else, how could these cards remain undetachable from the aforesaid players' hands until long past the time for their effectual playing? What explanation other than glue could account for East's sticking to his ace of hearts in the following hand?

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

♥ J 9 8 4 2
♦ 6 5 2
♣ Q 7 3

WEST
♠ J 9 7 3
♥ K 7
♦ K Q 8 4
♣ 6 5 3

EAST
♥ A 5 3
♦ 10 7 3
♣ K 10 8 4

SOUTH
♠ K Q 10 5
♦ A J 9
♣ A J 9

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 no trump	Pass	2 hearts	Pass
3 no trump	Pass	Pass	Pass

Obviously, the bidding was not good (charitably speaking). North should have passed to one no trump, but even after he erred in taking out to two hearts, South was not strong enough to jump to three no trump. Two spades or two no trump would have been ample.

West opened the four of diamonds; East's ten went to declarer's jack. The queen of hearts was led and both West and East ducked. The ten of hearts was taken by West's king, and since West could not be sure but that declarer had left the A 9 7 of diamonds, he shifted to his fourth highest spade. East took the ace and then the glue episode came up! With no reason in the world to hold on to the heart ace (East himself could shut out dummy's only conceivable entry card, the club queen), East apparently could not unstick that beautiful card. Instead of ridding himself of it as though it were a plague, he returned the seven of diamonds. Declarer ducked; West won and continued the suit. Declarer took the ace, cashed the king and queen of spades, effectively robbed East of exit cards, and then brutally led a heart! East now had to detach the the ace and could return nothing but a club. Thus dummy's club queen miraculously became an entry for the two established hearts, and finally declarer cashed his club ace for the ninth trick.

Obviously, had East not been bothered by the glue, he would have led the heart ace while he still had plenty of exit cards. This would have made the not inconsiderable difference of defeating the contract two tricks.

No one should realize better than you, E. C. that about half of the elimination and throw-in plays owe their success to trapping an opponent with a card that he should have played at an earlier stage. Your own voluminous writing has covered the point time and again. The fact that the condition persists cannot be due to the human element; contract players are far too intelligent for that. Therefore, my brilliant theory about glue stands proved, by the elimination process.

I am, sir, your loyal and scientific Spy.

Navy Plane Fall Kills Passenger And Hurts Pilot

Ship Crashes on Boat Dock at Norfolk; Low Flying Declared Cause.

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 24.—One man was killed and another believed fatally injured when a Navy utility plane crashed today on the dock at the St. Helena Coast Guard base almost alongside the cutter Sebago.

Aviation Machinists Mate P. L. McElroy, passenger, was dying when rescuers dragged him out of the wreckage of the plane and expired on the way to the Naval Hospital.

Aviation Pilot R. S. Banker, attached to the St. Helena base, pilot of the plane, was unconscious and attendants at the Naval Hospital said he had little chance of recovery.

Low flying was given by observers as the probable cause of the crash.

It was regarded as fortunate that several men on the dock at the time escaped injury from the falling plane.

The plane, witnesses say, had been flying over the Berkley area for almost an hour at an altitude of not more than 500 feet.

Circling over the Coast Guard headquarters at a height of about 200 feet, the plane's motor suddenly went dead. Swinging his ship about apparently in a desperate effort to bring it down in the comparative safety of Elizabeth River, Banker lost control when the plane lost flying speed in a steep bank and plunged to the dock.

Had the plane had 100 feet more altitude, observers state, the fatal crash might have been avoided.

Banker, who ranks as a chief radioman in the Coast Guard, had been on temporary duty at the naval air base for some time and in his capacity as an aviation pilot was loaned the plane for a practice flight.

A salvage truck and squad from the naval base is engaged this afternoon in removing the wreckage of the plane to the air base.

A regular naval board of investigation will be appointed this afternoon to study the crash and make a report to the Navy Department.

About the Showshops

BELL.

As one who comes back to the galley chains slightly out of touch with the daily goings-on, I must necessarily devote myself to what has just been on view as a casual week-ender might have viewed it. The past week, it seems to me, has offered ample corroboration of the persistent plaint of this department that the cinema is on the way to greatness.

There were such exhibits, for example, as "Nine Days a Queen," at the Earle; "The Road to Glory," at the Capitol, and "The General Died at Dawn," at the Palace. All of these are subjects that might well give the critic pause—or maybe better said, impetus.

"The General Died at Dawn" disclosed Clifford Odets in his first work for the gelatins as cogent, as powerful and as provocative a playwright as he had been revealed to lovers of the living drama by his stirring stage plays. Over all of the so-called social significance of "The General Died at Dawn" there was still the glamour and the thrill of melodrama. One could find here a little of "The Bitter Tea of General Yen," "The Good Earth" and "Shanghai Express." All good box-office.

* * * *

A good deal has been said and probably more will be about the work of the actor who plays the part of the general in this picture. Akim Tamiroff is a player who can command both comedy and tragedy. If you are in doubt, hark back to his portrayal with Gary Cooper and Marlene Dietrich in "Desire."

* * * *

But aside from all this is Playwright Odets' strict adherence to his pet notion that the common people are the ones for whom nails must be driven home. After all of the thrills of "The General Died at Dawn," there still remains the inescapable idea that here is a play that conveys its author's sense of obligation to the masses. He strikes home without pulling his punches.

* * * *

What I can't understand is why somebody hasn't proclaimed the youngster who plays the part of the juvenile king in "Nine Days a Queen" as another Freddie Bartholomew. This little fellow, by name Desmond Tester, has the Bartholomew voice, diction, inflections, and apparently every other attribute that made "David Copperfield" one of the screen's finest. All he seems to need is a little enthusiastic boosting, which we here attempt to give him.

* * * *

Speaking of "Nine Days a Queen" suggests that Nova Pilbeam is no more qualified to portray heavy emotional roles than is June Lang, who appeared in the principal feminine role in the "Road to Glory," at the Capitol. Miss Pilbeam, who made her Washington debut on the screen of the Belasco Theater a season or two back, has not as yet grown up to roles which might justify her being cast opposite Sir Cedrick Hardwicke. Neither has Miss Lang attained that eminence which might justify her appearance in roles of prime importance opposite such stars as Fredric March and Warner Baxter.

Miss Lang incidently was cast as a sort of juvenile and undeveloped Loretta Young in "The Road to Glory," in which the earnest observer might have detected the salient features of "The Big Parade," "What Price Glory," the "Eagle and the Hawk" and the "Dawn Patrol." Not a steal from either, or all, of these, but nevertheless combining the best qualities of each.

* * * *

It was annoying to have events so shape themselves as to preclude our resumption of a pleasant friendship with Henry Armetta when he was here as a particular guest—or maybe not so particular—of Arthur De Titta and friend wife, Helen, and Mr. Tony Muto, and ditto. The lopsided Mr. Armetta is one of the fondest fellows we are of and our having missed him just goes to show what so-called vacations will do for a guy.

* * * *

Our personal nomination for the most colorful, the most sensuous and the speediest stage show of recent months is the Rimac fol-de-rol which closed last night at the Earle Theater. This is a business which, to our vague way of thinking, has everything. There is only one comparable production now playing the vaudeville stages and that I should say is Dave Apollon's Russian Revue. Not the least of the attractive qualities of the Latin-American stage hit at the Earle were contributed by that rotund and expansive personality known to the trade as Senor Don Alfonso Zelaya, son of a potentate of a Central American republic who came to the States as a cadet at West Point, evolved into a pianist in the back room of Stonestreet's and now occupies the exalted place of headliner in a type of entertainment that is rapidly going by the board. The kid has talent. The first thing you know he will be getting himself some place.

* * * *

So yesterday afternoon, 18 years after the original event, Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller and Manager Abe Tolkins cocktailed the gentry in celebration of the reopening of the Rialto Theater. Here's mud in your eye.

Hospital attendants said Mrs Sugg, who was hit in the abdomen, was in a critical condition. A number of shot struck the elder Sugg and J. P. Sugg in the body, while Spicer Sugg received several in the mouth.

Deputy Sheriff F. C. Carraway said Sugg admitted the shooting from the car after the two men had called to Dail Sugg to come out of his house and he had not complied with the demand.

FAME: The Cunard-White Star Line, proud of the accomplishments of a British lady, sent out a publicity release announcing that Mrs. Markham was among the famous names who would embark on the Queen Mary today . . . The aviatrix appeared on Milton Berle's program the day after her plane landed in Newfoundland . . . The steamship company's release contained a single error. It referred to her as Mrs. Berle Markham.

ENTERPRISE: George Bernard Shaw recently was informed that Mrs. Markham is being offered $2,500 a week to appear on a London stage . . . "Flying the Atlantic," is his criticism, "doesn't qualify her to appear on the stage as an actress—for the same reason that because an actress appeared on the stage she's qualified to fly the Atlantic."

WORRY: Enric Madriguera, the band leader, has a mother and four sisters residing in Barcelona, Spain. Worried over the advance of rebel troops and a possible bombardment of that city, he spent all day yesterday with his ear to a short-wave radio set, tuned in on Barcelona. And all day long the jazz maestro heard but one thing—a broadcast of American jazz.

AILMENT: Hollywood is discussing this Garbo tale, concerning the movie star's prolonged ailment, which has reduced her weight considerably . . . "We're very much worried over your appearance," a producer told her. Miss Garbo ran her hand over her shrunken figure and replied: "Ay tank you minn my disoppearonce."

TURMOIL: The sports reporters have noted the internal dissension among Joe DiMaggio and some of the Yankee ball players who now are preparing for the World Series. This is the reason: A breakfast food company is preparing health ad testimonials by the players. Joe McCarthy, the manager, got $750 for his signature. Gehrig was paid $500; Lazzeri, $200, and Crosetti, $150. They're resentful of DiMaggio, youngest in point of service, who received $350.

DEATH: Harold Sullivan, proprietor of Sully's Show Boat—a Greenwich Village cafe—was slain Monday morning. Two policemen have been arrested in connection with the shooting . . . The victim's cafe is located in the heart of the Village's hot-spot section, where competition is keen and frantic. Sullivan was a strong competitor, contriving devious means of attracting business away from his rival spots . . . He died broke. His funeral expenses will come from a collection now being made—by his competitors.

CREATION: Tin Pan Alley has been exciting the music world for the past few months with an allegedly new type of jazz described as swing. "Stuff" Smith and a host of others have claimed originality in this field—and swing even has spread to the movie-title domain . . . "The Dixieland Jazz Band, America's premier swing band, will open at Reisenweber's." The quote is from Variety—March 10, 1917.

CHATTER: Herbert Bayard Swope placed a $10,000 bet on Roosevelt with Wall Streeter Ben Smith and Gene Tunney just before the latter sneaked off to Europe . . . Lloyd's paid off on its 5-to-1 odds against Richman and Merrill completing their round-trip flight across the Atlantic . . . Miriam Hopkins is remaining out of the country because of a threatened $500,000 suit against her in California . . . The Queen of Spain saw her first American play last night. The Queen, whose name is Victoria, witnessed Helen Hayes in "Victoria Regina" . . . Broadway's most ironic note of the month: The House of Morgan, the most capitalistically named cafe in America, is being converted now into a Russian night club.

Dr. Boyd Due As Panama's Legate Here

Medical, Official Leader of Republic, on Way to U. S., Son Says.

Pereiras Guests at Tea of Dr. and Mrs. Lewis at Local Home.

By Dudley Harmon.

It looks as though the now vacant post of Panamanian Minister, about which political gossip has been buzzing for weeks, is to be filled again. At least Mr. Augusto Boyd, who is visiting Dr. and Mrs. J. G. Lewis here, remarked at a tea given at their home yesterday, that his father, Dr. Augusto Boyd, was sailing October 6 to take over the position left vacant by the resignation of Dr. Ricardo Alfaro.

Dr. Boyd's name frequently has recurred in rumors concerning Dr. Alfaro's successor. Of English descent, as are many Panamanians, including Dr. Lewis, Dr. Boyd has long been prominent in official and medical circles. He was for some time chief surgeon of the leading hospital in Panama. Mrs. Boyd and his daughter, Miss Dora Boyd, will accompany Dr. Boyd here, according to his son.

The tea given yesterday by Dr. and Mrs. Lewis was in honor of the President of the National University of Panama and Mrs. Octavio Mendez Pereira. Dr. Pereira, who wears the rosette of the French Legion of Honor in his buttonhole, came to this country to attend the Harvard tercentenary celebration. He was formerly minister of education in Panama and was at one time Minister to London.

The Pereiras are leaving tomorrow to return to Panama, but they have placed one of their sons in Georgetown University, so it is likely they will be occasional visitors to Washington in the future.

Mrs. Lewis, like her husband, was born in Panama, and is a niece of a former president of that country, Dr. Chiarri. Yesterday she wore a black velvet gown with a bodice of white velvet. Mrs. Pereira also was gowned in black, and on her shoulder was pinned a huge corsage of orchids.

Spanish seemed to be the language of the occasion yesterday afternoon, and one heard it on all sides. Among the guests were the Cuban Ambassador, Senor Dr. Guillermo Patterson; the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de Castillo Najera, who wore a brown crepe frock and a brown felt hat; the Minister of Ecuador and Senora de Alfaro, who poured tea for a while; the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos, the Minister of El Salvador and Senora de Castro, and Mr. and Mrs. William Perrichelli.

Also present were Mrs. Thomas Dawson—her late husband was Ambassador to Brazil—with her daughter, Miss Lilita Dawson; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, the latter wearing a black ensemble with a black velvet hat trimmed with a gold ornament, and the Charge d'Affaires and Senora de Chevalier with the latter's sister, Mrs. Maria Arias. Senor Chevalier is leaving Washington soon to become undersecretary for Foreign Relations in Panama. The former Governor of the Canal Zone and Mrs. Maurice Thatcher were among the other guests present.

Capital Woman To Return Soon

Mrs. Mary McCracken Jones, who is returning Wednesday on the City of Norfolk from a three months' trip through the British Isles, will be met by Miss Hazel Edgar and Mrs. Gertrude Crocker, who will drive to Norfolk, Va., to greet her.

Mr. and Mrs. Crocker went to England this summer, expecting to join Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie and travel with them, but missed connections with them one place after another and finally returned to America without having even seen them.

Mrs. Jones drove 1,600 miles over the narrow, winding roads of rural Ireland, Scotland and England during her trip, managing without mishap despite hairpin turns, hedges, bicyclists, the left-hand drive of the British car and left-hand rules of the road. She also rode 6 miles on horseback through the Gap Dunloe, in Kilarney, making that trip on her birthday.

She drove through Wales, along the eastern coast of Scotland and went through the Caledonian Canal aboard the Lady of the Lake. She also spent some time in Oxford, where she had gone as a bride.

Posts, Newly Wed, En Route to West

Mr. and Mrs. Paul I. Post, who were married on Wednesday, are en route to Kansas City on their honeymoon. They will return East and reside at New Kensington, Pa. The bride is the former Miss Ruth Fiske Nicholson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Steele, of Washington.

Her wedding took place in the Sixth Presbyterian Church, the Rev. J. Herbert Garner officiating. She was given in marriage by her father. She wore an ivory satin gown made with dolman sleeves, with a long train and a veil held in place with a cap of pearls.

The bride's sister, Mrs. A. Stuart Donnan, was matron of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Marjorie Burton and Miss Bertha E. Denison. Mr. L. G. Vogel, of Pittsburgh, was best man and the ushers were Mr. Joseph T. Owens, Mr. J. B. Hanson, Mr. Leon K. Bryner and Mr. A. Stuart Donnan.

Daughter Is Born.

Lieut. Hamilton B. South, U. S. M. C., and Mrs. South announce the birth of a daughter on Wednesday at Garfield Hospital. The child will be named Deborah. Mrs. South is the former Roslyn Walter, of Harrisburg.

Foibles and Folks

Tom Burke has the most surprising telephone manner. To hear his cheery greeting booming across the yards of wire is enough to make anyone sit up and answer likewise. His latest is an enthusiastic "Yo." Recently someone misunderstood him and thought he said Joe, and they weren't named that. Thus an explanation was in order. The good looking head of the Burke household explained that in the service they stand in line and as each name is called the owner sings out with a "Yo." He completed his little say-so with—"but in spite of my past training, I am not regimented." Most unforgivable, say we.

Bill, Patsy and young Billy Bride have moved. They have left the joy and comfort of an apartment for the thrill and independence of a house. Theirs is a quaint, delightful little abode down in Alexandria, whose fatal fascination is fast winning many loyal Washingtonians away. Patsy, describing her new home and how to reach it, said: "Well, it's in Alexandria and just across the street from the Home of the Aged. Very convenient, you see, when we get old, all we have to do is move across the street."

Just because Lyle Overbrook is going bareheaded these days does not mean that he has cast his hat into any ring. The sad story is that coming back from a motor trip to Cincinnati with his mother, Mrs. Eva Kelly Overbrook, and his sister, Miss Laura Overbrook, they stopped off at a hotel in one of the towns en route here. While driving he had taken off his hat and forgotten all about it. The car was left in the garage overnight, and somehow between dinner and breakfast the piece of apparel disappeared. And so, he politely pointed out to the management of the hostelry, it should feel its responsibility. Unless it does, he will continue to go about the city, snow, or blow, sans chapeau.

Lindsay Moss, long absent from town and going his own way in New Haven, Conn., will be here in a day or so for a short stay. He has as much as admitted he really misses the gay times of Washington, especially along about now with the debutante parties just beginning to get under way. Wouldn't be surprised if his long black roadster suddenly ran up a startling mileage, commuting between here and New England.

Mary Ellen Cremen remains as silent as a sphinx about the probable date of her marriage to Jim Carr. All of their friends seem much more concerned with the plans and details than the two principals. Saw her with her brother Jack, who is back again after another of his cross-country trips. She was becomingly clad in a maroon crepe, with hat to match.

Well, well, is Bette Hartz going to make her debut, or isn't she? We were told just the other day she would be presented to society at a tea in November—but—the young lady is wearing a new and brilliant diamond of generous size.

A Woman's NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

ALICE HUGHES.

It is natural, I suppose, that my luncheons customarily consist of a lettuce leaf and a hurricane of chatter about fashion and its weird foibles. I'm a shoemaker, and that's one of my lasts. Imagine my amazement, the other day, when I found myself across a table from a jolly-white-haired woman who was positively eloquent on the subject of hay-stacks!

My vis-a-vis was Mrs. Eda Morey, who professes English in an up-State college, and for some unaccountable reason she has been a close student of hay-piles all over the country! Pop-eyed, I learned that practically every part of the country has its distinctive stack. In New Jersey, it's informal. In the West, they are apt to be square. In New England, characteristically, they are pointed and precise, while the Dakotas exhibit stack that are loose and formless. The neatest she has ever beheld dot the fields of Indiana. Just bring Mrs. Morey a hay-stack and she'll tell you where it came from, and maybe the farmer's name, for all I know.

She's full of all sorts of other information, too. It must be fun to study with her. I amigine she'll stop right in the midst of a discussion of poor old Hamlet's alleged lunacy to humanize the class with the results of her alert observation.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The synthetically cynical theatrical district is quite agog over the new two-story building which faces the Hotel Astor on Broadway. It houses a brand-new 1,500-seat movie house called, like its predecessor on the spot, the Criterion, and the entire second floor will be filled with still another popular-priced night club. Oh, dear! one more joint to go to—once!

• • • •

It's been a pelasure to see movie-actress Ann Dvorak around town. I think she's one of the loveliest of the cinema sisters. She and husband Leslie Fenton are off for a European jaunt. . . .

• • • •

There's a rumor afloat at present that lovely Lucrezia Bori will again warble at the Met, in spite of her very fancy retirement last spring. She is said to have lost practically all her fortune in the Spanish turmoil . . . And the gossipers note with eager eyes and poised pencils that Ethel Barrymore's boy Jackie is seen constantly with a pretty girl named Betty Spalding, so they add two and two and get their usual five. . . .

• • • •

If you drop into the old Lyceum Theater, Uncle Daniel Frohman's house, over which he has his living quarters, you won't know the veteran playhouse. They're spending $8,000 for painting, new seats and fresh carpets. High time, too, for the place was looking terribly ratty, and the pews were practically collapsible. . . . Second generation troupers are more active all the time. Now pretty Claudia Morgan, daughter of droll Frank and niece of Ralph, has a big part in "And Stars Remain," the Guilder which stars Helen Gahagan and Clifton Webb. . . . Firmly believing that the more apples, the less business for the medical gents, State of Washington apple growers are preparing to spend no less than $175,000 on a publicity campaign to boost their product. Swell crop this year, they report.

Wise Mother Allows Child Some Secrets

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MRS. X often made the proud boast that her Susy told her everything. The chances are that if she had Susy's entire confidence she would not like a large part of it. Susy has her own secret life, of which she probably tells very little. It may be good, or it may be bad, but the kind of mother who demands or expects her child's entire confidence seldom has it.

One has a right to privacy, even from one's mother, and the wise mother respects and encourages the child in establishing and developing this privacy. The tiny child is still unaware of his individuality. He is apt to blurt out everything he knows. To keep a secret from mother seems not only wrong, but impossible. Gradually this frankness lessens.

Every year, every day, his reticencies increase; he grows more reserved, until in time a normal relationship of two separate individualities replaces the dependence of the child, who feels a pressing need to confide in his mother.

The woman of growing children who smugly congratulates herself on knowing all her children's thoughts and reactions is congratulating herself on the wrong thing. She should want their trust and confidence, not their secrets.

By careful and persistent questioning she may learn a great deal that the child does not want or mean to tell. Children are often not good at hiding things. But she gains nothing from these enforced confidences but the child's distrust and resentment.

It is better for the child to keep his own counsel and settle his own problems than for him to keep asking or telling mother or father. He must do it some day.

The woman who can honestly trust her child to make his own decisions without coming to her first is certainly the one to be congratulated. Such a state of parenthood, naturally, is one to be greatly desired, but it cannot be attained unless the mother works with her child intelligently toward this end.

Tailored and Chic Yet With the Feminine Touch

The brushed felt hat of black with beige band (left) typifies the new feminine trend in tailored models. This style is particularly becoming to women of small stature. Manipulated crown and a stitched effect in the felt distinguish the wine-colored hat at right. A swank new model (below) featuring high, squared crown, glove-stitched.

Tailored Hat Falls in Line Of Style Edict

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

TAILORED FEMININITY for your suit, sports and simple afternoon costumes. With the mode going complicated, "ladylike" and luxurious, it is not surprising that the backbone of the hat wradrobe, the strictly tailored hat, should follow this precedent and appear in numerous new and appropriate versions. Here are some of the salient features as explained by Miss Agnes Rusch, of the Knox Hat Co., who is in Washington for several days.

High crowns have invaded this hat realm and the brims are inclined to be streamlined, long ovals in preference to the round contours of last year.

Profile brims and tall feather trimming are also much in evidence.

Glove stitching and appliques of leather lend feminine touches to an otherwise severely tailored model.

In contrast to the old-time suit and sports hat, the latest creations make a woman look young—they are designed to be ageless.

"The sports hat should match the costume," Miss Rusch advised. "That is smarter than a contrast. If a third color is preferred, however, contrasting hat bands, feather and leather trimming, are the correct solution. While brims range in width from 2½ to 4 inches, it is extremely important to watch the brim when buying a tailored hat. The short, small woman cannot wear the type of hat that turns up in the back and dips down in the front at a wide angle—she should select one of narrow brim that is of even width all the way round. The round face can take a hat with tall crown, although if the wearer is tall, the crown-styling should be subtly handled."

For fur-trimmed suits and coats, there is a new profile-brimmed tailored model of imported velour with skyrocketing feather extending from the back over the crown. Or, for the woman of small stature, a modified version with shorter feather arrangement at one side. These, as well as the hats that are classed as strictly sports, may be had in all of the present high-fashion colors (including black, brown, wine, green, gray and blue), in fact there are 60 tones on the fall and winter Knox color card.

Since knitted costumes are so much in the style picture this season, tailored hats have taken on added importance. To wear with knits, tweeds and woolens, there is a new brushed felt that has the appearance of angora. The style, while copied from a man's hat, is feminine in appearance and comes in lovely soft tones and mixtures. A grand sweater accompaniment. With the latest styling and feminine trend in tailored hats, they can now be worn with fashion assurance from morning until evening. And, the well-stocked tailored hat wardrobe should include at least six different versions to serve all occasions.

Stiff Silks Notable.

Stiff silks are becoming more important for evening wear, an influence due to the approaching coronation. They are usually fashioned in Edwardian styles. A gown may have a front of one material and a back of a contrasting one. Heavy white satin used in these gowns resembles upholstery.

Season with salt and peper, add the tomato juice, a bit of lemon rind, and the pimiento finely cut. While the fish is cooking, cook the rice in boiling salted water until tender. Make a crown of the rice on a platter, place the fish in the center, pour the gravy over it, and garnish with thin slices of lemon.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Pyorrhea a Destructive Disease.

Are we to become a toothless people—with our digestive troubles multiplied a hundredfold? Well, possibly—but certainly unless we play fair with our teeth, gums and mouths. We do not chew enough or brush enough. In fact, we show less respect for our oral cavities than we accord our cheeks and lips. Seeds of infection come along—encouraged by neglect—and find ready lodgment and a favorable environment for growth.

The general health of the body has much to do with the teeth. Substances that are damaging may circulate in the blood and be secreted with the saliva—thus bathing these important structures.

One of our most pernicious diseases is called pyorrhea—a word meaning a flow of pus. Almost anyone can recognize late symptoms, but when it becomes obvious to one's friends remedial measures will probably be applied too late to repair the damage. If the remark is made, "Your teeth are growing longer," the chances are that pyorrhea has gained a firm foothold. Of course, the teeth are not longer—they merely appear so because the gums have shrunk toward the jaw, exposing more of the bone.

Begins at Surface.

The disease starts in what is called the peridontal membrane. Blood vessels which nourish this structure also supply nutrition to the outer layer of the root. Destruction of this membrane begins at its gum surface and proceeds along the root. If it is extensive enough the tooth loosens and finally falls out. It is necessary, therefore, that this important area should be well nourished. This means a sufficent number of capillaries carrying good blood. If nutrition is low the growth of pus organisms is invited. Tartar frequently forms just beneath the edge of the gum and aids the spread of the disease.

About 90 per cent of the cases are what is known as the horizontal or marginal type, in which the gum at its junction with the tooth becomes inflamed with the gathering of pus. It is observed rarely in young persons, and usually begins at the age of 40. Only occasionally does it attack a solitary tooth.

The first symptom noted by the dentist may be a peculiar reddening, thickening, rounding, or puffing of the gum margin, which loses its close adherence to the neck of the tooth. As a result of the inflammation the gums bleed easily, there is a foul odor from the mouth, and some pain may be observed on chewing. Affected teeth will loosen only in advanced cases.

Diet Is Factor.

Animal investigation has shown that in order to have good teeth the diet must have adequate quantities of calcium, phosphorus, and vitamin D. Buckets of calcium can be supplied but the teeth will fail to develop normally if phosphorus or vitamin D is lacking. The remarkably fine teeth of the Hawaiian natives are ascribed to the generous use of poi, a particular kind of food which contains both calcium and phosphorus. Sunshine provides the source of vitamin D, hence good teeth are the result.

Treatment consists first in the institution of a sanitary regime of the mouth and the teeth. There is no drug, compound, or vaccine that acts as a specific. All calculi (tartar) must be removed, as well as the infected gum tissue. Pockets where bacteria may lodge must be obliterated by chemical and surgical means.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"If a husband acts like a lion, put him in a den . . . that's my advice," announced a club-crony of ours. "My husband used to roar and pace around the house, leaving havoc in his wake, but now he's practically purring, all because I made him a room of his own. He's crazy about carpentering, so I got a work bench with places for all his tools . . . believe it or not he's been going in for ping pong paddles. He's made them for all his friends, and now he's even selling them to a sporting goods store near us. Personally I suspect that he spends more on the wood and the tools than he makes, to say nothing of all his evening hours, but he gets more of a kick out of making a quarter out of ping pong paddles than out of making a living as an engineer."

She's a smart lady. As a matter of fact, that den of her husband's is even nicer than it sounds. It was made in the attic and she had the walls sealed up with plain pine boards, then left the floors plain bare wood too. That way he could work with more freedom and yet this finish for the walls of a room has a lot of charm. She added some comfortable chairs, upholstered in a rather bright green, some good lamps, a selection of marine and sporting pictures framed with narrow wood frames in natural finish, and some animal skin rugs that he's crazy about. These rugs take away the starkness of the plain floor when he's using the room for lounging, yet they're easy to put out of the way when he wants to do a little sawing. The curtains are made to draw completely back and give him plenty of light—they're made of a brown and green plaid that a man would like.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Woman's Grief Over Death of Long-Time Friend Made More Bitter by Reflections on What Might Have Been.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Last November I lost a very dear friend, a widower with whom I had been keeping company for nearly 10 years. Two months before his death I had expressed great displeasure over something he had done, and as a result was not with him at the end. In fact, I did not know until too late that he was ill. This has been a source of great grief to me; grief which I seem unable to overcome.

• • • •

He was a pleasant companion and a good friend, likeable, respectable, and desirable in every way. He has three grown children who disliked me very much, but don't you think they should have let me know he was ill?. I can't help but feel he asked for me. I knew nothing of his death until I saw a notice in the papers, which was a dreadful shock to me.

• • • •

While I was not invited to the funeral, nevertheless I went down to his home, anyway, as I felt I should go. Do you think I did right? And don't you think his family should have notified me of his illness? I feel I never did anything to deserve such cold treatment from his children, and I know it would have meant much to both of us if I could have seen him before he passed away. Perhaps I should explain that I have been married, but have long been separated from my husband.

I will await your answer, and will be deeply grateful for any counsel you can give men. CECELIA.

DEAR CECELIA: Let bygones be bygones. There is absolutely no use crying over spilled milk. It is nearly a year now since the widower's death, and I think you are behaving very badly in mulling over what might have been if all of you had acted differently. What his family did cannot now be helped, so why probe into the ethics of their actions in failing to notify you of his last illness? If they disliked you intensely, that is reason enough and explanation enough for their failure to share with you an intimate sorrow.

• • • •

Since you did the thing you felt was best in going to his home without invitation, your conscience is clear, so let the matter rest there. No one ever died but he left to mourn him some person or persons who in the first sting of bereavement felt an inclination to give away to torturing pangs of remorse. But common sense and good mental health dictates that one should turn away from such morbid preoccupation with things that cannot be helped.

My advice to you is to turn your face resolutely to the world about you, and try to forget all except the pleasant and happy aspects of your long-time associations with the widower. If his family was, in your opinion, unkind to you, try to compensate for this unkindness by showing a greater kindness to others who may stand in need of cheering. M. H.

Seeks Legal Aid.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Several weeks ago in your column you gave the name and address of an agency in Washington which gives legal advice to persons in moderate financial circumstances. Will you please give this information again for my benefit? Very truly yours, MARGARET B.

• • • •

DEAR MARGARET B.: The agency referred to is the Legal Aid Bureau, a social agency quartered in the Denrike Building, 1010 Vermont avenue northwest, telephone NAtional 8674. This agency provides legal counsel and representation only to persons who are without income, but by calling there in person, you can obtain the names of a list of "reference attorneys," who have agreed to take cases for small fees. M. H.

Peace Worker Wanted.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I wonder if there are not a good many women in Washington who find it a real problem to do anything worthwhile with their leisure time without spending money. In most religious, cultural or welfare work, you have to spend money or ask your friends to by selling tickets or raising money in some way.

• • • •

We are organizing a peace referendum, helping to build up the "will for peace," and we need workers of every kind. They won't be asked to give any money or solict any. All of us earnestly desire peace, and some must be willing to work for it. Hoping you can publish this letter soon, I am, yours sincerely, Mrs. G. T. (Lee) Bell, 2718 Thirty-second street northwest. Cleveland 1151.
DISTRICT CHAIRMAN.

• • • •

DEAR DISTRICT CHAIRMAN: Here is your letter in print, with all good wishes for the complete success of the worthy enterprise in which you are engaged. I feel sure there must be scores of women in Washington who will respond enthusiastically to this bid for volunteer workers to put their shoulders to the wheel and work for the salvation of the world through universal peace. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Legion Elects Colmery, Backs Universal Draft

Topeka Lawyer Is Named Commander in Chief at Final Session.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Sept. 24.—The American Legion, with a final blast of enthusiasm, handed Harry W. Colmery, Topeka, Kans., lawyer, its national commandership today with a mandate to work for peace among nations.

Colmery took up the gavel relinquished by Ray Murphy, retiring commander. He will head the legion's big march up Fifth avenue in New York next year.

Just before electing Colmery by acclamation, the veterans, as a "contribution to the promotion and preservation of peace," adopted a resolution demanding that "the principle of universal service be presented to the forthcoming session of the Congress as a major point in the legislative program of this organization."

District Budget Due to Amount To $47,000,000

Figures Expected to Be Submitted to Bureau Within a Week.

While the District Commissioners have not yet completed drawing up the 1938 District dual budget, indications yesterday were that the grand total, including conditional supplemental estimates, would be close to $47,000,000.

The budget probably will be submitted to the Budget Bureau within a week, although no final conclusion has been reached on the public school estimates.

As previously disclosed, the District budget will be submitted in drafts, the first covering operating costs, plus completion of construction projects now under way, and the second incorporating all capital improvements and personal additions the Commissioners feel most essential.

The initial budget consequently is expected to fall under $40,000,000, as the anticipated revenue, including a $5,000,000 Federal contribution, will not exceed that figure even after the trust accounts are included.

No figures have been disclosed regarding the school estimates, but District officials have intimated that construction recommended, including completion of buildings now under way, may amount to approximately $2,000,000.

Last year the Commissioners submitted estimates amounting to $47,477,100 after trimming departmental requests of $54,988,251. This year the departmental estimates totaled $58,027,433.

Curb Stocks Lower At Session's Close

New York, Sept. 24 (AP).—A good demand for Gulf Oil, Electric Bond & Share and one or two other leaders failed to inspire general support and over most of the curb list prices were lower at the close today.

Gulf moved up 104¾, a new high, and finished about a point under that figure for a gain of 1⅝. Electric Bond & Share closed at 22⅜, up ⅝. International Petroleum 35⅛, up ⅜, and American Cyanamid "B" 33¾, up ¼.

Losses ranged from around 1 to 3 points in Montgomery Ward "A" at 147, Aluminum Co. of America, 134½; Pittsburgh Plate Glass, 132¼, and A. M. Castle Co., 52. Transactions totaled 281,000 shares against 332,000 yesterday.

Presidential Poll

Contest Column

$1,000 in cash prizes will be awarded 34 contest winners, with $500 for first prize. The contest closes at midnight, Friday, October 30.

Q. How true is the political axiom: "As Goes Maine, So Goes the Nation?"

A. Only in election years when the Republicans have won in landslide proportions or when the Democrats have eked out a bare victory in the Presidential elections has the "As Goes Maine, So Goes the Nation" axiom proved itself. In other instances, when the G. O. P. has won in Maine by a smaller-than-ordinary majority, the national election has tipped one way or the other.

As a matter-of-fact, the shifting political fortunes of the two parties in the State of Ohio offer contestants in The Post's $1,000 Presidential Poll Contest a far better barometer. Since 1900, in nine Presidential elections, Ohio has been on the winning side without exception.

In 1916, Wilson won out over Hughes in one of the closest Presidential contests the country has ever seen; the closest, in fact, since the Hayes-Tilden battle of 1876. Wilson carried 277 electoral votes to 254 for Hughes. It was a difficult election to predict. Main went Republican. But Ohio cast its 24 electoral votes for Wilson. And Wilson won.

More than that, the popular vote majority Ohio gave Mr. Wilson closely paralleled—from a percentage point of view—the Wilson popular vote majority for the Nation in 1916.

• • • •

It is interesting, particularly to Presidential poll contestants, that Ohio—according to America Speaks polls—has shifted from one side to the other since the first Landon-Roosevelt poll in July.

The first poll placed the Buckeye State in the Landon column, with 57 per cent of the popular vote, against 43 per cent for President Roosevelt. The first August poll indicated a slight "shift" to Roosevelt; Landon still holding the State with an indicated 52 per cent of the popular vote (a loss of 1 per cent).

The second August poll, reported August 23, showed a more pronounced swing to the Democratic side, with approximately 1,332,000 votes in the State going to Landon and 1,312,000 going to Roosevelt.

The fourth Landon-Roosevelt poll, published September 6, gave Mr. Roosevelt the State for the first time; Roosevelt, 51 per cent; Landon, 49 per cent. And the fifth poll, September 20, indicated that the President was still maintaining his hold on Ohio with approximately the same figures.

• • • •

How will Ohio vote in the sixth America Speaks poll of the Nation? Results will be published, exclusively in Washington, in The Washington Post, Sunday, October 4.

• • • •

Florida May Bar Idle.

Tallahassee, Fla., Sept. 24 (AP).—The office of Gov. Dave Sholtz said today he is considering a renewal of the "border patrol" he established last year to "invite those who have neither job nor money to support themselves to stay away from Florida."

Attaches said last year's patrol turned away about 50,000 such persons.

Maritime Commission.

It will probably be another month or two before the newly-appointed Maritime Commission really gets underway.

The law creating the commission provided for a 30-day period during which both the Shipping Board and Merchant Fleet Corporation which are to be taken over by the commission, remain in existence. During those 30 days plans for the merging of these units with the commission are to be discussed.

Reorganization plans gotten up by the Shipping Board and Fleet Corporation officials call for the transfer of almost all the personnel of the two agencies into the new commission.

Under the terms of the act employes transferred need not take examinations, but acquire civil service status after a six-month probationary period. The act, however, does not make the transfer of the employes mandatory.

Since the commission takes on not only all the duties of the two agencies but a number of added functions the reorganization, if anything, should lead to an expansion of personnel.

Among the new functions of the commission—functions which probably will require the hiring of a number of experts and some clerks—are:

1—The prescribing of wage scales and manning for all vessels receiving aid from Uncle Sam. Enforcement of this provision would require public hearings which, apparently, would create openings for stenographers, lawyers and labor relations experts.

2. The adjustment of ocean mail contracts, now the job of the postoffice department. Personnel for this duty may be recruited in part from the Postoffice Department.

3. Award of new subsidy contracts based on the differential in costs between American and competing European ships. The old basis for determining subsidies was on speed and tonnage. The new method being more difficult to determine, should require a larger staff.

4. Research studies as the investigation of the laying out of new trade routes on which adjusted mail contracts are to be based. Studies of this sort were made under the old set-up but the new law contemplates an expanded research program.

5. Similarly with applications for construction. Although this duty was performed by the two old agencies the commission is given an even broader scope. However, the size of the staff will depend on the extent of ship-building done by private concerns.

All danger that the "progressive" lodges remaining in the A. F. G. E. will quit the Federation seems passed—at least until after the A. F. of L. and A. F. G. E. make their promised investigation of the temporary certificate situation and the C. I. O. dispute is fought out at the A. F. of L.'s November convention.

Play Tourney.

Two Federal agencies are taking part in the one-act play tournament to be given next month under the sponsorship of the Community Center Department of the Board of Education.

The Department of Agriculture dramatic guild will present "Gilt-Edged" a comedy, while the Federal Bureau of Investigation drama group are to stage John Drinkwater's "X Equals Zero," a play whose characters are Trojan soldiers and whose moral is the futility of war.

Two casts have been selected for the time being for the Agriculture production which is to be presented October 15. Included are Joseph Lima, William Waldman, Dorothy Braun, Althea Holman, Viola Randolph, Alberta Pusey, J. H. Cavanaugh, James Dille, Fred Fairchild and Robert Campbell. Kenneth Gapen is doing the directing.

The cast for the F. B. I. play consists of Francis Crane, Will Kline, jr., Leonard Lavenson and Lawrence Beckerman, who is also the director. They play will be put on October 20.

Pearl Shrader, of the stenographic section of the Interstate Commerce Commission, is writing a skit to be presented as part of the commission's second "talent night" show. H. M. Brown who is in charge of the production gives the probable date as "towards the end of October."

Social Security Union.

Despite its expulsion from the A. F. G. E. the Social Security Board Union continues to increase in membership, paying members now numbering more than 250.

This increase in membership is significant because of the five "progressive" lodges whose temporary certificates were revoked by the national convention at Detroit, it is unquestionably the Social Security Union which is in the best position to demand re-affiliation—should it so choose.

The A. F. G. E. executive council could remain relatively indifferent to the other lodges expelled, the SEC, Farm Credit, Railroad Retirement Board and Public Assistance Division units as none of them have Social Security's potentialities for growth. However, sooner or later the council will have to face the problem of establishing an A. F. G. E. unit at Social Security.

What is likely to make the A. F. G. E.'s position in respect to the Social Security Union embarassing is that regardless of the merits of the controversy between the union and the executive council, the union is almost certain to increase its membership—simply because so many newcomers are being taken on. Then again, being employed in a young agency the board workers do not exactly need the A. F. G. E. at present—most of the items in the federation's legislative program being geared to the demands of the older-line agencies.

Ticket Fixing In City Traffic Cases Barred

Laxity in Reporting D.C. Violations Assailed by Court Aid.

'Not Even President Can Get Charge Quashed,' Declares Hooe.

Washington's traffic-ticket problem was brought to light on two fronts yesterday as the Board of Trade traffic committee, meeting for the first time this season, scored reported laxity in the police system of tagging illegally parked autos and Rice Hooe, newly appointed Assistant Corporation Counsel at Police Court, barred so-called "fixing" practices from his office.

Failure of individual policemen to follow through a parking violation notice prompted the traffic committee to urge more stringent regulations governing records at at the police traffic division.

The present system of issuing parking tickets in triplicate form was described as a "useless gesture" by Col. Lawrence Crawford, chairman of the Board of Trade committee. Although records of each notice distributed for a violation are kept at Police Headquarters, he pointed out, it is within the power of a policeman to cancel charges by failing to turn in his book of duplicate ticket forms.

Checking Difficult.

Investigation revealed, Col. Crawford said, that individual policemen have retained possession of duplicate forms over a period of years, making it a difficult task to check records and ascertain the amount of collateral posted on the original "tickets."

Under the present system, violation notices are printed in triplicate forms—one goes to the offender, another to headquarters records and the third is kept by the officer. Unless traffic policemen follow through by checking each ticket for collateral and then turn in their duplicate slips, the triplicate system is useless, Col. Crawford told the committee.

"Charges will not be quashed even for the President of the United States unless facts in the case justify such action—I mean by this, there would have to be mitigating circumstances," Hooe said.

Policy Started.

Enacting his policy even before it was announced, it was learned Hooe recently refused requests from two Police Court judges to quash papers in traffic cases. In each case, it was reported, he returned the papers "with regrets."

The Board of Trade traffic committee also opposed any additional taxes against District motorists and urged that present gasoline taxes be used only for highway maintenance necessities of the Police Department.

Each member of the committee was admonished by Col. Crawford to personally observe all traffic regulations. He stressed the dangers of jay-walking and appealed to the membership to "set an example in law observance to Washingtonians."

By unanimous vote, the committee approved Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer's budget request for $193,290 for operation of his department.

Yesterday's meeting was attended by Van Duzer, Inspector B. A. Lamb, traffic supervisor of the Police Department; Capt. Milton D. Smith, commander of the traffic division, and Sergt. John Agnew, traffic records chief.

Pressman Seriously Hurt as Car Is Sideswiped Near T. B., Md.

Traffic injuries were numerous in and around the District yesterday.

Halloway Furrow, 57, of 5416 North Capitol street, a pressman for The Washington Post, suffered possible internal injuries and cuts and bruises when his automobile was sideswiped by another car at Mattawoman Swamp, near T. B., Md.

He was taken to Casualty Hospital. The occupants of the other car were George Slicer, 56, of 2918 Twelfth street northwest, his wife, and Capt. Edward Hayden, of Ables, Md. All were cut and bruised and treated by a private physician.

A Government-owned trash truck, driven by Harry Freeman, 40, colored, of the 800 block of Barry place northwest, struck Harvey Thomas, 20, of 639 Elliott street, as he stood near a coal pile in an alley in the 100 block of Spring road. Thomas was taken to Providence Hospital, suffering from abdominal injuries.

Four persons were injured, one seriously, yesterday, when a Capital Transit Co. bus collided with a truck at Twentieth street and New Hampshire avenue northwest.

Two passengers on the bus, Mrs. Anna J. Ocheltree, 69, of 2221 Forty-ninth street northwest, and Mrs. Margaret Danhakle, 75, of 211 T street northeast, suffered from shock and bruises.

Lucille Willis, colored, 29, of 408 Florida avenue northwest, a passenger in the truck driven by John Puller, colored, 44, of 817 R street northwest, was bruised on her body. Puller received a concussion of the brain and a possible fractured skull. All were treated at Emergency Hospital.

Thomas G. Baisey, 29, of Colmar Manor, Md., bus driver, told police he was driving south on Twentieth street and the truck was going east on New Hampshire avenue. Neither driver was held by police.

Charles Miller, 39, of 410 Sixth street northwest, suffered a fractured right leg yesterday when he was struck by a car in front of his home. Leonard Hawks, 63, of 5430 Fourth street northwest, driver of the car, was charged with reckless driving at the Traffic Division.

According to Hawks, he was driving north on Sixth street when another automobile passed him on the right forcing him into a parked car on the opposite side of the street. Miller stepped from behind the car and was struck. He was treated at Emergency Hospital.

Merle Manus, 30, of 520 D street northeast, was treated at Emergency Hospital for a broken right wrist when the taxi in which he was riding struck a car at Massachusetts avenue and Fourth street.

$15,000,000 Bridge Project At Arlington Nearly Finished

"If the plans for this development . . . are finally carried out, President Washington's and Maj. L'Enfant's most original dream for the Federal Capital will be realized on a scale they could not have imagined, and as the traveler approaches Washington over the brow of Arlington Heights in Fort Myer there will burst on his view a panorama that has few equals in the world; once seen it will never be forgotten, and will live in the memory of the beholder forever as a perpetual inspiration to loyalty, patriotism and devotion to country."

That was the rhapsody of Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d over the Arlington Memorial Bridge project. The time was 1928 and he was superintendent of the Office of Public Buildings and Public Parks.

Eight years later finds the $15,000,000 project nearing completion. The Memorial entrance to Arlington National Cemetery is virtually finished, except for certain ornamentation, and a year's work probably will suffice to make harmonizing improvements on Columbia Island, the final step in one of the most auspicious undertakings ever undertaken here.

Long since completed were the other three units in the comprehensive beautification project—the bridge itself (opened in May, 1932), the bridge plaza and watergate and the widening of Constitution avenue.

Leo Friedlander and James E. Fraser, sculptors, are working on the four heroic-sized groups which will be placed at the Lincoln Memorial and Rock Creek Parkway approaches to Arlington Bridge.

Lights are being installed in the hemicycle at the cemetery's monumental entrance and lighting standards soon will be set out along Memorial avenue, extending from Boundary Channel Bridge to the hemicycle. A fountain is to be erected in the hemicycle, but its design has not yet been approved.

Planting of oaks and hollies along Memorial avenue, Capital gateway to Mount Vernon, as well as Arlington National Cemetery, was completed some time ago, but certain replacements will be necessary this fall.

Slowest to progress of all five subdivisions of the Arlington bridge project is the development of Columbia Island, northern terminus of the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway. Grading, road and bridge building, landscaping and other improvements remain to be made.

The delay has been due to several factors, principally appropriation difficulties and the fact that Columbia Island, which consists of "made land," must be given time to settle before excavations are begun.

Lodges to Take Reinstatement Plea to Green

Delegation Will Deny That Five A. F. G. E. Units Are Communistic.

The five temporary lodges which were expelled at the Detroit convention of the American Federation of Government Employes decided last night to send a joint delegation to William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and ask reinstatement.

The delegation will deny that the five lodges are communistic or that their leaders are "embarrassing" to A. F. G. E., as was charged at the time of their expulsion.

The lodges are Social Security, Farm Credit, Security and Exchange, Railroad Retirement and Public Assistance. The five last night planned to prepare a minority report, giving their version of the expulsion controversy. This, together with reprints of two recent editorials in The Post, will be sent to all A. F. G. E. lodges in the country.

It had been reported that WPA and Resettlement, two liberal lodges, would leave the A. F. G. E. Last night, however, they decided to remain, but to fight for the reinstatement of the ousted five.

Mrs. Woods Is Granted Divorce in California

Los Angeles, Sept. 24 (AP).—Blonde Mrs. Anita Woods, dancer, was granted a divorce today from Walter Woods, stock broker, of Washington, D. C., on grounds of desertion.

"As he became more successful in business," she testified, "he neglected me more and more. Finally, when he moved his office to Washington, he told me that he couldn't take me with him because I would interfere with his career."

One-Man Car Fare Slash Is Proposed

Service Inferior, Says Official of Citizens' Association.

P.U.C. Sanction of Such Trolleys Is Called Unfair to Labor.

A suggestion that the street car fare on one-man cars be below that of two-man cars was made yesterday by William McK. Clayton, chairman of the public utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Association, in protesting the one-man car order of the Public Utilities Commission.

Explaining he would call his committee and then report to the federation before deciding on a course, Clayton said:

"It seems to me there is a question of whether the charging of the same fare on one-man cars as on two-man cars does not constitute discrimination under the law.

Service Not the Same.

"Certainly, you don't get the same kind of service. The one-man cars are slower and the motorman doesn't have the time to answer the questions or otherwise assist passengers."

Clayton indicated that if an appeal were taken, one of the bases would be that the hearing was irregular in that only one commissioner—Richmond B. Keech—presided.

William A. Roberts, people's counsel, from his sickbed at Georgetown Hospital said his course would depend upon the attitude of the public.

"The commission apparently has adopted a policy of allowing unlimited extension of one-man cars," he said. "The only consolation is that additional one-man cars must be of the high-speed, streamlined type."

Streamlined in Future.

The commission's order permits the purchase of 20 Providence used cars, but provides that all future purchases of one-man cars must be of the type equivalent or superior to the President's conference or streamlined cars.

Sidney Katz, chairman of the civic affairs committee of WPA Lodge 139, American Federation of Government Employes, issued a statement charging that the commission's action was contrary to the wishes of organized labor and citizens of Washington.

"One-man street car operation involves not a technological advance," he said, "but the good, old-fashioned, infamous stretch-out in which one-man car operators do two men's work for only a 10 per cent increase in one man's wages."

Citizens Ask Appeal.

The Conduit Road Citizens Association, holding its first meeting of the season at the new Palisades Field House last night, went on record as favoring an appeal by William A. Roberts, people's counsel, of the P. U. C. decision.

Other business included outlining a program for the coming year and the election of C. Marshall Finnan, National Capital Parks superintendent, as a life member.

Committee Meets Today.

The executive committee of the Greater National Capitol committee will meet at luncheon in the Raleigh Hotel today. Lloyd B. Wilson, president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., will preside.

Girl Still Pines For Pup as Law Fails to Help

MISS JANE IRVING.

Jane Irving, 19-year-old brunette, last night was still without Loki, her puppy, after attempts to get the law in motion to recover him had failed.

The dog is in the possession of a man who says he found the pup wandering on Massachusetts avenue September 9.

Jane asked David Hart, assistant corporation counsel, to issue a warrant for the arrest of the man, but Hart advised her such an action might get her into trouble. He suggested she turn to the Humane Society and get that agency to remove the pup from the man's possession on the ground that it needed medical care, which it was not receiving.

Robert Poplar, of the Humane Society, called on the man, who refused to let him see the dog "until some time later when I'm not so busy." Poplar went to Hart's office asking for a warrant, which Hart also refused.

Jane, who lives at 2126 Connecticut avenue, was on the point of tears by this time. She said:

"I wan't to get my dog. I don't care how I get him. That man is so mean. I saw Loki and he was so sweet and so dirty. I've never seen a dirtier dog in my life, and he hasn't any pep or anything. And that man cut his whiskers off, too."

Loki is a 3-month-old wire-haired terrier she bought a month ago. He is named for the Norse god of mischief, Jane explained.

The crux of the disagreement between Miss Irving and the man is $10, which he has demanded for boarding the pup for two weeks.

"It's the principle of the thing that keeps me from paying it," Jane declared to Hart.

Commission Votes Down Airport Plan

Solomon Attacks Stand as Hindering D. C.'s Advancement.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission last night was charged with "preventing Washington from having a better municipal airport" after it vetoed a proposal to fill in a portion of Boundary Channel Bay to permit the extension of Washington Airport runways.

Samuel J. Solomon, manager of the South Washington aerial terminus, deprecated the planners' reasons for rejecting his suggestion and said the setback will retard the Capial's progress as an air center.

About a month ago Solomon broached the proposal informally to John Nolen, jr., the commission's planning director. Yesterday, at the group's first meeting since July, the plan was voted down on the grounds its execution would menace motor traffic on the Mount Vernon Memorial highway and eliminate a recreational area.

Danger to Autoists.

The commission felt that runways built so close to the memorial boulevard would endanger autoists and, further, that filling in the bay would injure the region's recreational character. At present several houseboats are anchored in the lagoon, which also is used for pleasure boating.

Informed of the planners' adverse action, Solomon pointed out that no more than 1 per cent of the take-offs from the proposed runways would be in the direction of the Mount Vernon highway, thereby making the traffic hazard negligible.

"Besides," he said, "airplanes taking off from Gravelly Point would have to pass over the highway."

The park and planning body has indorsed consistently the selection of Gravelly Point, about half a mile downstream, as a municipal airport site, rather than the field now in operation and managed by Solomon.

Would Not Interfere.

Answering the other reason advanced by the commission, through Secretary Thomas S. Settle, for turning down the suggestion, Solomon said the fill-in would not interfere with existing boating facilities. Only useless swampland would be needed for the project, he declared.

Facing other items at the opening of its two-day meeting, the planning body approved War Department plans for an Anacostia flood levee to protect Bolling Field and Naval Air Station and voted to jay before the Arlington County (Va.) board a citizen's request for preservation of the original boundary stones of the District of Columbia.

Today the commission is expected to vote against construction of a permanent flood levee in West Potomac Park on the line of Independence avenue, following an inspection tour over the proposed location yesterday afternoon.

Also inspected yesterday were Lafayette and Franklin parks, upon which radical improvements have been made since the commission's last meeting.

Giants Clinch Flag, Climax Climb From 5th by Beating Bees

Schumacher Takes Duel By 2 to 1

Victors Forego Whoops After Writing Finish to 'Alger' Story.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Sept. 24.—The New York Giants climaxed their "Horatio Alger" success story today by clinching the National League pennant.

Topping off one of the most astonishing drives in diamond history, they nosed out the Boston Bees, 2 to 1, in a ten-inning pitching thriller in the first game of a double-header to sew up the flag.

Their victory made the first "subway series" since 1923 a certainty, with the New York Yankees as the American League representatives. The classic gets under way next Wednesday in the Giants' Polo Grounds.

A restrained group of athletes got together in the clubhouse between the first and second games today to exchange congratulations, but their was little whooping it up, except on the part of the shortstop sparkplug, Dick Bartell.

Is Ninety-first Victory.

Today's win was the Giants' ninety-first of the season, leaving them with three games to play after the twin bill with the Bees. The best the second-place St. Louis Cardinals can accomplish between now and the end of their schedule would still fall short of catching up.

"Prince Hal" Schumacher, the question mark of the Giants' pitching staff, accomplished today's win almost single handed, but a costly error by Bill Urbanski was a big help. Urbanski juggled Travis Jackson's grounder in the tenth and then threw wide past first, enabling the veteran third sacker to reach second. Schumacher brought him all the way home immediately with a single.

In the second game, Terry replaced most of his regulars with second string men, and the Bees won, 4 to 0, behind Bill Weir's six-hit pitching.

Hubbell Leads Way.

The first-game victory was the Giants' fifty-first against 18 losses in the spectacular drive that carried them from second division to the championship between July 15 and today.

Collapsing after fighting for the lead early in the season, Bill Terry's troupe sank out of first division and seemed through for the season.

Then Carl Hubbell, the year's greatest pitcher, started hitting his stride. Rookie Jim Ripple became a heavy-hitting outfield asset. Terry's bad knee recovered sufficiently for him to get into action at first base through most of the stretch games. The entire outfield, headed by Mel Ott, developed a batting punch as dangerous as any other club in the big leagues.

With Hubbell leading the way, winning 16 straight pitching victories, the Giants shot past one contender after another, reached first place at the height of a 15-game winning streak on August 25, and stayed out in front from there to the tape.

The pennant triumph is the sec-

Money Finish Sure for Nats

Four possibilities, with a tie for fourth place as the worst of these, face the Nats as they enter today upon the last three games of the American League campaign.

They can win second place, they can clinch third place, they can take fourth place, or they can tie with the Cleveland Indians for fourth.

Their chance to finish second, however, is a long shot. Only if they win all of their three remaining games and the Detroit Tigers lose both of their two remaining contests can Washington finish in the runner-up position.

Detroit will be playing both its games against Cleveland, while the Nats will be taking on the Yankees twice after today's game with the Red Sox.

Washington's chances of finishing third are distinctly brighter. A half game ahead of the fourth-place White Sox, the Nats can clinch third place simply by matching the success of the Sox in the three remaining games faced by each club.

DeShong to Pitch.

Only a distinct reversal of form can send the Nats down to a fourth-place tie with Cleveland. That state of affairs can be brought about only if the Nats lose all of their three remaining games while the Indians win four straight—two from the Browns and two from the Tigers.

Jimmy DeShong, his No. 1 pitcher, will be entrusted by Manager Bucky Harris, with the task of winning today's game with the Red Sox, which has been designated as a Ladies Day contest owing to the postponement of yesterday's game on account of rain.

DeShong will be duelling Wes Ferrell, ace right-hander of the Boston Club.

Following the exit of the Sox from Griffith Stadium after today's game, the Nats encounter the Yankees in single games Saturday and Sunday.

Cards Take Two From Cincinnati

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Sept. 24.—Behind the pitching of Dizzy Dean, the Cardinals won the second game of a double-header from the Cincinnati Reds today when darkness ended the game in the sixth inning with the score 2 to 0. The Cards had won the opener, 5 to 4, in 12 innings. It was Dean's twenty-fourth victory.

Joe Medwick, of the Cards, set a new National League record when he hit his sixty-third double of the season in the third inning of the first game. The old mark of 62 was set by Paul Waner, of Pittsburgh, in 1932. Earl Webb, of Boston, hit 67 two-baggers in 1931 for the American League record.

Mrs. Walper Wins to Enter Semifinals in Post Trophy Golf

By Dave Herman.

Shooting the best golf thus far displayed in the tournament, Mrs. Leo Walper, Kenwood Golf and Country Club titleholder, scored a 79 yesterday at her home course to defeat Mrs. Roland Mackenzie, of Congressional, 1934 winner, 4 and 3, to enter the semifinals of The Washington Post match play handicap championship.

Long off the tee, and deadly with her putts, Mrs. Walper was one stroke shy of tying her own record for the Kenwood course with her 39-40.

The other quarter final survivors are Gloria Rodgers, Kenwood's new sensation; Mrs. C. P. Medley, of Manor, and Mrs. A. W. Tucker, of Beaver Dam.

Kenwood is bound to have one of its challengers in the final round, for Mrs. Walper and Miss Rodgers are to clash this morning at 9:20 in the upper bracket.

In the other semifinals match Mrs. Medley will oppose Mrs. Tucker.

Miss Rodgers, who upset the medalist, Virginia Pope, Wednesday, eliminated Mrs. J. J. McCarthy, of Congressional, 5 and 4. An 8-handicap golfer, Miss Rodgers gave away 3 strokes. The Kenwood golfer turned in a 41 to stand 3 up, and ended the match with a beautiful par 4 on the fourteenth hole.

Los Angeles, Sept. 24.—The men's singles of the Pacific Southwest Tennis tournament narrowed down to four survivors today as Donald Budge, America's No. 1 singles star, and Jack Tidball, Los Angeles, went into the semifinals.

The national mixed doubles champions, Alice Marble, Los Angeles, and Gene Mako, Glendale, were unexpectedly eliminated in the semifinals late today, Yyon Petra, giant young Frenchman, and Miss Dorothy Workman, Pasadena, defeating them, 6—1, 6—3.

Budge and Tidball will meet tomorrow for the right to go into the finals Sunday, and Fred Perry, of England, and Francis X. Shields, Hollywood, the other semifinalists, will battle it out Saturday.

President Cup Regatta Set For Today

Sailing Races Start at 9 A. M.; Speedboat Events Tomorrow.

Washington's biggest week-end on the water starts today as the President's Cup Regatta gets under way on the Potomac.

The fun begins at 9 a. m. with sailing races and will continue far into the night at the open house and reception at the Corinthian Yacht Club.

Tomorrow start the speedboat race about which the regatta has been woven. The races are scheduled to begin at 1 p. m. and at 3 o'clock will be held the first 15-mile lap of the President's Cup Race.

Ten boats are entered in the cup classic. Six of them already have been docked at the Navy Yard. The other four are almost certain starters, making for one of the largest Gold Cup fields in history.

Herbert Mendelsohn's Notre Dame, defending champion, has been berthed at the yard and is being tuned up to defend the President's Cup. El Lagarto, perennial Gold Cup titleholder, arrived at the yard last night, ready to be tuned up today in an effort to win the race in which it did not compete last year.

Impshi Is Entered.

Impshi, Horace Dodge's Gold Cup champion, is in as is Delphine, VIII, another Dodge entry. The Hotsy Totsy, registered and owned by Vincent Bendix and Vic Kliesrath, is a new boat with 722 cubic inch displacement and an eight-cylinder, super-charged V-type motor, of which much is expected.

Jack Rutherford's Ma-Ja II has been berthed at the Navy Yard and is receiving its final grooming.

Other Gold Cup craft which have entered, but have not yet arrived are the Jay Dee, owned by Jack Dunn; Sam Dunsford's Scotty Too; an entry from Canada, Miss Canada, which flies the colors of Harold Wilson, and Miss Cincinnati, jr., registered under the name of J. C. Fischer.

Great interest also attaches to the American Speedboat Championship race to be held at 3:40 p. m. Sunday. Some remarkable speeds have been developed by the Betty V, a weird-looking craft which thinks nothing of covering the water at 65 or 70 miles an hour.

The Hotsy Totsy also will com-

Brundage, on Return, Rehashes Holm Case

By Paul Mickelson.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Sept. 24.—Uncomfortably seated by a deck table littered with bottles of scotch, soda and cracked ice, Avery Brundage returned from Europe today and vigorously defended the American Olympic committee's action in the celebrated "Jarrett case."

The chief of the American expeditionary forces said Mrs. Eleanor Holm Jarrett, the champagne-loving mermaid who was expelled from the team on charges of "misconduct," got "what was coming to her."

"If you fellows," he told sleepy-eyed reporters who arose early to meet the Italian liner Vulcania, "had been on that committee, you would have done the same thing. Except to say it was more than just a drink of champagne I'm not going into details. We warned her officially and unofficially. We had her friends warn her of the consequences. We were as tactful as we could be, but tact was useless. Stern action had to be taken. We took it."

"Why," he went on as he politely rejected a highball that a mischievous bystander offered him, "what else could be done? She was rooming with two young girl swimmers, 15 and 16 years old. Suppose you had a young daughter on the swimming team?"

"Well, you might have been a little more tactful," persisted one reporter.

"Tactful?" he shot back. "You may not know it, but 20 of the finest amateur sportsmen of this country were on the committee that expelled her. All of them are tactful and fine men. They were at wits' end. They voted unanimously for expulsion. Incidentally, I didn't vote because I was committee chairman, but if there had been a tie, I'd have voted for expulsion. I'm not evading criticism because I know we did the right thing."

Meanwhile in Philadelphia, where she completed a vaudeville engagement, Mrs. Jarrett said she'd like "to bump into" Brundage.

"I'd give him a good swift kick, I would," she laughed. "I'd sock the guy and run like the devil."

The Olympic chief had nothing but praise for Jesse Owens, Ohio State's Negro flier who won four Olympic gold medals and then was suspended by the A. A. U. for quitting the post-Olympic barnstorming tour.

Lash's 2-Mile Mark Shattered by Finn

Stockholm, Sept. 24 (AP).—Gunnar Hoeckert, Finland's 5,000-meter Olympic champion, today bettered Don Lash's world record for 2 miles when he stepped the distance in 8 minutes 57 4-10 seconds.

Lash, former University of Indiana star, established the mark of 8:58.3 at the Princeton invitation meet in June.

CUBS VS. GIANTS AT THE POLO GROUNDS

67% PREFER MILD VINTAGE TOBACCO

NEW YORK, N. Y., Sept. 11—It's a sure bet when you back the taste of Vintage tobacco. Its mild, mellow flavor wins every time. At the Polo Grounds, 271 fans, watching the tense pennant drive, made a taste test. By an overwhelming majority, they preferred the flavor of Vintage tobacco.

We picked smokers at random from the crowd . . . gave each two unidentified cigars—a Vintage White Owl and another, representing the leading nationally advertised brands.

No names or familiar bands on the cigars . . . not a thing to prejudice the smokers . . . Taste alone counted. Each man smoked both cigars, then indicated the one he liked best. 67% preferred the Vintage White Owl's mildness.

Wherever you are, you can get the same mild, uniform cigar that won these taste tests. It costs but 5¢ at your nearest cigar store.

THE BIG PENNANT DRIVE . . . The New York Giants vs. the Chicago Cubs. Amid the roars of thousands of fans, the Giants battle to hold their league lead . . . the Cubs to tear it away from them. Top-notch baseball by two great teams. And up in the stands the fans gave Vintage tobacco another taste victory.

● No one field can always produce good tobacco. In a Vintage year, the leaf is richer, more full-bodied. In our really mild White Owl Cigar, we use only tobacco of Vintage quality. That means special buying.

● White Owl's Crop Inspection System, the only known organization of its kind, keeps a check on growing conditions in the finest filler-tobacco districts in America. We know where Vintage tobacco is maturing and buy the best of it for White Owl.

● Aging by nature! . . . an average of three years. No economical short cuts . . . no secret processes. Vintage tobacco tastes good in its natural state—doesn't need artificial treatment.

Colonials to Test New Team Tonight in Emory-Henry Opener

Team Is Held Better Than Last Year's

Despite Loss of Leemans Eleven to Have More Fight, Balance.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Act I, Scene I, of the District's 1936 football season will be presented tonight at Griffith's open-air theater, where an almost entirely new cast of players from George Washington University will enact the old stock favorite, "The Opening Game," with the aid of a doughty little band from Emory-Henry. The opening curtain is scheduled for 8 o'clock.

Notably absent will be the popular and capable trouper, Tuffy Leemans, leading man with the local company in the past three years, who is devoting his talents to the more attractive and more lucrative fields of professionalism this season. His well known "No. 27" will be discarded, temporarily at least, until a successor worthy of carrying those hallowed numerals appears.

Well-Balanced Team.

But the team that takes George Washington's part tonight is expected to be better balanced, more aggressive and able to portray its role more enthusiastically than last year's troupe. The company includes four green and untried sophomores participating in their first varsity show, but their presence on the field is expected to add to the performance rather than detract from its merits. Four seniors and three juniors have been cast in starting roles by Director Jim Pixlee.

Anxious to have his group come off with the night's honors, Pixlee, nevertheless, is afraid the visiting group, a talented lot known in the profession as the Wasps, may outdo the District contingent and emerge the winner on points. It will be the second time the groups have collaborated in the presentation of an opening feature, and it was all George Washington could do to gain a two-touchdown margin last year—and, remember, it had Maestro Leemans in the line-up doing his stuff in that game.

By Two Touchdowns.

Getting away from the drama and into football, George Washington should take the visitors into camp by a couple of touchdowns at least. The Colonials aren't a polished outfit at this writing, and probably will not be for a couple of weeks. But the spirit, determination and, in some instances, material, is there and these ingredients can be molded into a winning combination.

Tonight look for Ray Hanken at right end and watch him carefully, for Pixlee says he's going to be the best end in the East this season and the brightest star in George Washington's crown. If Vic Sampson gets into action take a good look at him, too, for you're going to hear a lot from this boy. Watch Reeves, Jenkins and Mahan in the backfield, Reeves particularly, for it may be from this group that Leemans' successor will come. The new fullback is Jay Turner, good and rugged but woefully lacking polish.

Kavalier Is Out.

Capt. Frank Kavalier, center, will not be used tonight to guard against aggravating a leg injury. His place in the line-up will be taken by "Salty" Salturelli.

Emory will be George Washington's match in size, it appears, for the Wasps are larger than last season, while the Colonials are somewhat smaller. Mark Kegley, 180-pound triple-threat star, will not be in the starting line-up but will be kept on the bench until the fray is well under way.

The Police Boys Club 70-piece band will supply music for the occasion and it is probable that there will be the usual fireworks between halves. A game between the Northeast Boys Club and No. 4 Police Boys Club in the Colonial Junior League, will inaugurate the program beginning at 7 o'clock.

The line-ups:

G. W. U.	Position.	Emory-Henry.
Holt (31)	L.E.	Levicki (45)
Prather (52)	L.T.	Love (46)

Terps Taper Off For St. John's Tilt

Light, very light exercises are on the program at College Park this afternoon where the University of Maryland gridmen will taper off in preparation for tomorrow's inaugural with St. John's of Annapolis. The kick-off tomorrow is scheduled for 3 o'clock.

Under the wing of a new coach, "Dutch" Lentz, who enjoyed tremendous success at Calvert Hall in Baltimore, St. John's will send a small but fast squad against the Terrapins, but on paper they do not figure to do much better than last year when they dropped a 39-6 decision to Maryland in the opener.

One Washington boy will be in the Navy City team's line-up, performing at end. He is Len De Lisio, former Central High School star, who is an important cog in the team's passing attack.

'Oughta Be a Treaty,' Thinks Young as China Lures Gridman

This business of proselyting football players is beginning to attain international proportions, as Walter Young, American University coach, has discovered to his undisguised chagrin.

It's bad enough to have larger neighboring schools enticing promising young players away from the squad, as they have been doing year after year, but when a Chinese University pulls the quaint trick of getting one of your best men it is high time something be done about it. Yes, it is true that China, where a football is more likely to be regarded as a table delicacy than sporting implement, has lured "Bugs" Hanawalt, a guard, to its troubled shores.

"Bugs," who was good enough to make the all-Conference eleven last season, has accepted a teaching position at Lingnan University in Canton, where one of his principal duties will be to educate the boys in the deft art of "kickee ballee all over place and run like hellee."

This was the crowning blow to Young, already groggy from blows administered by Kid Cupid, Dan Depression and Mr. Faculty Flunk. Two of the boys got married and another transferred to Penn State. Briefly, only 28 men reported for the initial drill, with five of Young's most important men missing.

Walter Dick, leading District scorer and one of the highest in the East, and Chick Yackel, all-Conference tackle, joined the ranks of benedicts, Hanawalt went to China and Benny Benscoter enrolled in the forestry school at Penn State, all good men and important ones in Young's plans. But he refuses to be discouraged; after all he still has a few good boys to build around.

Harold Toner, a triple-threat fullback; "Peanuts" Howard and Johnny Struble, pony halfbacks with pack-mule kicks; "Barty" Bartlett, Ralph Winslow and Wade Hansborough, are the outstanding backs back in school. Dudley Rogers, a tall 190-pounder, from Bay Shore, Long Island, and Bus Treharne, 160-pound speedster from Hicksville, Long Island, are the best looking recruits.

In the line Young has Jack Rhodes, Sammy Miaze, Hinkey Schneider and Joe Carlo, captain last year, back in the fold, with a few ambitious sophomores to augment the squad. Kinsley Shoop, a souvenir end, and Bill Fox, reserve for two years, are making strong bids for one of the tackle births.

Newcomers who look good are Pete Sitnik, George Brown and "Freckles" Cooke, and there is a strong possibility that one of them may be in the line-up when American opens its season against Washington College a week from tomorrow.

10 Regulars Report At Maryland Park

Due to an addition to the school, Maryland Park High soccerites were forced to wait nearly one week more than other county schools before starting daily workouts. The first call, though, brought 24 candidates out with 10 lettermen in the lot.

Coach William Burslem stated yesterday that with only one position to fill he expects the team to step high, wide and fancy in the coming interscholastic campaign.

The regulars returning are Paul Ford, all-county fullback; Stanley Ball, fullback; Woodbury Beall, right halfback; Sully Haskins, right outside; John Clements, right inside; Robert Melvin, center halfback; Lloyd Suit, center forward; Louis Tourney, left halfback; Ralph Houchens, left inside, and Maurice McDonald, goalie.

Boys working to gain a regular berth: Howard Roberts, Henry Dixon, Henry Fowler, Homer Link, and Bowie Dixon, linesmen; Robert Main, Earl Morrow, Thomas Unsworth, William Hazell, George Augustine and Ralph Palmer, backfield; Edward Walker, Harry Teaper and Wilmer Frye, either line or backfield.

Appling Leading Hitters in Majors

By the Associated Press.

Paul Waner, of the Pirates, and Babe Phelps, of the Dodgers, remained in a virtual tie yesterday for the National League batting lead. Each got one hit in four times at bat, but Waner forged ahead by the slim margin of .3726 to .3722. The only American League leader to see action was Bill Dickey, of the Yankees, in third place. He went hitless in one chance as a pinch hitter and dropped to .358.

Yankees Slice Series Melon, Predict Triumph in 5 Games

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 24.—The New York Yankees, American League pennant winners, sliced up their share of the world series melon today, closed out the season on the home lot and left for Philadelphia predicting a world series victory in five games.

The Yankees figure Carl Hubbell may beat them once, but not a man, from Manager Joe McCarthy down to the rawest recruit, concedes that even such a master craftsman as the Oklahoma Pecan Grower, with 16 straight wins, can take their measure twice in a seven-game series.

Cocky and confident, the American Leaguers see almost a clean sweep in the fall classic despite the fact that Lou Gehrig and Signor Joe DiMaggio, two of the Big Berthas in the most powerful Yankee offensive in years, are wrestling with batting slumps.

Gehrig attributes his letdown to a cold in the shoulder which interferes with his swing.

Chicago, Sept. 24.—Pittsburgh shoved Chicago deeper into third place today by beating the Cubs, 4 to 0, in the final game of the National League season at Wrigley Field.

Cy Blanton held the Chicagoans to three hits as the Bucs made nine off Larry French in eight innings and one off Tex Carleton, who worked the last frame. A ladies' day crowd of 13,000 saw the game. Vaughan, Todd and Young each had two hits to pace the Pirate attack.

Welsh, 2 Others Win in Fall Net Open Play

Hugh Lynch, Hy Ritzenberg Join Tony Latona in Semifinal Round.

Paced by Barney Welsh, defending champion, the field in the annual Department of Playground open tennis championship narrowed down to the four semifinalists yesterday on the Potomac Park courts.

Joining Tony Latona, No. 4 seeded entrant, in the round of four, Welsh, Hugh Lynch, seeded No. 3, and Hy Ritzenberg, unseeded, proceeded to breeze through their quarter-final tests. Lynch was almost swept away by the breeze, however, and barely managed to hold a 11—9, 3—4 lead over Tom Markey when darkness halted play.

Former captain of Notre Dame's tennis team, Markey battled the former Princeton net captain on even terms in the first set until Lynch finally broke Markey's delivery and won the twentieth game on his own. In the second set, Markey got off to a lead which Lynch was able to cut down no further than 3—4 and the match will be resumed at 4 p. m. today.

Finals at Edgemoor.

All semifinal and final round matches will be played on the Edgemoor Club courts, Edgemoor, Md. Welsh, incidentally trounced Spencer Howell, former George Washington University player, 6—0, 6—1 while Ritzenberger, conqueror of Gilbert Hunt, pulled his second upset in a row when he defeated Frank Shore, eighth seeded player, 6—2, 6—4.

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 24.—Roman Soldier, Elwood Sachsenmacr's handicap star which chased Omaha to the wire in the 1935 Kentucky Derby, won his first race since last June in today's Penn Athletic Club Handicap, feature program that drew 9,000 regular and occasional customers. The coal-black son of Cohort was being taken in hand as he approached the imaginary wire two and a half lengths in advance of A. Pelleteri's Western Star, Whereaway. Corinto, half of Mrs. E. Denemark's entry, was third, three parts of a length from second money. Finance and Purple Knight were shunted out of the payoff in the vest-pocket field.

Coming off a sprint in which he was fourth, Roman Soldier seemed to have regained the form that won him $45,100 last year and has earned him $11,125 this year. Ridden by Jockey L. Balaski, he was given stout contention for the first three furlongs but soon was established the leader, never to be threatened thereafter.

In the rush to the first turn, Roman Soldier was in tight quarters between Finance and Whereaway and for a moment it appeared that he might be squeezed back. However, Balaski urged him through and emerged in the top position. Whereaway settled down to the futile task of trying to catch the now flying leader. Jockey C. Corbett urged in his best manner but Whereaway was not horse enough. Corinto gained some ground in the final stages to become a mild threat.

Roman Soldier was the favorite throughout the betting and there was a $4.10 mutuel awaiting the faithful. He ran the mile and a sixteenth in 1:46 1-5.

With the exception of a light drizzle early in the program, the sagging skies held their tears and the track remained fast.

Miss Leannah Wins.

The program opened with a wild dash of 11 juveniles over the 6-furlong course. Miss Leannah, owned by Mrs. J. V. Stewart, proved the most speedy under the conditions and finished a length in front of a photographic battle for second money, which went to Mrs. G. Hutchins' White Sweets. Mrs. E. Denemark's Uvalde was assigned third money. Miss Leannah, in front most of the way, paid $6.20 and was clocked in the mediocre time of 1:15 2-5.

The first of the day's grade C handicaps went to Mrs. E. Denemark's Chief Cherokee, well handled by Jockey Jackie Westrope. Scatter Brain was second, a half-length away, with Savernake third and two lengths back. The 6-furlong test was run in 1:12 3-5 over a track that was unaffected by the light drizzle. Chief Cherokee did not break well, but Westrope hustled him along the rail to take command. After a slight tussle with Come By Chance and Wise Sister, the Cherokee gelding was not troubled until the closing 20 yards, when Scatter Brain put on a rushing finish. Chief Cherokee paid $6.70.

Two-year-olds furnished the competition in the third race, another 6-furlong event, and Morning, an American Flag filly owned by Mrs. R. A. Van Clief, took a half-length decision from Live Granite with Uneasy third. The winner, the light of the party, ran the route in 1:13 4-5 and rewarded with a $10.30 mutuel. Morning took command at the flag fall and was never headed. She completed a $63.60 daily double mutuel.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS LEANNAH, $6.20, $4.30, $3.10; WHITE SWEETS, $8.50, $6.20; UVALDE, $5.70.

MISS LEANNAH, saving ground while in close pursuit of the early pace of WHITE SWEETS, took command at the far turn and held away thereafter under vigorous handling. WHITE SWEETS, sent to the front under hustling tactics, was hard ridden throughout. UVALDE came with a rush in the closing eighth and was going fastest at the end. HAPPY HOST came gamely for the final test. EMKAYTEE, shuffled back early, reached contention in the late stretch but tired. SHEBANG stopped badly after running close up for five furlongs.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; handicap; Grade C. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:50½. Off at 2:53½. Winner, Mrs. E. Denemark's ch. g. (4), by Cherokee—Ponsee. Trained by B. S. Michell. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:12 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHIEF CHEROKEE, $6.70, $4.30, $3.30; SCATTER BRAIN, $5.60, $3.20; SAVERNAKE, $3.10.

CHIEF CHEROKEE, sent to the front along the rail under hustling tactics, shook off COME BY CHANCE and WISE SISTER leaving the far turn and barely lasted. SCATTER BRAIN, probably best, was forced to lose ground going to the outside for racing room and came with excellent speed and was wearing down the winner. SAVERNAKE moved up menacingly in the early stretch but hung. MISS CAREFUL saved ground entering the stretch, but could not threaten. COME BY CHANCE and WISE SISTER faded after showing early speed.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Long Meadows. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:25½. Off at 3:29. Winner, Mrs. R. A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MORNING, $10.30, $5.80, $4.20; LIVE GRANITE, $3.60, $2.90; UNEASY, $4.40.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $63.60.

MORNING, off alertly, was hard ridden while setting the pace and had to be put to stout drive at the end to withstand LIVE GRANITE. The latter, forwardly placed from the beginning, rallied when put to a drive in the early stretch and was closing on the winner. UNEASY, last away, raced wide to the final bend and came with a rush in the final eighth. SLIM beat the gate, dropped back and ran evenly thereafter. ANGLO SAXON tired gradually after pressing the pace for three furlongs. TORQUIL had early speed.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; handicap; Grade C. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:01. Off at 4:03. Winner, L. E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MINEY MYERSON, $17.80, $7.90, $4.70; PATRIOTIC, $4.50, $3.40; LOVELY GIRL, $5.40.

MINEY MYERSON, in closest pursuit of the pace of PATRIOTIC, rallied when put to drive and gradually wore down his rival. PATRIOTIC was tipped to the front at once, was steadied along while clear and fought it out willingly. LOVELY GIRL closed with good courage. NIGHT CAP, a trailer at the final bend, came with a rush on the inside. BORN HAPPY, in the thick of contention throughout, could not threaten. SUNNED went evenly. WISE DUKE came with a rush in the stretch.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. The Pennsylvania Athletic Club Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:33. Off at 4:37½. Winner, E. Sachsenmaier's blk. c. (4), by Cohort—Miamba. Trained by P. Reuter. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. †Mrs. E. Denemark entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROMAN SOLDIER, $4.10, $3.20, out; WHEREAWAY, $3.00, out; CORINTO (entry), out.

ROMAN SOLDIER, in close quarters between FINANCE and WHEREAWAY going to the first turn, assumed command swinging for the backstretch, was steadied along and was being taken in hand at the end. WHEREAWAY, forced wide for a quarter, was closest to the pace for the last seven furlongs, but failed to threaten. CORINTO gained some ground approaching the final bend, but could not better position thereafter. FINANCE tired after going forwardly. PURPLE KNIGHT was never a factor.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward (foaled in Maryland). Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:11. Off at 5:13. Winner, L. G. Blume's b. or br. f. (3), by Happy Time—Wanton. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:49 3-5, 1:14 3-5, 1:40 3-5, 1:45 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SIT OUT, $7.00, $4.20, $3.20; GOLDEN VEIN (field), $5.70, $6.90; OUR SHIP (field), $6.90.

SIT OUT, within striking distance of the leaders from the start, rallied when placed to drive and was going away at the end under stout handling. GOLDEN VEIN ran HARD CHASE into defeat, opened a gap in the early stretch, but faltered suddenly inside the sixteenth pole. OUR SHIP, bumped at the break, came with good courage in the final stages. HAPPY EASTER closed resolutely on the inside. HARD CHASE tired from rushing tactics in the early stages. CANIMAR showed a dull effort.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:45. Off at 5:48½. Winner, T. Malone's ch. g. (5), by Dunlin—Inferno Queen. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:49 4-5, 1:15 1-5, 1:41, 1:54.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—INFERNO LAD, $5.50, $3.50, $2.70; MAD PRUMP, $4.30, $3.30; QUEEN ELIZABETH, $4.90.

INFERNO LAD, sent up on the outside to take command at the far turn, had to be put to a severe drive to hold MAD PRUMP safe. The latter entered contention with a rush swinging for the stretch and was going gamely at the end. QUEEN ELIZABETH, a forward factor from the start, challenged entering the straightaway but hung. ROSS passed tired horses in the stretch. MORE PEP tired after setting the early pace.

Philadelphians Sweep 7 of 10 Events in President's Cup Swim

Miss Forbes, With 2 Wins, Sets Pace

Boggs Sets Mark as Two Other D. C. Entries Win at Shoreham.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Paced by a bit of Philadelphia pulchritude in the person of 17-year-old Dorothy Forbes, visiting swimmers swept seven of ten events held last night at the annual swimming meet of the President's Cup Regatta in the Shoreham pool.

The out-of-town boys and girls dominated the meet almost as they pleased for the third straight year, plowing to the wire time and again at speeds equal to if not surpassing the fastest times ever set in the District. Because the records were not available, it could not be determined how many marks were set.

One District record was set, however, when Ernie Boggs, tocky Y. M. C. A. middle distance freestyle specialist, won the men's 100-yard backstroke in 1:09 1-5 to better the old mark held by Bill Marmion of the "Y" by 2-5 of a second.

Miss Hoffman Wins.

Miss Forbes, a high school senior very easy to look at but very hard to best, outclassed the field in both the 100-yard backstroke and the 150-yard medley swim. Her time of 2:06 in the 150-yard medley came close to the world record for that distance, held by Katharine Rawls.

Dorothy's 1:14 2-5 in the 100-yard backstroke was about 4 seconds slower than Eleanor Holm's world mark. It was fast enough, however, to show why she was the alternate to fill in on the Olympic team but Dorothy thinks it is pretty slow and doesn't like to talk about how she missed making the Olympic team.

The only other Washington people than Boggs to win anything was Margaret Hoffman, the former Olympic breast-stroker, who took her specialty with ease and Johnny Broaddus who "retired" about a year ago but was very active last night in winning the high-board diving.

Women's Events.

100-yard back stroke—Won by Dorothy Forbes (Broadwood A. C., Phila.); second, Dorothy Lubin (Broadwood A. C., Phila.); third, June Booth (Shoreham). Time, 1:14 2-5.

100-yard breast stroke—Won by Margaret Hoffman (unattached, Washington); second, Margaret Russell (unattached, Baltimore); third, Betty Lussier (Camp Huntingfield, Md.). Time, 1:24 1-5.

100-yard free style—Won by Dorothy Lubin (Broadwood A. C., Phila.); second, Doris Baugher (unattached, Baltimore); third, Anne Marie Bono (Shoreham Swimming Club). Time, 1:06.

150-yard medley—Won by Dorothy Forbes (Broadwood A. C., Phila.); second, Marianna Trowbridge (unattached, Washington); third, Helen Richardson (Ambassador Swimming Club, Washington). Time, 2:56.

Men's Events.

100-yard free style—Won by Otto Schaffhauser, jr. (Broadwood A. C., Phila.); second, Dave Rowan (Big Brothers Club, Phila.); third, Benjamin Ratken (Broadwood A. C., Phila.). Time, 59 3-5 seconds.

High-board diving—Won by John Broaddus (Shoreham), 83.26 points; second, John Marshall (Metropolitan Police Boys Club), 79.93 points; third, John Hobler (unattached, Baltimore), 49.11 points.

100-yard back stroke—Won by Ernie Boggs (Washington Y. M. C. A.); second, Dan Weiner (Baltimore Y. M. C. A.); third, Robert Sipple (Baltimore K. of C.). Time, 1:09 1-5). (New District record, former record, 1:09 3-5, held by William Marmion, Y. M. C. A.).

100-yard breast stroke—Won by Arthur Hucht (Baltimore K. of C.); second, Morris Goldberg (Ambassador Swimming Club); third, Dave Rowan (Big Brothers Club, Phila.). Time, 1:11 4-5.

300-yard medley relay—Won by Penn A. C., Philadelphia (Dan Taggart, Fred Hoetzel, William Mackey); second, York (Pa.) A. C.; third, Washington Y. M. C. A. Time, 3:14 3-5.

Children's Event.

50-yard free style for girls 13 years and under—Won by Nita Lussier (Camp Huntingfield, Md.); second, Helen Fiatt (Shoreham); third, Mary Adele Sipple (Camp Huntingfield, Md.).

Swimmers Give Plaque To Weeks as He Resigns

One of Washington's hardest working contributors to amateur sport, A. Earle Weeks, concluded four years as chairman of the District A. A. U. swimming committee last night. In appreciation of his services, swimmers of the District, coaches and followers of the sport presented Weeks with a plaque during the President's Cup swimming meet at the Shoreham Pool.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

"Murder at the Plate," which sounds like a cinema mystery but is, in truth, only a four-word description of the New York Yankees, apparently holds no terrors for Mr. Will Terry, manager of the Giants. Mr. Terry has let it be known that, come what may, he will start his fast-balling right-hander, Hal Schumacher, on the mound in the World Series.

POVICH.

And besides, Mr. Terry cannot be very choosy about his World Series pitchers after Carl Hubbell, the screwball artist, and Fred Fitzsimmons, the heaver of the dipsy-dew knuckle ball, have done their World Series stints. The rest of Mr. Terry's pitchers are a distinct gamble, and Schumacher, no worse than the rest, has shown a late flash of form.

Mr. Terry's courage in the matter is obvious. Fast-balling right-handers are supposed to be duck soup for the left-handed slugging crew of the Yankees who incorporate in their nightly prayers a murmured hope that the next afternoon will bring them a nice fast-balling right-hander to bat against.

Mr. Terry's man, Schumacher, as you know is that kind of a pitcher, but Mr. Terry will not be intimidated. That tenth-inning ball game Schumacher pitched to beat the Bees, 2 to 1, yesterday and clinch the pennant for the Giants was an excellent effort and Mr. Terry cannot be blamed for stringing along with a pitcher like that, Yankees or no Yankees.

The only fire-balling right-hander who has had any notable success against the Yankees in recent years is Washington's Buck Newsom, but thereby hangs a tale. Mr. Newsom's success against the Yankees has been due as much to his lack of control as any other item.

Unfortunately, Mr. Terry's man Schumacher lacks Mr. Newsom's lack of control and thus he may have his ears pinned securely back by the Yankees. Because the Yanks were always very wary up there at the plate and very loose, indeed, when Mr. Newsom was pitching on account neither Mr. Newsom nor the Yankees knew exactly where Mr. Newsom was going to pitch the ball and getting plugged on any part of the anatomy, especially on the noggin, by one of Mr. Newsom's offerings, was no fun.

So, against Mr. Newsom the Yanks were taking no toe holds up there at the plate but, as I say, were very wary, indeed, and wondering whether to swing or duck. All of which was very much in Mr. Newsom's favor when he got the ball over the plate and accounted, no doubt, for considerable of his success.

But Mr. Terry's man Schumacher has no such asset as Newsom's wildness. Mr. Schumacher throws a faster ball, perhaps, but he is generally down the middle with it, or thereabouts, and there is nothing the Yankees delight more in than a fast ball down the middle or thereabouts. So, my children, that is why Mr. Terry has his nerve with him.

Mr. Terry has more nerve with him than Bucky Harris had in 1925, if you remember. In the world series of that year, you recall, Bucky Harris was very much intimidated by the Pittsburgh Pirates' reputation for hammering left-handed pitching and folks are still blaming the Nats' loss of that series on Harris' lack of courage in the matter.

At his command for that series, Harris had a pair of very fine left-handed pitchers—Dutch Ruether and Tom Zachary. Ruether, in fact, had the best record of any left-hander in the league, with his 18 victories and 7 defeats. Yet neither Ruether nor Zachary ever flung a ball in those seven games against the Pirates.

Displaying a respect for such right-handed sluggers as Kiki Cuyler and Pie Traynor which bordered on awe, Harris refused to start either Zachary or Ruether against the Pirates. The only appearance Ruether made in the series was as a pinch-hitter for Coveleskie in the second game.

Harris relied upon his right-handers exclusively to his misfortune. Both Coveleskie and Ferguson lost a pair of games to the Pirates and it was Johnson who was beaten in that decisive seventh game.

Gonzaga Meets Central Grid Team Today

After an interval of three years, Central High and Gonzaga High will resume football relations today in one of the most attractive opening games the scholastic season has seen here in years.

Central's interhigh champions will be meeting the strongest Gonzaga eleven the little Jesuit school has produced in many seasons when the teams take the field in Central Stadium at 3:30 p. m. They will also be facing the typical wide-open brand of football characteristic of Coach Orrell Mitchell's teams which have become more or less the Colgate of schoolboy football in the District. Central plastered a 28-to-0 beating on the Purple in their 1933 meeting.

The heavier Central team is due to find the Gonzaga backfield a four-pointed puzzle. All four starting backs, Jim Boyle, Jim Shaw, Harry Heiberger and Jim Ellis, saw plenty of action last year. This quartet, together with Sonny Hartman, comprised probably the fastest and shiftiest ball-carrying corps in local schoolboy ranks. Hartman, an open-field sensation, is also ready for duty today.

Blessed with a galaxy of experienced candidates himself, Coach Hardy Pearce, of Central, is also prepared to toss a powerful team into action. In fact, it promises to be Central's power against Gonzaga's fleetness, lateral passes and hidden ball plays.

Mrs. Walper Wins, Goes to Semifinals road, Mrs. Medley played the next seven holes in only 4 over par to eliminate Mrs. W. Thomas, of Kenwood, 3 and 2.

As her parting shot Mrs. Medley stroked in a 15-footer for a birdie 3 on the "punchbowl" seventeenth hole.

Mrs. Tucker defeated Mrs. Harry Knox, of Congressional, 1 up in the most thrilling of the four matches.

Out in 45, Mrs. Tucker held a 4-up advantage. She started slipping along the stretch, and despite conceded strokes on the twelfth and thirteenth, saw her once big lead melt to 1 up as they teed off on the 168-yard seventeenth.

Mrs. Tucker got a half in 4, and on the eighteenth she played a masterful shot out of a trap by the left of the green for her half to hold to her 1-up margin.

Mrs. Tucker had a 14 handicap, and was given four strokes by Mrs. Knox, taking advantage of three of them.

Dusek Subdues Managoff in Mat Bout

Before a near-capacity crowd of more than 2,000 high-blood pressured customers at Turner's Arena last night, Ernie Dusek subdued Ivan Managoff after 41½ minutes of alleged wrestling that was packed with every trick known to the racket, but wrestling.

The boys had banged, gouged, kicked and bounced each other out of the ring from almost the opening twitter of the referee's whistle. Suddenly Ernie dove head foremost into Managoff's person. Managoff dropped, rose—and Ernie dove again. After three or four more of these performances, Ernie's head collided with Managoff's foot.

Both burpers then were supine. After many seconds of writhing and rolling, Ernie revived enough to drop on Managoff's still recumbent form. Referee Cyclone Burns tolled, "one, two," but Managoff rolled over before he could reach three. Then Burns counted over Dusek as Managoff sagged over his body. Thus it went, with Burns reaching the two count over first one grunter then the other groaner.

Finally Ivan wrapped Ernie in a leg scissors about the body and Ernie flipped back, touching Ivan's shoulders to the mat long enough to allow Burns to count him out.

In a semifinal scheduled for 45 minutes, Hans Kampfer tossed John Katan in 15 minutes and 40 seconds with a bear hug.

Football Selections This Week By Post Staff Sports Writers

Once again there's a tang of fall in the air and you hear the plunk of pigskin being booted in crowded stadia. And once again the members of The Post sports staff climb upon their little limbs and attempt to predict results of week-end grid games. After this week selectors will be rated on season percentages, the best picker being nearest the left. Those strings of zeros down there today merely indicate that no scribe has yet had the chance to commit any errors.

Last 4 Teams Vie In Play-Offs Today

The last four teams in the city championship series of The Post Sandlot Association's week-day leagues battle today on the North and South Ellipse. For three of them a defeat will mean elimination from the series.

Bureau of Investigation, however, which meets Procurement Division on the South Ellipse at 4 p. m., may still lose and remain in the series. The U. S. Government League champions have won three straight games while Procurement has a defeat on its record.

Also defeated have been Miller Furniture, champions of the Industrial League, and Public Works Administration, champions of the Departmental League, who meet on the North Ellipse, also at 4 p. m. The only defeat suffered by both came at the hands of Investigation, Miller by a 7-2 score and PWA by a 2-1 score, Wednesday.

New Tax Law Is Held Factor In Advertising

Undistributed Profits Levy May Have Bearing on Budgets.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Sept. 24.—The new tax law placing a penalty on undistributed profits of corporations is playing a small but increasingly important part in recent and prospective gains in advertising expenditures, according to the Standard Statistics Co. of New York.

It still is too early to measure the ultimate effect of the law on advertising expenditures, but it is known that certain large concerns have increased advertising budgets in order to retain, in the form of good will, that money which they would normally turn into surplus.

Sharply increased expenditures by national and local retail advertisers during recent months have accompanied the continued upward trend of general business activity. Such gains have been sufficient to raise total advertising expenditures for the first eight months of the year to a level approximately 15 per cent above that of 1935. In fact, the record for the early months of 1931 has been approximated. With the gains in business volume resulting in expanded appropriations, the outlook for the rest of the year is highly promising. Total 1936 advertising expenditures may be expected to run close to 20 per cent above last year.

Retail Advertising Drops 1.8 Per Cent

Chicago, Sept. 24.—For the first time in 29 weeks the continuous gains which have been registered in retail lineage were broken today when a slight loss of 1.8 per cent was shown by the Advertising Age index of retail activity.

The figures, compiled by Advertising Age, national advertising newspaper, show that in the 67 cities, measured retail advertising volume for the week ended September 12 totaled 17,260,469 lines, compared with 17,585,673 lines during the corresponding week of 1935.

The total volume of retail display advertising in the cities measured for the year to date is 611,323,130 lines, an increase of 32,783,232 lines, or 5.7 per cent, over 57,539,898 lines for the corresponding period of last year.

The Market By Carlton A. Shively

A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Irregular in Reduced Volume; U. S. Bonds Soft; French Difficulty Affects Trade.

New York, Sept. 24.—Stocks maintained their irregularity and easy going activity. Sales volume declined to around 1,200,000 shares, the smallest in a week. Government bonds dropped again and second and lower grades were mixed. Gold currencies were held in suspicion. December wheat rallied 1½ cents to 117 cents a bushel.

In both the New York and the London markets the crisis in the French franc appeared to be the overpowering influence, making for less trading activity and some weaker prices for stocks. Speculative interests are inclined to be bearish on the prospect for a devaluation of the franc, less because of what they think will actually follow than because of the uncertainty of the whole affair.

Guessing on Francs.

The stock arguments for and against are well known, and their substance depends largely on the manner in which gold abandonment takes place and the extent of the subsequent devaluation of the franc and other gold block currencies. Those acts will govern largely the amount of capital withdrawals from our own and the London securities and money markets, the effect on foreign trade and on the price of gold.

Before those problems will be solved the question of whether gold will be held on abandoned at this time must be answered. Developments of the day led observers on this side to assume that some action was a little more than probable over the week-end. French law will not permit devaluation right off, and new legislation would in any case delay the setting of a new value on francs. An effective gold embargo nevertheless can be placed at any time, to supersede the unofficial barriers already in place.

Embargo Expected.

Drastic action to prevent Frenchmen from exporting capital or selling gold would stop the operation of the stabilization funds of Great Britain and the United States and would be, in effect, an abandonment by France of the gold standard. It is suggested that, on a French promise not to cut the value of the franc too deeply, Great Britain and this country then might help France in supporting currencies and preventing a general currency debacle.

Steps just taken that increased expectation of early gold abandonment were, first, the lifting of the discount rate by the Bank of France from 3 per cent to 5 per cent. Had the bank recently followed a firmer policy, the higher rate might have suggested a determination to hold to gold, but in spite of heavy gold shipments the bank in the late spring and early summer, by successive cuts, brought the discount rate down from 6 per cent to 3 per cent, carrying out the policy of the new government to "reflate," to give the country cheap money and to permit the government to borrow from the bank in carrying out its heavy expenditure plans.

Enormous Gold Loss.

Since the Socialist-Communist government of M. Blum took power last spring France has lost a net amount of more than $150,000,000 in gold. This week's loss was $55,000,000 and yesterday's engagements were $12,000,000. That was mainly a flight of French capital; probably little of the gold was shipped out because the banks saw a profit in the operation. The Spanish difficulty enhanced nervousness in France and continues to do so. The Bank of France retains a great deal of gold, nearly $3,500,000,000, nearly enough perhaps to protect the currency for a while longer, as circulation is still only $5,500,000,000. However, Frenchmen feel that, as a resource against war, the reserve should not be allowed to go much lower.

Unhappy Comparisons.

Financial difficulties of France are coming to a crisis at a time when there seems to be a concerted effort on this side to instill into the public mind the idea that our own finances are really in healthy condition. Whether they are or not may largely be a matter of the state of the public mind, but unfortunately those who insist the most strongly on the soundness of Government credit feel it necessary to make comparisons with the position of France and Great Britain. Germany is left out for the obvious reason that, although her foreign and domestic debt is negligible in comparison with our own, her financial affairs are in a precarious position.

Germany simply wrote off most of her obligations when the mark was abandoned a few years ago, when later the reparations were shaken off, and when commercial debts were repudiated in part by the sytem of blocked marks. Those who insist that on a per capita basis this country is in far stronger position than France and England in the matter of total debt, carrying charges and national income imply, of course, that those countries have sound credit—that ours merely is sounder.

French Gold.

The Bank of France, which had raised its rate to 6 per cent in May, lowered the rate to 5 per cent on June 24, and to 4 on June 26, following with a cut to 3 per cent July 10. Between June 26 and September 18 the gold reserves of the Bank of France decreased by a net amount of $86,654,100, which has since been lifted to well over $100,000,000. This is a net loss, for in the period France received substantial imports from continental European countries while losing gold to the United States and to England. To this country alone France has shipped to date, since August 7, more than $110,000,000. The present exodus of gold from France began August 7; before that date the French central bank had been able to regain some of the metal it lost in May.

Bankers' Poll.

Somebody polled the bankers on their annual outing at San Francisco to find if they agreed with President Roosevelt's fiscal policy. Six out of ten were reported as having agreed, which is not surprising. The majority of the convention bankers are those from banks (largely small institutions) which have found it quite helpful to have the Government aid them a little, in the way of deposit guarantee, leniency in book value placed on investments, and income from continuous bond flotations. Bankers have never built up an unassailable reputation in this country for their understanding of the currency and of governmental fiscal policies. Be the Roosevelt fiscal policy good or bad, nothing can be proved by a poll of country bankers in convention assembled. They are, after all, now eating out of the Treasury's hand, have few if any teeth, and are disinclined to use what they have.

The Bank of Commerce & Savings was organized in 1907. Its main office is at Seventh and E streets northwest. The bank has made steady progress since its organization. In the latter part of 1934 a branch was opened at H and North Capitol streets. Unusual progress has been made at the branch where, in addition to the residents of this locality, it has among its patrons a large number of the Government Printing Office, Postoffice and Union Station employes.

Dividend Record.

The bank has an unbroken dividend record of 25 years and at the present time is paying a regular dividend of $6 a share and an extra dividend of $4 a share, putting the stock on a $10-a-share annual basis. The stock is listed on the Washington Stock Exchange and the records of the exchange indicate that none of the stock has transferred hands for over three years, although the bid price of the stock has risen since 1933 from $150 a share to $195.

Thomas J. Groom, vice president and cashier of the bank, is first vice president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association. At the next meeting of the board of directors officers for the ensuing year will be elected. The bank has deposits of nearly $3,500,000; capital of $100,000, surplus of $175,000 and undivided profits and reserves of $53,000.

Leopold V. Freudberg, who has represented the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co. for 22 years, has again qualified by production as a member of the Million Dollar Round Table of the National Life Underwriters' Association, and attended and participated in its breakfast conference, in Boston, this week.

FREUDBERG.

He qualified as a life member several years ago by producing $1,000,000 of business anually for three consecutive years. Mr. Freudberg is the only representative from Washington to gain such distinction. The total number of members who have qualified in the Million Dollar Round Table from the entire United States is only 130.

Authority on Incomes.

Freudberg is well-known throughout the city because of his civic, social and philanthropic activities. He is professor of insurance law at the Washington College of Law. He is an authority on the subject of estate, income and business insurance, and is often called in on important cases from all over the country.

Freudberg is a member of the Masonic fraternity, the National and District Bar Associations, National Press Club and is the golf and tournament chairman of Woodmont Country Club.

Secretary P. C. Brady, of the safe deposit section, District of Columbia Bankers Association, announces that the next meeting of the section will be tonight in the board room of the American Security & Trust Co., at 8 o'clock. As this is the first meeting of the season, important matters will be presented for discussion and action. Every delegate is requested to make a special effort to attend.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 24.—Stock prices closed steadier after early weakness, when scattered support entered the market following the increase of the Bank of France discount rate. Setbacks were registered in the industrial group, especially steel and tobacco issues and the oil, mining and transatlantic divisions were also lower. Gilt-edged securities remained quiet, despite the quick oversubscription of the London County Council £10,000,000 loan.

Paris—Anxiety prevailed in the bourse today concerning the continuation of the franc on a gold basis. Industrial securities exhibited general heaviness, while bank and railroad shares sold at higher prices. International issues moved irregularly.

Liverpool—Wheat futures closed higher, the market advancing on reports of dry weather in Argentina and Australia and a better demand from millers. Cotton finished slightly lower, trade calling and scattered buying of distant positions being supplied by hedging at the decline.

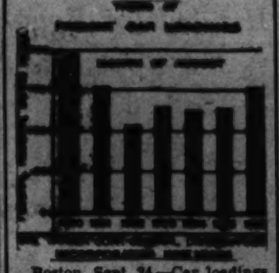
Freight Loadings Rise 19% for Year



Boston, Sept. 24.—Car loadings continue to run high, fast approaching 800,000 cars weekly. The August index now equals 1931, while the actual car loadings gained 19 per cent over a year ago.

With the peak of car loadings still ahead of us, many believe that a shortage of freight cars is in prospect. Some railroads are preparing for this shortage, for in the first eight months of this year 34,000 freight cars were ordered, against only about 18,000 in the entire year 1935.

Increase Reported In Stock of Gold

By the Associated Press.

Reflecting a continued movement of gold from abroad, the Federal Reserve Banks' weekly condition statement showed today that monetary gold stock climbed to a new high level during the week ended September 23.

On that date, the statement reported, monetary gold stocks reached $10,786,000, an increase of $24,000,000 over the preceding week and $1,489,000,000 over the same week a year ago.

Attributable in part to the gold stock rise, member bank reserve balances turned upward $19,000,000 to $6,225,000,000 during the week, or $989,000,000 over the same week a year ago.

A continued inflow of currency after Labor Day was seen in figures showing that mony in circulation dropped $16,000,000 during the week to $6,239,000,000. The latter figure, however, still was $613,000,000 over the same week a year ago.

Engineering Awards Top Six-Year Record

New York, Sept. 24 (AP).—Breaking last week's six-year record, private engineering construction awards rose to $36,823,000 in the week ended Tuesday compared with $3,694,000 in the like week a year ago, Engineering News-Record" said today.

Including public projects, total awards advanced to $68,041,000, the second highest for any week this year and compared with $27,755,000 in the corresponding week of 1935. No large Federal projects were listed.

Bank Clearings Under Figure Of Last Week

Total for Week, However, Is Above Same Date of Last Year.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 24.—Bank clearings in the United States for the latest period fell below the high total in the week preceding.

The amount reported to Dun & Bradstreet, for the week ended September 23 was $5,305,774,000, against $5,040,128,000 for the similar period in 1935, a gain of 5.3 per cent.

New York City settlements dropped to $3,189,792,000, a decline of 20 per cent in comparison with the $3,253,871,000 recorded a year ago. The aggregate at outside centers was $2,115,982,000, a percentage gain of 18.5 over the $1,786,257,000 in the corresponding 1935 week. Individual cities which contributed largely to this increase were Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Baltimore, Atlanta, New Orleans, Chicago, Detroit, Dallas, St. Louis, Louisville, Kansas City and Portland, Oreg. Five of these cities, Baltimore, Detroit, Dallas, Kansas City and Portland, Oreg., exceeded even last week's high totals.

Total bank clearings declined $1,151,210,000 from the amount in the previous week. Between the two comparative weeks in 1935 there was a drop of $806,255,000.

Eastern Air Freight Traffic Is Doubled

Air express carried by Eastern Air Lines in the first eight months of this year more than doubled that carried during the same period last year with a gain of 101.8 per cent, it was announced yesterday by Capt. E. V. Rickenbacker, general manager.

Recognition by Southern packers of perishables of the potentialities of swift shipments was given as a prime reason for this tremendous increase in air freight.

At the same time, gains of 29.8 per cent in air mail carried and of 18.3 per cent in revenue passengers carried for the eight month period over the same period in 1935 were reported.

Coal Loadings Increased.

The National Coal Association, from incomplete car loading reports from the railroads, estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended September 19 as approximately 8,540,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week of 1935, 7,726,000 tons, and in 1934, 7,003,000 tons.

Local All-Stars Prep for Game With Giants

With three weeks of hard practice and one game under their collective belts the Washington College All-Stars, who tangle with the New York Giants next Thursday night at Griffith Stadium, will get another stiff workout tomorrow afternoon when they scrimmage Catholic University at Brookland. The drill will get underway at 2:30 o'clock.

The All-Stars held the Brooklyn Dodgers to a 14-7 score in a recent game, but expect as much competition tomorrow even though it will be a friendly get together. This, incidentally, will be Catholic's first inter-squad scrimmage of the season and Coach "Dutch" Bergman welcomes the opportunity of getting a line on some of the new men under fire.

From all indications the All-Stars will put a team on the field averaging close to 200 pounds next Thursday night. The addition of Bob Stroud, South Carolina tackle, a 210-pounder, and Lloyd Kennon, 230-pound Tulsa star, has sent the weight chart zooming sky-high. Finis Parrish, 185-pound halfback, will be the lightest man on the squad of 20. Eleven weigh 200 or more, and the rest, excepting Parrish, come in between 190 and 200.

One of the least publicized men who may surprise the fans by his work is Chris Mendelis, a guard from St. Thomas College, Scanton, Pa. Like so many others who played with small college teams, Chris has been almost completely overlooked when publicity was dished out, but in the pro game where a man must stand on his merits, Mendelis is more than holding his own. He'll bear watching Thursday.

The All-Stars' starting line-up will be announced early next week.

On the Air Today

The combined networks of the National Broadcasting Co. will be used for broadcasts of the World Series beginning next Wednesday. Columbia also is expected to carry the games (although no statement to that effect has been officially received as yet).

Listeners who have no particular interest in the flood of political oratory now on the air, and none in baseball, can prepare for a dismal week.

Tom Manning will man the mikes again for N. B. C., supported by Ty Tyson, of Detroit. Warren Brown, of Chicago, will fill in with color wordage. The first game will begin at 1:15 next Wednesday. It looks now as though all the games will originate in New York.

Speaking of sports, Arch McDonald is running in third place right now as the people's choice for Nation-wide sports announcing popularity. The poll is taken annually by the "Sporting News" (I believe that is the correct name) and when Arch was in Chattanooga, he won the contest! No one really believes that the sports announcers in Chicago, now in first and second positions, really are better liked than Arch—so the Peoples Drug Co. (for whom Arch does odds and ends of chores) has s placed the "Sporting News" on sale in all stores. Ahem! Get the idea?

WOL is wasting no time in delivering on that promise of airing leading dance bands as a result of its affiliation with the Mutual network, effective tomorrow. The first night of Mutual affiliation gives WOL listeners Nat Brandywine, Joe Senders and Horace Heidt and their orchestras. The first named is not widely known but the record players at WOL feel very kindly toward Brandywine, who has produced some nice discs. WOL will percolate until 1:30 a. m. in order to bring Heidt to its audience.

Mabelle Jennings will do a new street broadcast for WJSV and a network of East Coast stations, Tuesdays and Thursdays, at 1, beginning October 6. Miss Jennings, under the caption of "What's on Your Mind," will query women passersby on topics of clothes, politics, children—or perhaps permanent waves.

Nat Perrine dropped in to visit a moment and be evidence in the flesh that opportunities are available in "local radio." Nat auditioned for Bud Ward's juvenile program in January, 1935. He had a five-piece band and in the summer of '35 got an engagement at Colonial Beach. Last spring he stormed Broadway itself—and landed. He booked his organization for a round trip on the Normandie in September. The boys had a few days in Paris. Now they're hard at work with Ward again planning a radio show of their own. Roger Barss, Carl Martin, Paul Williams and Robert Montgomery, with Perrine, form the band.

Commercialization of the White House Charged at G. O. P. Rally.

What she termed commercialization of the White House by the Roosevelt family was decried yesterday by Miss M. Pearl McCall, former assistant district attorney, in an address to the Federation of Republican Women of Montgomery County at Takoma Park (Md.) Public Library. State Senator Harry W. LeGore, Republican candidate for Representative from the Sixth District, also spoke.

"As a matter of fact, members of the Roosevelt family who are now occupying the White House are the real beneficiaries under the New Deal," Miss McCal said.

She declared the place of the money changers whom President Roosevelt said had been driven from the temple with his advent into office had been taken by members of the Roosevelt family.

"At each vacancy a member of the Roosevelt family moved in," she said. "Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President of the United States, was the first of the tribe to become snugly domiciled in the temple that the President assured us was vacated upon his advent into office. Mrs. Roosevelt, a financial wizard, saw the advantage of such a strategical location and got the jump on all other family contestants. She immediately capitalized her White House connections and entered into contracts for large sums for radio talks, magazine and newspaper articles and for the writing and publication of a book."

Adds Names of Others.

Miss McCall then added the names of Mrs. Delano Roosevelt, mother of the President; Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall Boettiger, daughter of the President, and Elliott Roosevelt, his son, as coining money from writings and talks. She declared the President himself had written two books and that they had been given the advertising backing of his office.

"The only contributions now lacking in the White House are masterpieces from the pens of Sistie and Buzzie," Miss McCall declared amid laughter.

"Crocodile tears and a garden party for the incorrigibles of the National Training School, but no White House invitation for the G. A. R. and other affiliated groups encamped in Washington in the past week," Miss McCall said.

She charged the Roosevelt Administration had caused the death of 12 Army officers flying the mail in an effort to discredit the former Republican Administration through cancellation of air-mail contracts.

Notes Effects on Women.

Senator LeGore said "the women of the country are the ones who understand most keenly the evils latent in the New Deal policy of price-raising. Every time the housewife makes a purchase she measures the effect of the New Deal on her purse. The increased taxes which the New Deal is heaping on an unsuspecting people mean that the American women will have less to spend for clothes, food and other necessities."

LeGore declared the people had enough of Congress granting extraordinary powers and blanket authority to the President. He asserted that "the steady progress of national recovery is hampered by the burden of taxes and shadowed by the fear of inflation." He charged that the cost of government, instead "of falling by 25 per cent as promised in 1932 has risen 92 per cent," and that "every child born today starts life with a debt of $260 on its shoulders."

Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, president of the federation, introduced the speakers. The Takoma Club, of which Mrs. L. V. Lampson is president, was hostess club.

Frank C. Munson, Ship Magnate, Dies

Port Chester, N. Y., Sept. 24 (AP).—Frank C. Munson, 60, president of the Munson Steamship Line, died today in United Hospital of internal injuries.

His car crashed into a pole in Rye early yesterday. The police report said he fell asleep at the wheel while driving home alone to East Port Chester, Conn.

Two patrolmen extricated Munson and took him to the hospital where it was found he had suffered three fractured ribs, a laceration on the forehead and lacerations of the knees.

Munson had been president of the steamship company for 20 years. He was appointed to the War Trade Board by President Wislon in 1917 to represent the United States Shipping Board and served a year. His second wife survives him.

Headaches—Dizzy Spells
Flushes—"Nerves"

These symptoms at 45 are often due to a deficiency in the glandular system of a certain hormone (gland activator)—to relieve such headaches, hot flashes, dizzy spells and "nerves" coming on at 45, try 2 to 3 Zo-ak Tablets 3 times a day as directed on label. These harmless tablets contain the hormone and other helpful substances often prescribed by physicians to relieve the misery of the menopause (change of life) period. Zo-ak Tablets (orange package for women) are sold and recommended by all good druggists who will refund your money in full if you do not feel 100% better after taking Zo-ak as directed.—(Adv.).

New Commander Takes Over G. A. R.

Long-Lived Stock Held Reason for G.A.R. Longevity

The secret of the vitality which enabled veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic to parade up Pennsylvania avenue Wednesday was that most of them probably come from long-lived stock, Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer, said yesterday.

Explaining that he had interviewed several of the old soldiers, some of whom were 90 years or older, Dr. Ruhland said he found that their parents had in some instances lived to be 100.

"There is no greater insurance of living beyond the traditional three score and ten years," he said, "than that of coming from a stock of long-lived ancestors.

"There is, of course, always the hazard of an earlier death from infection or accident, but the odds for a long life are all with the man or woman whose parents and grandparents lived to ripe old ages."

Prisoner Awaiting Trial For Slaying Hangs Self

Port Gibson, Miss., Sept. 24 (AP).—Jack Early, 38, on trial for the killing last February of Joe Lord, a prominent Mississippi planter, hanged himself in his cell in the Claiborne County Jail today.

Early's body was found suspended from a rafter by Deputy Sheriff W. C. Davis when Davis went to the cell to serve the prisoner breakfast. He said Early had fashioned a rope from a bed sheet.

the Mason-Dixon line, came an invitation to the G. A. R. to hold its 1938 encampment there.

C. H. William Ruhe, 87, a drummer boy who ran away at 15, was elected commander in chief to succeed Oley Nelson by acclamation, the first time in the history of the organization there was no contest. Ruhe said:

"It satisfies a lifetime ambition. Almost every soldier in the G. A. R. in his declining years has fastened his eyes on this job. It makes me extremely happy to receive it. I have no idea how much longer we can carry on. Many of us thought this would be the last encampment, but, gosh, we can't quit when we're all feeling so spry."

Fought at Petersburg.

Ruhe lives in Pittsburgh. He fought at Petersburg with the Fourth Pennsylvania Cavalry.

The G. A. R. was rapidly decamping last night. The halls of the Mayflower rang with "Auld Lang Syne;" time-bent old men shook hands with bellboys and climbed into taxis, a few strolled about hoping to find some old battlemate in the closing hours of the encampment. All agreed they had had a mighty fine time and were happy to have had such a noisy welcome in the parade.

"We kind of threw ourselves upon Washington," said the Rev. J. King Gibson, chaplain general. "The city wasn't so anxious to have us here. But we were determined to come, just to march up Pennsylvania avenue again. Once we got here, I think Washington liked us. The parade and reception was splendid."

The Rev. Mr. Gibson, of Dayton, Ohio, was the only officer elected. Others chosen yesterday were Henry F. Russell, Alliance, Ohio, senior vice commander; Thomas M. Ambrose, Illinois, junior vice commander; Dr. E. H. Cowan, Crawfordsville, Ind., surgeon general.

The new commander in chief appointed Samuel P. Towm, Philadelphia, quartermaster general; James W. Willett, Tama, Iowa, judge advocate general; Robert M. Rownd, Ripley, N. Y., inspector general; Katharine R. A. Flood, Newton, Mass., secretary.

Five allied groups have completed their business and will disperse to gather again at Madison with the veterans. Sons of Union Veterans elected William Allen Dyer, of Syracuse, commander for next year, with Perle L. Fouche, of Michigan, and Howard C. Michael, of Baltimore, senior and junior vice president, respectively.

Mrs. Mary Tapleton, Utica, N. Y., was elected chief of staff of the Auxiliary to Sons of Union Veterans, with Mrs. Nettie Hayes, of Milwaukee, and Mrs. Emma Bolt, of Kansas, elected aids.

Maryland Miller Finds Silver on Land

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 24.—The March flood in the Potomac River valley, which just about wrecked the flour mill of F. E. Speck, Pectonville, may make the miller a rich man.

Speck sent the sample to Washington and received word yesterday that it was pure silver.

Now Speck plans to sink a mine at the mill, which is located about 100 yards from Camp Harding, where President Harding, Harvey Firestone, Henry Ford and Thomas Edison camped.

Man Plunges To Death From Penn. Ave. Span

Retired Navy Yard Employe Leaves Note to Family, Dives Into River.

Leaving a farewell note telling his family he was going to end his life, Daniel Clark, 64, a retired Navy Yard employe, of 2234 Minnesota avenue southeast, plunged to his death in the Anacostia River near the east end of the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge shortly after noon yesterday.

Clark had been suffering from a stomach disorder for several months, according to his son, Carl, 27. Feeling his condition was hopeless, Clark told his wife yesterday morning he intended to commit suicide. She was so worried about his condition that when he left home shortly after noon yesterday, going toward the river, she summoned her son and they both followed.

They did not see Clark jump into the water, but found his coat and hat on a post near the seawall beneath the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge. The son called police, who arrived shortly afterward and at 1:15 p. m. a harbor police boat began dragging the river for the body. Clad in brown trousers, a blue-striped shirt and white shoes, the body was recovered with a grappling hook an hour later. Clark was pronounced dead by Dr. Frank Wilson, of the Casualty Hospital staff.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Della Clark; three daughters, Mrs. Harry Bjorkland, Mrs. Harry Meeks and Mrs. Joseph Catalano, and two sons, Quentin Clark and Carl Clark, all of Washington.
